The book containing the list of premiums for Red Lake county fair to be held in Red Lake Falls Sept. 24, 25 and 26, has been circulated. The secretary of the fair association has mailed a copy of the book to the head of every family resident in the county whose name he has been able to learn. If anyone who reads this did not get a book he may get one by making request of A. Robertus, the secretary of the fair association, or by calling at Mr. Robertus' store or at the Gazette office.

The book contains a big list of generous cash premium offers and the farmers and others should study the book in preparing their exhibits for the fair.

Death of Audrey Morissette.

Audrey Morissette, aged twenty years, well known to the people of Red Lake Falls, died July 30 at North Yakima, Wash. He was the son of Peter Morissette, now at North Yakima, and the grandson of Mrs. O. LaFrenicre, with whom he had made his home for several years at Red Lake Falls.

The boy was employed as cook in his father's restaurant and changed from the night shift to the day shift on Monday, having worked from 7:30 Sunday night to 10:30 Monday forenoon, and being tired out he went to his room at a nearby lodging house, intending to report for work at eight the following morning. On Tuesday the landlady at the lodging house telephoned to his father that Audrey was suffering from a severe headache and was unable to work. Mr. Morissette thought little of it at first, but often concerned that he did not report for work for similar reasons, but on Wednesday morning becoming alarmed at the prolonged absence of his son, went to the rooming house to ascertain the cause of his condition. He found him unconscious and though a physician was called immediately all efforts at resuscitation were in vain, death taking place within half an hour.

Funeral services were held at eight o'clock at St. Joseph's church Friday morning and the remains were laid to rest at the Catholic cemetery.

Many beautiful floral offerings were sent, expressive of the sympathy and esteem accorded the deceased and his family.—Contributed.

INSURANCE IN BOTH ORDERS.

Senator Moomaw Explains How this is Possible.

At the special meeting of Wascca Camp, M. W. A., Saturday night, July 26th, Senator John Moomaw, who was chairman of the committee who had the Woodmen bill in charge in the Legislature introduced the members of the camp that the legislature had no objection if a member insured in fraternal insurance in both orders.

The month in which members join the state order does not have a policy in full force and effect in the fraternal order, so that a member should die during that month he would have no insurance. However Senator Moomaw rules as a matter of law that the condition of the law calls the first month may be considered as long as the member does pay assessments in both orders.

There are many changes in the bill that would undoubtedly to the Woodmen advantage. Many members of the camp that the legislature had no objection if a member insured in fraternal insurance in both orders. and that should die during that month he may be considered in good standing in the fraternal order and that nothing in the bill is to the contrary.

The bill calls for the chairman of the senate committee on insurance is expected to fill out the committee to whether members may receive in both orders, and will have the effect of largely increasing the membership of the state order. It is expected that few active Woodmen will want the state insurance, but will prefer to be deprived of the advantages that membership in both orders will give.

It is probable that a state society will be organized some time in September, and it is contemplated to hold the Woodmen state meeting at every day of the fair.

MORE FOR WOMEN AT THIS YEAR'S FAIR

Managers of World's Greatest State Fair Recognize Women's Right to Instruction and Entertainment

Woman of Minnesota and the Northwest will find more comfort, more entertainment and more opportunities for gaining knowledge and information at the Minnesota State Fair this year than ever before.

The managers realize that the State Fair will never achieve the fullest measure of greatness until it more completely attracts and interests women and children. This year they are laying special stress on the demonstrations of special interest to women. They are offering more money in prizes for women's work, have arranged for special educational exhibits, lectures, etc., and are planning on more adequate accommodations for the women and children at the State Fair.

Besides the general displays and amusement offerings that attract and entertain visitors of both sexes, there are three departments or agencies especially designed to interest women. They are the Domestic Science Department, the Rest Cottage and Culinary department, housed in the beautiful Woman's Building where, indeed, the superlative, or Agr. Hort. Dept. Exhibit, over 5,000 articles of especial interest to women will be exhibited, for which $2,615.00 in prizes are offered.

Second—The Rest Cottage: and Culinary departments, housed in the beautiful Woman's Building where, indeed, the superlative, or Agr. Hort. Dept. Exhibit, over 5,000 articles of especial interest to women will be exhibited, for which $2,615.00 in prizes are offered.

Third—The Art and Needle and Culinary departments, housed in the beautiful Woman's Building where, indeed, the superlative, or Agr. Hort. Dept. Exhibit, over 5,000 articles of especial interest to women will be exhibited, for which $2,615.00 in prizes are offered.

Playgrounds, where women and children will be met and cared for, and where the Baby Health Contest will be held. This building and all activities connected with it, will be under the direction of the members of the Minnesota Farm Women's Press Association, supervised by Secretary J. C. Simpson.

Third. The Woman's State Fair Committee is composed of Mrs. F. G. Cowell, from Northern Minnesota, Mrs. Gilbert Gutterson, from Central Minnesota, and Miss Jessie Walkup, from Southern Minnesota. These women, acting under the supervision of Vice President H. F. Stilwell, will assist in all, and will direct special activities that will be of benefit to women. A program of their work is being worked out and will be announced later.

This it will be seen that a complete organization for the promotion of women's interests will make the Minnesota State Fair of 1913 a memorable one.

While there are no large buildings being erected on the Minnesota State Fair grounds this year, there is an unusually large number of repairs and improvements being made that will greatly better accommodations for the exhibitors and more comfort for the visitors. There are over 100 men on the State Fair pay rolls at the present time, and they are working in all parts of the 250-acre enclosure. In all there will be about $45,000 spent, in these small but very important improvements.

CONTINUE NORMAL DEPARTMENT

SPECIAL WORK WILL BE OFFERED AGAIN IN PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

Work in the normal training department of the Red Lake Falls public schools will be offered again the coming school year. Enough young people have enrolled for the work to insure its continuance and a special teacher is to be employed. In order to secure the special state aid for this work the attendance must reach a certain number. It is gratifying that the work is to be continued, since normal training work is to be required of rural teachers in future years and the work of this department is no doubt to eventually have an important place in the local schools.

CREDIT IS DUE TO MINNESOTA

AGITATION FOR LOWER EXPRESS RATES WAS STARTED HERE.

St. Paul.—(Special.)—These are sure tough days for the railroads and allied corporations. First it was the rate decision handed down by the supreme court of the United States and now comes the interstate commerce commission with an order directing a sweeping and heavy cut in express charges. Minnesota was responsible for the first body blow, for which it received due credit, but it is not generally known that the North Star state laid the foundation for the second infliction. It did and $50,000 of the taxpayers' money went into the general pot which furnished the additional commission material and data on which to base its order. No one knows it better than Attorney General Smith, who furnished much of the legal talent figuring in the cases, brought the members of the state railway commission, who supplied the necessary experts to go over the books of the several express companies, and State Senator Sundberg of Kittson county, who lent his name as plaintiff in an action brought by the state against the Wells-Fargo Express company. Later other states joined in the movement and the order as issued by the interstate commerce commission last week was the result. Minnesota has not been given credit for this latest step, but it is entitled to it and for that matter many other things in a legal and legislative way which have made the railroads of the United States subservient to the people's demands.

Persons you are not aware of the fact that a big installment piece of farm machinery was responsible for the order of last week. Senator Sundberg of Kittson county ordered it from the Twin Cities and as it was during harvest time he needed it badly and directed its shipment by express. At the best its value was not over $2.50, and imagine his surprise and anger when it arrived with a charge of over $15 attached. Did he holler? Well, I should say he did, and the holler was so loud that both the attorney general and the railway commission got busy at once. From the state commission Senator Sundberg carried his grievance to the interstate commerce commission and he told every cent of the expense out of his own pocket. Later he lectured the legislature to provide the commission with the necessary funds to start on five-dollar hooking the handling of the necessary data with the national commission. That was just four years ago.

Senator Sundberg, whose home is at Kennedy, in Kittson county, is one of those sturdy Scandinavians who of late years have been breaking into public notice in a way that has brought him particular nationality and national prominence. When he broke into the upper branch of the state legislature little attention was paid to him by the organization. His particular hobby was railroad freight and express rates. In time he came to be regarded as a pest and when one day he asked for an investigation of the roads, which he claimed were gouging the people, the money was gladly voted and he was named as chairman of the committee. The idea was that his attention to his particular hobby would keep him out of other mischief and away from the skirts of the organization, with which he refused to often himself. It worked out right, as the Kittson man did nothing else that session but investigate and the organization congratulated itself on its sagacity. It little realized though, what Senator Sundberg was piling up. With the money which the organization gladly voted the Kittson man piled up a line of investigation which figured both in the rate cases and later in the express overcharges and today the general public is reaping the benefit. Sticking to one thing did it and the people owe a lot to Senator Sundberg. What the organization which looked upon Senator Sundberg as a pest thinks I leave you to figure out.

Speaking of Minnesota's Scandinavian population, and its rapid rise of late years in things political and otherwise, the selection by President Wilson of former Governor John Lind as his personal representative in the adjustment of affairs between this country and strife-torn Mexico cannot but be pleasing to those of his nationality in the North Star state. It was a master stroke on the part of the administration at Washington, as the selection has undoubtedly brought to the support of the president and his followers an element of voting strength that cannot easily be weaned away. It may put Minnesota in the Democratic column. The East and the South have so long dominated things nationally that the selection of any one so far West in a diplomatic matter is looked upon with surprise, but this is easily accounted for when it is known that President Wilson and his chief aid, W. J. Bryan, know Mr. Lind personally and are well acquainted with his worth. It was President Wilson who Mr. Lind, as a member of the Minnesota university board of regents, endeavored to secure as a successor to former President Northrop, while on to Mr. Bryan no one was closer than Mr. Lind. He always espoused his cause and essentially during the administration of the late Governor Johnson, who fought duly of the Commoner at all times.

Speaking frankly, I never liked Mr. Lind, though I admired him. He was cold to a degree. As governor he was a strict partisan, as many Republican officeholders of his time learned to their cost. There was no compromise in his makeup, though perhaps this one thing might be excused, as at the time he guided the ship of state the invariable rule was "to the victors belong the spoils." However, there was nothing of the character about Mr. Lind; he was square at all times and he forced those about him to play the game above board and with all cards in sight. It was said of him that he was always right with his friends, but overlooked nothing when his honor seemed were involved. When making the race for governor the St. Paul Dispatch, for its own keen way, made life a burden for Mr. Lind. It treated him like a pickpocket. Quoting a Dispatch state capitol reporter of that stormy period, Mr. Lind took the Dispatch's attitude quite to heart and he never overlooked a bet in order to get even. How at the close of his term he invaded the editorial rooms of the Dispatch and personally assaulted the managing editor is history. As a contemporary at the time handled the affair, Mr. Lind, for obvious reasons landed with his left. He is minus one hand.

There will be no more mining of lakes to kill mosquitoes, the latter of removing so called rough fish. The state game and fish commissioner at its meeting last week so decreed, all of which is unpleasant news to a score of fish concerns operating in this state. They are out a neat piece of money. At the last session of the legislature, following an investigation of lake mining, a law was passed prohibiting such unless the commissioners of the county in which the lake

BIG CHICKEN CROP

Wild Birds are Said to be More Plentiful Than Usual.

Red Lake county is surely the land of big crops and this year besides producing bountiful crops of grains, vegetables, the farms are going to provide a bumper crop of prairie chickens. The shooting is usually good here, but this year the farmers report that the chickens are much more plentiful than for many years past. It is said that the weather conditions were favorable for the young. Very few, if any, young birds were drowned early in the season. In consequence of all this the sportsmen are anticipating great shooting this fall.

New Work at School.

Miss Grace B. Sherwood, formerly engaged in educational work at Austin, Minnesota, comes to the School of Agriculture at Crookston, September 1st, to teach in the newly organized Normal Training Department, by other members of the faculty in giving courses fitting persons who intend to teach in consolidated rural and village schools. Particular emphasis will be placed upon the preparation of teachers who can handle the work in domestic science and art in consolidated school in connection with some grade work.

This course will prove very popular as it meets a general demand for such training. Certificates qualifying the students to teach will be issued upon graduation from this course.

A circular has been prepared giving full particulars regarding this course. It may be secured by addressing the School of Agriculture, Crookston, Minn.

A fine steel fire is, imperceptible save for the sensation of damp it gave, and the slight haze it diffused through the air. Enlarged by this haze, the building they were set to watch rose in magnified proportions at their left. The yard between, piled high in the center with snow-heaps or other benign covering which can not have been more than forty feet across. The window from which they peered, was half way down this yard, but that a comparatively short distance separated them from the porch where Gorges had been told to look for the man he was expecting to identify. All was dark there, at present, but he could hear from time to time some sounds of restless movement, as the guard pushed aside shifted in his corner quarters, or struck his benumbed feet softly together.

But what came to them from above was more interesting than anything to be heard or seen below. A muffled voice, raised to a wonderful pitch by the passion of ecstasy, had burst the barriers of the closed hall in that towering chief story and was carrying its tale to other ears than those within.

Sweetwater, in whom ,satisfaction was fast taking the place of impatience and regret, pushed the window to before asking Gorges this question:

"Did you hear the voice of the man who took second floor attention the Mermont?"

"Did you note just now the large shadow dancing on the ceiling over the speaker's head?"

"Yes, but I could judge nothing from that."

"Well, ba'e e rum one. I shan't open this window again till he gives signs of finishing the end of his speech. It's too cold."

But almost immediately he gave a start and, pressing George's arm, appeared to listen, not to the speech which was no longer audible, but to something much nearer—a step or movement in the adjoining yard at least, as George interpreted the quick look which Sweetwater directed at the man, and the pains he took to direct George's attention to the soft warning under the window beneath which they crouched. Some one was standing on the porch right under the window, from the alley beyond. A big man, George could see, as he raised the window as he went by. George felt his hand seized again and pressed as this happened, and before—he had recovered from this surprise—Sweetwater had other quick pressure and still another as one, two, three additional figures went slipping by, the first of which suddenly dropped, for a cry had shot up from the door where the sentinel stood guard, followed by a sudden crash and the noise of a dropped gun or belt, which, proclaiming as it did that the keeper was not friends but foes, seemed to the caution which had befallen them. The yard was empty when they saw!

Two men were standing far against the fence leading from the shed directly to the porch. The fourth was coming within the latter, and in another moment they heard his fist descend upon the door and bring in a way to rouse the echoes. Meanwhile, the inmates in the audience had above had ceased, and there could be heard instead the scramble of hurrying feet and the noise of overturning benches. Then a window flew up and a voice called down:

"Who's that? What do you want down there?"

Meeting With Robert Barr

Journey of a Couple to Cologne Was Materially Influenced by the Novelist.

I have a pleasant recollection of Robert Barr, the popular novelist, whose death was recently announced, writes a woman correspondent of the London Chronicle. A relative and I were traveling some years since in Germany, and took the water way to Cologne. Among the number of those who came detouring and hear drinking passengers on the same steamer was one, a man with an eager expression, who had distinguished himself by his eloquence and by his absorption in the passing scenery of the Rhine. I got into conversation by chance with the observer, and the whole route to Cologne was spent in the enjoyment and a living reality to me by the man's comment.

The following day we decided to continue our journey, and again we chose the same steamer, and again we met the man of recollection and observation. I tried, by conversational openings to discover his identity, but he baffled my every attempt with a flood of history and legend of the Rhine. At length the time of parting came. With a sweep of the arm, which included my companion and myself, he said: "I shall hope to see you when you return from this the journey of your lives," and handed me a card, on which was inscribed the name of Robert Barr. "I don't think we can call together," I replied, "for while I, live in London, my brother's home is in the north, and I seldom meet eight of him on his detours to town. "Your brother, then," replied the editor of the letter, "then why the deuce do you both have new inggage?"

Pigmented Beauties.

Pierre de Trevenne, a French writer on fashion, heralds the unexpected triumph of the brunettes over the blondes, who have had a long and popular favor. Who, he asks, could have foreseen the eclipse of the blonde, ejs, so gone! The style of dressing the hair with hand bands has caused this undermining of the golden locks. The meridian rays of the Greek coiffure furnish one to perceive the new growth of hair which has lit- erally put to flight the coronets of the days. All the pigmented beauties have been forced to renounce their chemical preparations. No wind will be see these golden headbands. Chemistry has created many varieties of blondes. We have had the rust blonde of Rubens, the ferruginous blonde, the mahogany blonde beloved of Titian, the complete blonde of Tintoretti and the blonde dear to the Venetians, which is now in vogue under the dyes

INTERESTING WIVES of NEW SENATORS

NEVER before have there been so many new names on the roster of the senate nor so many new faces in congress as this session. Democracy in all the strength of her renovated energy has swept through the halls of congress and moved down the ranks to make room for her loyal sons.

The new arrivals to the senate assume the proportion of a small delegation, for fully fifteen hrend-new solons were in line for the oath on the 4th of March. Of this number five merely stepped over from the house of representatives, while three others have to record years also served that body and are thereby remembered.

Accordingly, society greets new faces in the wives of these men. Like their husbands, a number of them are coming back to the welcoming arms of old friends and have merely to take up the social threads where they dropped them before at the expiration of their official residence to the capital.

No neatorial election, it seems, could give a greater measure of satisfaction in such a large circle of people in Washington as that which returned to congress the former governor of Colorado, John Franklin Shafroth, who has held every office within the gift of the people of his state.

During his congressional service years ago Mr. and Mrs. Shafroth made a host of warm personal friends, who will hail their return with delight. Mrs. Shafroth is described by her friends as a model mother, and, to bear out this assertion, they point to the three sturdy growing sons, all of whom idolize their parents.

Mrs. Shafroth is a genuine home lover and a domestic genius, delighting in her home and little details, especially in cookery, for she loves to try her hand at all sorts of her recipes and experiments. She is an artist in the culinary line, but she is also a woman of varied accomplishments and wide interests.

She belongs to a number of clubs in Denver, of which the Round Table has perhaps had her membership the longest, since she has been enrolled as an active member for more than nineteen years. This club meets every Friday morning and its members actually study. History, literature, the classics, philosophy and all of the current topics of the day are embraced in their research. No dinners or luncheon numbers are encouraged to remain.

Mrs. Shafroth was born and reared in Fayette, Howard county, Mo., and, after completing her high school course became a student of and afterward a graduate of the Missouri State University of Fayette, Mo. For several years prior to her marriage she taught in the high schools of her home town. Mr. Shafroth is also a native of Fayette, Mo., and their marriage occurred there. She is eligible in D. A. R. membership, through Virginia and Tennessee ancestry.

Like Mrs. Shafroth, Mrs. Ollie James is an stranger to Washington society, for she has spent several years at the capital during her husband's congressional service. Mrs. James was Miss Ruth Thomas of Marion, Ky., the home town of Senator James, and was born at Franklin, Ky. She is the daughter of a Methodist minister. Her earlier education was obtained in private schools, after which she attended the Kentucky college, a co-educational institution, now out of existence.

Her marriage to Senator James occurred about ten years ago, in December, at her home in Marion, Ky. Mrs. James is to every sense of the word a thorough home lover. She belongs to no club nor societies of any description and devotes practically all of her time to domestic life.

Mrs. James is greatly interested in charitable projects, particularly those which deal with the sick and afflicted, and she hopes to engage in philanthropic work among the institutions of the capital. She is a woman highly gifted in mind and out, for she does many things well and knows whereof she speaks with regard to a theory of accomplishments of a practical as well as an ornamental nature. She has made a study of scientific homekeeping, could make her own dresses, if she chose, and, in fact, has the science of housekeeping reduced to an art.

When asked about club work she exclaimed, "Not a one! Why, I don't belong to any! I suppose I am the only woman in Washington who has not learned to do so, but you really would not expect a minister's daughter to be expert in that line, would you?"

Mrs. James is also devoted to children and a close student of various movements in progress for their welfare. She is an advocate of higher education for girls, but says that if she were planning the education of a girl she would assuredly advise a technical course in addition to the academic, for the girl of practical mental endowment to take it, thus supplying the knowledge to combat any emergency which life might unfold. The more varied the knowledge and training the better fitted the girl is for domestic life, as well as for the social and business world.

Mrs. Harry Lane, wife of the new senator from Oregon, has the distinction of being one of the few women of Washington who are registered voters. She is an enthusiastic suffragist, though in an unobtrusive way, and is particularly jubilant over the fact that her home state has joined the band which allows women the privilege of the ballot.

Mrs. Lane came to Washington as an absolute stranger, and is becoming more and more delighted with the city and people as she gets better acquainted with them. She is a typical American home-maker, but, while the details of housekeeping and the care of her family have absorbed the greater part of her life, she has always been deeply interested in the uplift and social welfare of girls and women. Indeed, it was the great desire to further the cause of woman suffrage hopes to confer upon the working classes that first drew her attention to that movement.

While never an active club member, Mrs. Lane has been much absorbed in club work as well as charitable work, and will in all probability take up some of it in the capital. She is a woman whose life has been devoted to worth-while projects. In her home city every movement that has had the betterment of women and children for its primal object has enjoyed her indorsement and support. And no little of the success which attended the efficiency of his various public offices is due to his wife's interest and cooperation. As a great deal of her success as wife and mother, her family are her staunchest admirers.

Mrs. Lane was Miss Lois Bailey, and was born in Milwaukee, Ore., about six miles from Portland. She and Dr. Lane were childhood sweethearts, and were married in Portland about thirty years ago.

They have two grown daughters, one of whom, Mrs. N. Machride, resides in New Orleans, while Miss Harriet is with her parents. She also has a son in Milwaukee, Ore., about six miles from Portland. She and Dr. Lane were childhood sweethearts, and were married in Portland about thirty years ago.

Dr. Lane is classed as one of the "baby senators." In addition to belonging to the same family as the secretary of the interior, he is a grandson of Gen. Joseph Lane, who ran on the presidential ticket with Breckenridge and who also was a senatorial type, besides being territorial governor of Oregon and the delegate to congress.

Dr. Lane has filled the office of mayor of Portland and also that of superintendent of the state insane asylum. He succeeds Jonathon Bourne and shares the honors of the medical profession with Senator Dallinger, who for years has been the only doctor with a seat in the upper house.

Mrs. Lane is the wife and successor to Joseph W. Bailey of Texas has the distinction of being the youngest of all of the wives in the senatorial circle. Though the very dignified and sedate mother of a lively little daughter of two years, Mrs. Morris Sheppard is but twenty-two years old.

She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. N. P. Sandercox of Texarkana, the home town of her husband, where she was born. Texarkana, as every one knows, is a dual township, as is expressed in its name. Mrs. Sheppard was born on the Arkansas side. While she had always known her husband, since he was a friend of her father, their romance had its beginning in Washington while she was completing her studies in a seminary here.

Her earlier education was obtained in the local schools at home, for the higher branches she entered the Randolph Macon Woman's College at Lynchburg, Va., where she spent two years, after which she came to the Washington seminary.

Despite her youth, Mrs. Sheppard possesses a lengthy list of accomplishments. She is expert in the needlework and hand embroidery on her baby's little garments bear positive testimony. She is a pianist of no small ability, and also a vocalist, pleasing to continue the study of voice culture in the future. She is also a constant reader and a profound student of politics, which, she declares, she finds most fascinating. Her interest in political matters was naturally much enlarged in the senator's recent campaign, during a goodly part of which she accompanied him.

Besides being sufficiently interested to invent and use new methods advocated for improvement in housekeeping, pure food and home management, Mrs. Sheppard has recently become a member of the D. A. R. She is a member of the Confederated Texas and also of the Democratic league.

Another senatorial hostess who is no stranger to Washington is Mrs. Joseph R. Ransdell of Louisiana, whose husband has been in congress for the past fourteen years. Mrs. Ransdell comes of a distinguished southern family, and was Miss Olive Irene Pavell before her marriage, which occurred November 15, 1882, at her birthplace, Lake Providence, La.

She is a member of the D. A. R. through the records of her great great-grandfather, Gen. Evan Shelby, and his son, Capt. Moses Shelby. Her grandfather, M. de Lafayette Shelby, fought in the battle of New Orleans in 1814 and five of his sons served through the Civil war. Mr. de Lafayette Shelby was named for the famous French general by his intimate friend and companion, Capt. Moses Shelby, one of the heroes of Kings Mountain. She is a great advocate of universal peace and a member of the D. A. R. international peace arbitration committee of her native state.

Mrs. William Howard Thompson of Kansas brings to Washington a personality which radiates the wholesome energy and animation of the west. She is virtually a stranger, though she has visited the capital before to her travels.

Though protesting that she has never been much of a "joiner," Mrs. Thompson has a rather generous collection of club organization memberships.

Mrs. Thompson was Miss Bertha Felt, daughter of the lieutenant governor of Kansas. She was born in Washuna, Iowa, and was married almost out of high school, for she was graduated in June and married in August. Since then Mr. and Mrs. Thompson have resided in Topeka and Garden City, Kan. They have three children, Thelma Bertha, aged eighteen; Wilbert Felt, aged fourteen, both of whom are at present in school, and a baby boy of two years, William Howard, Jr., who is his parents and who, with the little daughter of Senator Sheppard, is the youngest of the senatorial children.

The children's education has been the chief moment. But temperance is a current crase, Barley water in special "brews" may be found at the Carlton and Bachelors' clubs.

A few smart men drink plain, cold water, among others Sir Arthur Wahl and Lord Charles Beresford. The Sing has other tastes in his cellar, and among elder drinkers are the duke and duchess of Teck, the Duchess of Leeds, Lord Knollys and Lord Stamfordham. Those in middle age are Admiral of the Fleet Sir John Fisher, Lord Charles Beresford, Sir Ralph Paget, Lord Esher, Sir Evelyn Wood, Sir Hallo and Lady Jeune.

Mrs. Herman Oelrichs the other day ordered her chauffeur to run down a newspaper photographer who tried to take her picture at Newport. But our illustration is evidence that not all the society folk at the fashionable resort are afraid of the camera. The ladies, from left to right, are Mrs. Herbert M. Harrison of New York; Mrs. Clarence W. Dolan, Miss Rose Dolan and Miss Alexandria B. Dolan, the three last being prominent in Philadelphia society. In the background is seen the exclusive Bailey's Beach at Newport.

Fashion Leaders Demand the Expensive Rare Variety.

Custom House Figures for Recent Months Show Increased Imports of Rare Gems—Dealers Discount the Duties.

New York.—The high cost of living has not decreased the demand of the American people for diamonds and other precious stones. The imports of gems to the United States in the fiscal year ending with June will amount to more than $50,000,000, according to an estimate made by a Maiden lane authority, who bases his prediction on the total gem receipts at the port of New York in the first eleven months.

The appraised value of the diamonds and other precious stones that have already passed through the New York custom house is $45,685,230, record-breaking figures for a similar period in any year. The figures for this year are estimated at $50,000,000.

Fear on the part of the big New York gem importers that they will have to pay a higher duty on stones under the new tariff bill has caused them to mail in large quantities of diamonds and other precious stones since the passing of the bill became known. In May the receipts totaled $4,806,323, record-breaking figures for that month, and by April 28,382,651 worth of gems passed through the appraisers' stores. The figures for March reached $4,241,179. February receipts totaled $4,399,485, and in January $5,886,365 was the appraised value of the gems imported. Under the present tariff schedule all precious gems are dutiable at ten per cent, and there is no duty on the rough product. The Underwood bill, provides for a duty of 10 per cent on cut and 10 per cent on uncut gems. The New York gem merchants, working through their association, are fighting for a retention of the present schedule.

In the fiscal year which ended on June 30, 1912, the importation of gems to New York amounted to $39,445,582, of which amount the cut precious stones and pearls are reported by Jewelry Examiner William B. Treadwell at $29,281,594, and the uncut stone, principally diamonds, at $10,163,491. In 1911 the total reached $33,378,243 and in 1910 $30,000,000. Appraisal records read made when the receipts were $46,852,697, the imports in 1907 were $41,112,271 and in 1906 $38,000,000. These are the only fiscal years which have reached the $40,000,000 mark.

There has been a tendency on the part of the De Beers Consolidated Mines to increase the price of the rounds during the year now ending, thereby causing a higher price for gems suitable for the American market.

There has been a considerable increase in the demand for colored stones, sapphire, Ceylon sapphires of 10 and 12 carats have brought as much as $600 to $650 a carat, which is an enormous increase in price since the beginning of the year. These gems are the most fashionable just now, and it is predicted that fine sapphires will be in great next in demand as if they do not increase in value, as the reason given for this is that there are no fine sapphires coming to the market and that the reserve stock is being offered at high prices.

The demand for fine pearls has been unprecedented in the last year, and there are years in which fine pearls of this kind offered to American buyers. The increase in the price of these gems has been phenomenal. Arthur Wahl, a New York gem dealer, considering recently for Europe, said fine large pearls from 16 to fifteen grains in weight have advanced at least 25 per cent in the last fifteen years, and exceptionally fine pearls have shown a much greater increase. He said that the reason for the increase in value is that the fine ones have become very scarce. He said that in the last five years there has not been an average yearly production of more than $10,000,000 worth of pearls from all the fisheries, while much more than that amount is paid by the wealthy for fine pearls in New York each year.

Dublin.—Lady Aberdeen, on the occasion of a brilliant reception here for the American commission on agriculture which is now in Ireland, interested the visitors in her latest project. She is establishing in Dublin in a fine old Georgian mansion the Welcome club, for the reception of Irish visitors from America. At the club travelers from the new island can get information telling them how to make the most of their sojourn in Ireland.

The club will be opened formally next month by the American ambassador, but Lady Aberdeen caused the American commissioners to visit the club and enroll themselves as original members of the organization.

The night reception was a beautiful and impressive affair. It was held in St. Patrick's hall in Dublin castle, the scene of many state balls. All the gay uniforms of the Irish officials and military made a effective contrast to the plain black of the Americans. Women presented as the guests of honor always carry to the lord lieutenant the same as to a king, but the American women bowed and shook hands in democratic fashion.

ACCUSES SON OF AN ASSAULT

Montclair Man Had Ax in Hand When Arrested—Mother Goes to Hospital.

Montclair, N. J.—Mrs. John McKee, who lives in the Upper Montclair section, appeared in the Montclair police court to make a charge of assault against her son John, twenty-seven years old. Mrs. McKee said her son attacked her in their home after they had quarreled about domestic affairs. Neighbors, summoned the police, who found McKee with an ax in his hand. Mrs. McKee had a fractured arm, a black eye and cuts and bruises on her face. McKee resisted arrest, but was taken to police headquarters after a struggle.

The man was sent to jail to await trial in default of one thousand dollars bail.

Mrs. McKee was removed to Mountainside hospital. According to the records of the Montclair police department, McKee has been frequently arrested for disorderly conduct and has always pleaded for leniency for him.

Manchester.—"It is no crime to drink beer or whisky on one's own doorsteps," said Judge Pugh in a recent here, dismissing Robert Lee, charged with violating the new excise law. The prisoner was found by a policeman who were on the sidewalk, when the arrest was made. "Yes, but most of Mr. Lee was on his own doorstep," replied the court.

POLO AN OLD GAME

Sport Popular in Persia Under Name of "Chaugan."

Woman Played in Early Times, According to an Old Painting Now in British Museum—Started in 600 B. C.

New York.—When polo was first played in England in 1869 it was styled "hockey on horseback." Yet hockey itself was one of the numerous games with stick and ball derived from the common ancestor, polo.

They called it "chaugan" in the days when the sport was popular with the Persians. As far back as the sixth century B. C. this sport of the Persian aristocracy was in a flourishing condition. The ancient Persian poets sang the praises even as do the sporting writers today. The game was played by Persian women, too. In the British museum there is an old painting of several Persian ladies playing a game of polo. The painting shows that the Persians bandaged the legs of their mounts exactly as the polo ponies are bandaged today.

The historians state that when they conquered Persia, learned the game of "chaugan," and liked it so much that they took it up for one of their own sports.

The game traveled from Persia to Tartary, and there to India via Afghanistan. Chinese historians tell how the games bearing a close resemblance to it, in fact, throughout the entire east, polo was the principal game. It derived its present name from the "pulu", of the Tibetan word, meaning a willow ball.

Among the natives of India the game was "hukah," and was introduced into England, after having been brought to Calcutta by English army officers. The first lancers played the first polo match in England in 1871. Probably on great interest taken in the sport by the English public without any importunate were made in the rules. From eight men on a team the number of players was gradually reduced to four.

The style of play changed also. At first the ball was thrown into the center of the field and a free for all game ensued, their horses to the center of the field. Then it was changed so that the teams lined up as they do today. The sport then became popular in Blighton, and in 1874 the Hurlingham club, now the representative polo club in England, was formed.

Polo was introduced into the United States in 1876, when the game was played at Dickie's riding academy. Two polo clubs were organized, the Westchester Polo club, in 1877, and the Rockaway Polo club. In 1879, in the first match played in this country, on the Westchester park, Brooklyn, the Westchester team defeated the Rockaway team. The Tuxedo Meadow Brook club was started in 1881.

Idaho Wants Game Preserve.

Boise, Idaho.—Idaho is negotiating with the federal officials for a national game reserve of 50,000 acres of land in the Sawtooth national forest. The negotiations have been opened with the state department at Washington. Senators Borah and Heyburn have conferred with Secretary and Smith. The aim is to stock the reserve with elk from Jackson hole, and to plant it with trout. Already a Spotsman say that Idaho must take immediate steps to set aside large reserves like that proposed for the Sawtooth forest in order that game in this state can be kept from becoming extinct.

SMALL BOY LITTLE CHANGED

Incident of Seventy Years Ago Proves That He Was Then as Irrepressible as Now.

The small boy of today is often credited with a predilection for saying the wrong thing in the presence of an honored guest. The following true incident shows that he also had to be reckoned with more than seventy years ago.

In "le pioneer days of Michigan, Deacon Brewster was noted for his large family and his hospitality. One day Elder Allen, the circuit rider, young, good looking and, moreover, a bachelor, arrived at the deacon's at time for dinner. Presently a boisterous meal appeared upon a board rather scantily furnished, it must be owned, with certain necessities in the way of tableware. After all were seated and the blessing, Miss Betsy, the eldest daughter, thinking to apologize, blushingly began:

"The sorry I couldn't find a better knife for you, Mr. Allen. The children carry them out to dig with, you see, and forget to bring them back."

"Why-y Betsy!" piped Johnny's shrill voice, "they're all here. The elder's got No-Handle, dad has Butcher, and mammy, Sich! Well just have to take turns eating, with the rest of us."—Woman's Home Companion.

SENATORIAL REPRESENTATION.

Frank Day's paper, the Fairmont Sentinel, says that the state senate should be made up of one senator for each county. It is indeed unfortunate that the state constitution when drafted did not so provide. In that case there would have been no apportionment problems to solve.—Red Lake Falls Gazette.

No, there would be no re-apportionment problem, so far as the senate is concerned, for the legislature would solve that, we are of the opinion that such a provision would make a lot of trouble. Wouldn't it be a bonanza for the promoter of county division and the owners of new townsites prepared for county seats? If the constitution contained such a provision, the politicians, at least of Duluth would probably cement to the division of St. Louis county. And when the county division game got to going properly, each of the big counties of the northern part of the state would split up into three or four. Then the fur would fly, and Fillmore, Freeborn and even Dodge and Steele would follow suit, and jointly themselves on the ground that the west of the north had more patronage in the state in proportion to their numbers than had the rest of the south. What need of the third senator? That every township would have a senator—which would necessarily double the size of the state capitol to provide a place for the senators to meet.—Warren Register.

In condemning the one senator for a county idea the Register has called attention very forcibly to the very effective way in which the plan of operation would be a solution of the reapportionment problem. Senatorial apportionment would be accomplished automatically. As the large counties in northern Minnesota increase in population and wealth they will in the natural course of events be divided into smaller counties and senatorial representation would be there without legislative enactment or jobbery. This division of counties will come about no matter by what methods reapportionment problems are solved, so it would scarcely be consistent to charge any opposition to the present plan with responsibility for county division.

It is a fact that public business is conducted more economically in small counties than in large counties and the division of large counties into smaller ones is not an inadvisable undertaking when the population and wealth of the smaller territory will warrant the change. There is a safeguard in the existing limitation that no county may have less than a given limitation of territory. If the one senator for a county idea is right the presumption of a possibility that it may encourage county division is not a logical argument against it.

The one senator for a county idea has been advanced because it is as nearly theoretically perfect as seems possible under our form of government, being analogous with the plan of limiting the number of United States senators to two from each state. Each new state comes into its full representation in the United States senate without question and the plan has never been accused of being unfair. There is no doubt that if the state constitution when adopted had provided that each county should have one senator the plan would have worked as satisfactorily in that governing representation in the national senate.

However, it is scarcely possible that the state constitution will ever be amended to bring about such a radical change, desirable as it may be. For that reason the adoption of the seven-senators plan seems to be the safe and practical solution of the reapportionment problem, since it carries out the idea of limited senatorial representation as far as may be practical under present conditions. Perhaps the Register does not find in the seven-senators plan the grave danger of successful county division campaigns.

THE DOGS OF WAR.

"In my deliberate opinion there is now an organized and syndicated effort to bring about war between the United States and Mexico, organized with a lobby here, and organized and syndicated through newspapers with money behind it, and not all of it Mexican money."

This statement made the other day by Senator John Sharp Williams, the democratic leader, and supported by a number of republicans as well as democrats in the senate, is an interesting contribution to the current discussion of the Mexican situation.

It is no doubt the deliberate opinion of many people who have been more or less considering what may produce the talk of possible unfriendly relations between the people of this country and Mexico, that the cause may be selfish rather than patriotic.

There is no doubt that much American capital has been invested in Mexican real estate, invested "with malice aforethought" with the idea of speculating on the chance that eventually Uncle Sam would send his soldier boys down to shoot up the natives and that this country would eventually take control of the situation.

People are not so keen on the war game as they used to be; they consider more seriously the means of securing the killing game than they did at the time there was a war with Mexico that might have been avoided. Uncle Sam is getting far too big a boy to be continually carrying a dirty chip on his shoulder that some one may bump into and on the least provocation and knock it off.

There is a good chance that a lot of young men will not be sent to Mexico to be shot up that a few American dollars, or a few million, may be returned several fold to their investors.

COME ON KIDS, LET'S GO!

There Will Be a Hundred Things to See and Do and It Won't Cost You a Cent.

Monday Sept. 1st, will be children's Day at the Minnesota State Fair, and a number of special events are being planned for the entertainment of the little folks. Children between the ages of six and fourteen will be admitted to the fair grounds free, when accompanied by parent or guardian. It is planned to have a program of games, contests, etc., especially for the children on Monday morning, in the Coliseum, the Live Stock Pavilion. Judging of the horses and cattle does not begin until Monday afternoon, and the managers will form the big building over to the enjoyment of the diminutive visitors. The buildings have been improved and new seats installed, and will make an ideal place for games and exercises as well as for the grown-ups who will want to watch the fun.

One of the features of the morning's program will be the State Spelling Contest, which will be taken part in by representatives of a large number of counties. There is much interest attached to the local spelling bees, the winners of which will take part in the spelling down ceremonies at the State Fair.

Cautious.

His Turn.

"Ps, I heard ma tell her friends that her silk gown came from a worm. Now it's from another one."

"So I was the worm, eh? Well, just tell her the worm has turned."

"Why do you hate so tight when Clinker comes around?" "Oh, the poor fellow's sore a-ad about."

MEN WHO ARE RESPONSIBLE

Everybody knows that the world's greatest state fair is held annually on the Minnesota State Fair grounds at Hamline, Minn. There are many reasons why this is the greatest state fair in the world. One of them is the character of the officers and board of managers. It is a matter of general interest, therefore, to know who are responsible for the success or failure of the state fair. A list of the officers and managers follows:

President, C. P. Furbing, Litchfield; first vice president, B. J. Stilwell, Minneapolis; second vice president, E. S. Wangen, Hamline; asst. secretary, M. B. Harrison, Hamline; treasurer, A. H. Turrittin, Sauk Rapids. Board of managers: George Aschenbrenner, Hamlin; W. W. Streight, Hutchinson; Robert Cummings, Owatonna; C. P. Craig, Duluth; F. W. Murphy, Wheaton; Thos. H. Canfield, Lake Park.

RABIES IN CATTLE

By M. H. REYNOLDS, Veterinarian, University Farm, St. Paul.

Veterinarians are very frequently asked as to the danger from milk, flesh or meat of rabid cattle. The experience and observations of many authorities indicate that there is slight, or almost no risk, from milk consumed in the ordinary way. It is generally believed that there is only one slight produce rabies in case of a distinct history of absence of the mucous membrane lining the mouth, nose, intestines. It might be possible, also, for milk to cause rabies. The danger to very young infants, on the other hand, from consuming milk during the digestive tract of the infant is less evident, as the specific infection that in case of older people.

Actual experience shows, however, that such infection is very rare. Even in connection with an abraded mucous membrane, the danger from milk or parts must be exceedingly rare.

It has been shown by experiments that dogs may be fed the brains of a rabid dog, or milk from a rabid cow without injury, if the infection gland, for example, be mixed with the feed so as to prevent the animal swallowing it. Rabies may be produced in the dog by such feeding of either brain or milk. Experiments have shown that the danger from virulent blood is exceedingly small, even when injected hypodermically, for two or three days (it loses virulence in such an extent that it is probably not dangerous. However, if blood or brain substance in any considerable quantity is swallowed it will retain virulence for a long time. It is found that such meat is capable of causing dangerous virulence at room temperature more than two or three days after it has been thoroughly cooked.

There is ordinarily little or no danger from eating meat from a rabid cow or steer, because the virus is destroyed by the digestive juices of the mouth, and because the chance of infection by inoculation is an slight.

'FARM BIRD BULLETIN.' 8

Colored Plates and Interesting Information Free to All Applicants.

Do you like bird pictures in natural colors? Do you realize the great benefit of value to your farm and orchard these birds bring interest you, you will certainly want the new farm bird bulletin 813, recently issued from the United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

Special stress as an estimated loss of $700,000,000 a year to agriculture in products now. A long study of the food of birds shows that the loss would be much greater were it not for our feathered friends. It is only even the hawk and owl spend most of their time in pursuit of insects, mice and other injurious animals. The stomach of one bird examined contained 1,200 weevils. Another, 1,000 bees. Still another, 1,000 cutworms, which make it appeal to all children and bird lovers from six to sixty.

TO CAN PIEPLANT.

Best Method is to Cook it in Moderately Hot Oven.

Wash and cut tender young pieplant into inch-and-a-half lengths. Select a granite pan of the desired size, put a layer of the pieplant in the bottom, cover with sugar, add another layer of pieplant, another of sugar, and continue in this manner until all is used, having sugar on top. Put in a moderately hot oven and bake until pieplant is tender. Put into sterile jars and seal. The proportion of sugar to fruit is a matter of taste. Do not stir pieplant while it bakes the pieces of pieplant and give the appearance of jelly.

Pieplant canned in this manner is much superior to that cooked on the top of stove.—Mary L. Bull, Domestic Science, University Farm, St. Paul.

Jobber or Commission Man?

Which Has Sold Your Farm Products?

Fifteen or twenty years ago practically all farm products sent to the cities were handled by certain dealers on a commission basis. At that time poor storage facilities, as well as delays and breakage of the road, made the risks in handling such produce very great. Few dealers at the primary markets were, therefore, willing to buy outright and so local shippers were compelled, at their own risk, to send such produce to commission merchants.

The free field afforded the early commission merchant tended to encourage all sorts of illegal practices. They had things almost their own way. Local shippers were not in a position to prove that they had been unfairly treated and were, therefore, for a long time the victims of grave abuses.

Two things have tended to change this situation. One of these was the aid of a law passed fourteen years ago. Under that law every commission merchant dealing in farm products must obtain a license from the railroad and warehouse commission and file with the secretary of state a bond to the state for the benefit of consignors. Abuses connected with grain shipments were especially instrumental in bringing about the passing of this law. It was alleged that grain received in the morning when the price was quoted at, say 70 cents, might go up in price during the day to 71 or 72 cents, but that the commission merchant would return a statement to the local shipper for the earlier figure and pocket the difference. The new law, therefore compelled commission men to indicate the exact minute and hour when grain sales were made. While the law applies to all commission men handling farm products, the "grain provision regulations of said statute only to grain dealers.

While the records of the Minnesota commission men out of the business, there is another factor that has affected commission business even still more. That is the coming of the jobber who either sends agents into the local towns to buy outright or who sends out printed quotations to the effect that he solicits offering a definite price for different kinds of farm produce before certain dates. Other things being equal, local shippers prefer to sell outright rather than ship on commission and for this reason the jobbing business has tended to displace that of the commission man in the handling of butter, eggs and poultry, as well as all other kinds of perishable products. The commission man still holds the field in the handling of grain and live stock.

Although the commission business has been largely supplanted by that of the jobber, the same dealer may operate at times as a commission man and at other times as a jobber. The importance of jobbing or commission business at any given time varies a great deal with changes in price. During the period of rising prices, jobbing is encouraged, since the buyer hopes to resell at still higher price. When prices are falling, however, the jobber is apt to hold back. He may be unwilling to receive at all except on a commission basis and thus shift the risks to local shippers. The result is that when prices are steady or rising, jobbing business is encouraged while falling prices tend to revive the commission method of handling certain farm products.—W. Thiliman, Agricultural Economist, University Farm, St. Paul.

INVOLVES LIFE OF MONROE DOCTRINE

REPORTED BRITISH NAVAL PLAN &TIRS UNITED STATES OFFICIALS

BERMUDA ISLAND NAVAL BASE

If England Establishes Such, Straits See Complete Revolution in Foreign Naval Policy in West—Effects Canal.

Washington, Aug. 6.—Interest has been aroused in official circles here by a report reaching the state department that Great Britain is contemplating establishing a great naval base in the Bermuda Islands.

It is stated authoritatively that the British government has made inquiry concerning the plans of the United States for the protection of the Panama canal routes, and it has been suggested that this indicates an intention to safeguard British shipping through the isthmus as is done in the Mediterranean.

Involves Big Problem.

Officials realize that the problem raised in a tremendous one, involving as it may, the very life of the Monroe Doctrine and marking perhaps a complete revolution in foreign naval policy in the Western hemisphere.

For it is expected that if Great Britain changes her naval policy in American Atlantic waters, other European nations probably will follow suit. While these changes may be expected in the Atlantic water and the West Indies officials likewise realize that with the opening of the canal, the United States must contend with Japan for the domination of the Pacific.

The British navy very abandoned its naval stations in this country about 10 years ago, when the United States gave up the idea of the construction of the Nicaraguan canal, and set about digging the big waterway across Panama, whose approaching completion bids fair to revolutionize international relations.

British Claim Islands.

By way of looking out for future contingencies at the Pacific terminal of the Panama canal, the British claim ownership of Clipperton island, probably the finest deep water harbor in that part of the Pacific ocean.

While Great Britain, is thus asserting itself officials here remember how long Germany has looked with wistful eyes at the Danish West Indian island of St. Thomas, which occupies a strong strategic position in relation to the Panama canal.

American naval strategists have always favored the acquisition by the United States of the Danish possessions which Germany would have undertaken over years ago but for American objections. That there is the Dutch island of Curacoa, where the Germans made themselves at home during the blockade of the Venezuelan ports in 1902. Diplomatists at the state department as well as naval strategists realize that the determination of the future ownership of these islands is one of the important questions confronting the United States.

WIDE LEGISLATIVE ACTIVITY

EXTENDS FROM DISTRICTS OF SOLONS TO WHITE HOUSE.

Democratic Simplicity of the Present Administration Ridiculed in Letter.

Washington, Aug. 7.—From the files of the National Association of Manufacturers came the details of legislative activities of the widest range, extending from the home districts of congressmen clear throughout the country, to the White House and the capitol. The activities shown by investigators pursuant their probe by an subcommittee of former Senator Joseph B. Foraker of Ohio, the house committee got under way and placed on record a hundred letters from the files of James A. Emery, chief counsel for the National Association of Manufacturers.

Every attempt made to influence the selection of the labor and judiciary committees of the house, the discussions of the possibility of coupling currency legislation with the tariff bill at the present session of congress, from conversations with Majority Leader Oscar Underwood of the house, to letters and telegrams to Presidents Wilson and Taft the correspondence covered every field of public policy and legislative practice.

Frankly and plainly Emery on the stand acknowledge that he had recommended a compensation of $5,000 to procure Representative Buchanan of Illinois for re-election, or told of personal interviews with Senators and members of congress in his attempts to influence the naming of committees or to prevent the enactment of legislation urged by organized labor.

The correspondence suggested a bitter feud between the National Association of Manufacturers and the American Federation of Labor in an attempt to secure control of the legislative agencies of the government.

Discussing the recent Lawler civil bill with its provision prohibiting the expenditure of certain funds for the prosecution of farmers' and laborers' unions under the Sherman law, Emery wrote to President Nicholas Ripley, jr., of the association on March 7, 1912, after President Taft had vetoed the bill:

"I went to emphasize as hard as I can the importance of lining up for tremendous demonstration in the bill reaches President Wilson, as it undoubtedly will the same opposition in it.

"You will then have an early opportunity to decide whether the gifting Democratic party, with equal rights for all and special privilege for none," means anything, or whether the administration has surrendered completely to or will merely turn over the departments of labor."

SENTENCE FIVE W. VA. SOLONS

CONVICTED OF BRIBERY AND CIVEIL PRIBCN TERMS.

In Addition, Are Disqualified for Life From Holding Office of Trust.

Webster Springs, W. Va., Aug. 6.—Sentences have just been imposed on the members of the West Virginia legislature by Judge W. S. O'Brien, of the circuit court of Nicholas county. They were convicted of bribery in connection with the election of a United States senator exactly a year ago.

The sentences follow: Delegates S. U. O. Rhodes, Ruth Duff and H. C. Asbury, six years each in the penitentiary; State Senator B. A. Smith, five years six months, and Delegate Davis Hill, five years.

In addition the five are disqualified for life from holding any public office or office of trust.

The sentencing of the legislature came shortly after Delegate Davis Hill, the fifth to stand trial on bribery charges, was convicted. After the sentences were imposed an appeal of judgment and stay of execution for 90 days was allowed by the court to permit attorneys for the defendants to make applications for appeals to the state supreme court.

More than two months have been consumed in the trials of these cases, the first of their kind in West Virginia. There were seven legislators indicted, the five already tried having been held on felony charges and the other two, George S. Van Meter, and Rev. T. J. Smith, on misdemeanor charges. The trial of the last two probably will be deferred until another term of court.

EXPRESS RATES TO BE REDUCED SOON

COMPANIES ARE ORDERED TO MAKE RATE CHANGES OCT. 15.

TO COST CONCERNS MILLIONS

Sweeping Cuts Mean About 15 Per Cent of Revenue—Graduated Parcel Rate Will Be Modified.

Washington, Aug. 6.—Reductions in express rates which will cost the companies fully $26,000,000 a year—approximately 16 per cent of their gross revenue—have been ordered by the interstate commerce commission to become effective on or before Oct. 15, 1913. Notable reforms in practices also were ordered.

Most Important Change.

The most important change prescribed by the order is the modification of the present graduated scale of parcel rates. Only minimum rates for short distances either have been left unchanged or slightly reduced; for longer distances they have been lowered; for fifty pounds or less all rates practically have been reduced. For packages more than four pounds going more than 200 miles and less than 2,000 the new express rates are generally lower than the present post rates. For more than 2,000 miles the rates are practically the same.

The report and order of the commission were signed by Commissioner John H. Marble are a virtual affirmation of the findings of former Commissioner Franklin K. Lane, now secretary of the interior.

Blind System Is Used.

By prescribing a so-called block system for handling the United States into 950 blocks, averaging 2,500 express miles as originally proposed by Mr. Lane, the commission retains the system published by the express companies, will be reduced to less than 600,000 and the interstate commerce commission also believes that the system points the way to a solution of the long existence of freight rates.

The general impression in official quarters is that the express companies will attempt to test by legal means the constitutionality of the commission's order, at once.

The requirement of the order of June 8, 1912, that a label shall be attached to each parcel is modified to the extent that in case of shipments of perishable property consisting of two or more packages the label need be attached to only one package.

The express companies also filed statements indicating that the losses of property "made" by express companies would be inderiable and argued strenuously that the government gave a parcel post had deprived them of quite 30 per cent of the revenue they formerly received from parcels of eleven pounds or less. They contended that if this system were withdrawn not survive the losses from both sources.

CANTON SITUATION SERIOUS

GOVERNMENT ARMY ADVANCING AND REBELS MUTINY.

$50,000 Offered for Governor's Head —Foreign Service Is Heavily Guarded.

Hong Kong, Aug. 5.—The situation in Canton remains serious. The electric light plant and the city jail are fearful of a mutiny. Trains, junks and other vessels are pocked with refugees leaving the city. A siege of Canton is expected with the arrival there of General Li Lieh Kuang, commander of the government forces in the province of Kwang-Si, who is moving southward on the city with his army. Soldiers are patrolling the streets of Canton, on the police there are unreliable.

Several treasonous soldiers were shot in that city Friday. A reward of $50,000 has been offered for the head of Governor Chan of Canton.

Men with guns from British and French warships are guarding the foreign quarter of Canton, where valuables worth millions of dollars are stored. The International fleet lying in the city has been augmented by the arrival of American, German, Japanese and French men-of-war. Soldiers have been sent from Hong Kong to Canton and three naval vessels have been ready to start for that point at a moment's notice with stores and additional troops.

Missionaries who have been recalled from disturbed districts are arriving in Hong Kong by hundreds. Fifty thousand refugees came into the city last week. General Long Chi Kuang is a German-trained officer.

The Cantonese troops are made up of untrained rabble. They are demanding double pay for their services.

INCREASE DEPUTIES WITH 600 RECRUITS

SHERIFF WILL HIRE OUTSIDERS IF LOCAL MEN RE-FUSE PLACES.

UNION MEN DENOUNCE ORDER

Notice of Federal Probe and Mother Jones' Arrival Cheers Strikers—Believe Investigation Will Help Cause.

Calumet, Mich., Aug. 7.—Sheriff James Cruse was authorized by the supervisors of Houghton county to hire as many deputies as he desires to handle the copper miners' strike situation. In consequence the sheriff announces a recruit army of 600 assistants and he intimated that local men will not accept commissions that outsiders will be sworn in. He said that the latter class already were on his payroll.

Opposite Views Taken.

Mine owners and union leaders took opposite views of the developments, the former lauding the action of the board while their letter denounced it in unmeasured terms. The name "alfed thugs" was applied to such deputies by Western Federation of Miners officials.

Several board members are managers or superintendents of mines.

While the county board was considering the strike, further steps were being taken toward perfecting organization of miners and business men who wish to return to the Calumet and Hecla workings. A committee appointed Monday conferred with James MacNaughton, a mining engineer of this company, and learned that the company would be ready to resume work when ready for underground operations but that no material change could be made in conditions until after men had proved themselves as loyal employes of the company.

More Pumps Started.

Operators also announced the starting of pumps at Osceola shaft No. 2 and Calumet No. 4 several Ft. L. Abbot troops to protect the con-union men.

Union circles rejoiced over the arrival of "Mother" Jones and the word from Washington that Walter B. Palmer, of the federal bureau of the department of labor to investigate labor conditions in the copper country.

Mrs. Jones' arrival and the families living herself with the situation, in preparation for a speech at a mass meeting at Lantern rink.

Union leaders advanced the belief that Mr. Palmer's inquiry may result in a solution of the strike. They were sure the city has been augmented by the arrival of American, German, Japanese and French men-of-war. Soldiers have been sent from Hong Kong to Canton and three naval vessels have been ready to start for that point at a moment's notice with stores and additional troops.

Missionaries who have been recalled from disturbed districts are arriving in Hong Kong by hundreds. Fifty thousand refugees came into the city last week. General Long Chi Kuang is a German-trained officer.

Washington, Aug. 6.—President Wilson has taken under consideration an invitation to address the Atlantic Council of Women Voters, which is at the close of the three days' conference beginning August 13. Representatives Baker of California and Keating of Colorado extended the invitation. It will be the first national convention of the organization and there will be in attendance about 100 women voters, who have gained suffrage only in the several states which have granted the ballot to women.

Oldest Tablet Upholds Bible.

Philadelphia, Pa., Aug. 5.—The Bible story of Noah and the flood is confirmed in many details by hieroglyphics written 4,000 years ago, may be more, by a historian who lived in ancient Babylon, according to announcement by the University of Pennsylvania. The writing on a tablet, an epic of great length purporting to reach back to the creation, has been deciphered at the museum of the university. Dr. Arno Poebel, the announcement says, the tablet is the oldest ever found.

FESTIVITIES OF THE PAPUANS

Your Creatures Have Little Time to Spare for Amusement—Women Are the Workers.

New York.—Festive seasons are few and far between among the Papuans. Poor creatures! They have little time to spare for amusement, their thoughts being entirely directed toward the supply at sufficient food. This statement refers more particularly to the women, who are the workers and chief food collectors, the men varying their time between occasional hunting trips and lolling about in blissful idleness on the stools opposite the village. The Papuan male evidently has a rooted dislike for work and ideas of his own as to the duties of wives.

In the month of May the principal festival of the year takes place—closely connected, we might be excused, with the all-important question of food. Pigs are cut down in villages, but are run down in the jungle when very young and then brought up among the people, subsisting exclusively on the miscellaneous debris discarded by their human companions.

The slaughter of these pigs is made the occasion for a dance and general jollification. On one occasion for several days friends from the neighboring villages had been invited as Parinas, straining the home accommodation to its utmost and causing intense excitement. On the night previous to the day of a great dance took place, ostensibly on the part of the women, for the men—noble creatures—never demean themselves by lifting in arch frivolities. The dancing takes the form of a curious shuffling of the feet and much undulation of the body. The greater the excitement of the latter, combined with the least action of the legs, the nearer is the dance to perfection, according to Papuan standard.

KILLED MAN AND SKINNED HIM

Death of Dr. Isaac G. West in Texas Recalls Scandal of Delaware Crime.

Dover, Del.—A tragedy that created intense excitement when the state of Delaware was revived when word was received here of the sudden death at Dallas, Tex., of Dr. Isaac G. West. On December 2, 1872, he killed Henry C. Turner, aided by Jacob Turner, a negro, to Dover, skinned him completely, and took the body to the building in which the crime was committed. His purpose, it was claimed, was to secure $15,000 insurance by substituting the negro's disfigured body, and making it appear that he had been killed by an explosion of a mother-of-pearl button factory.

The case was tried here in April, 1873. West was acquitted on the ground of insanity, and subsequently was convicted of arson, and served a term in New Castle jail. He believed after completing his sentence, and had lived in Dallas for a month until word reached here of his death.

The tragedy was one of the most terrible ever committed in this country. West made a confession, in which he told how he murdered the body and buried portions of it in a half dozen different places here. In order to frighten negroes generally, it was only necessary to refer to the "bogey man" and the whole good to some instances to this day.

DOCTOR'S FEE IN A DUEL

A Court in Cairo Decides He Has a Right to Charge For His Services.

Cairo—A court in Cairo has decided that a doctor has a right to charge for his services in a duel, according to the Paris correspondent of The Journal of the American Medical Association, who states:

The question under the right to fees for his services as a physician in a duel was recently settled in Cairo by a French judge recently passed on this question. A doctor demanded 100 (100 francs) as his fee for his services in a duel. The doctor declared that the claim was not legal because it was based on complicity in an illegal act. The doctor declared that although the seconds of the duellist were his accomplices in crime, this was because the conditions of duels required the seconds to give aid and assistance to the duellist in case wounded, but not the physician, when he gives no such aid, is a hired employe of the combatants and therefore has a right to his fee."

DEER JOINS HERD OF HORSES

Hunter Says Albino Doe Was Boycotted by Its Own Species and Cast Out.

Libby, Mont.—Henry Wegner spent a few days in Libby from his upper Yaki ranch. He stated that a pure white deer had become associated with his horses and had become so tame as to follow his horses into the corral each time they entered it, and was no more wild than the horses.

Mr. Wegner said it was a doe and had pink eyes, so he had named it "Albino." Old hunters here say that on account of its freakish appearance it had been driven away by other deer and had become associated with the white cause complain in the west. In general use, however, the designation is that of McCormick.

SCHOOL FUND OVER THIRTY MILLIONS

STATE REPORT SHOWS ANOTHER BIG GAIN FOR EDUCATIONAL USES.

SURPASSES FONDEST DREAMS

Stats Auditor Iverson Shows Fiscal Total Permanent Amount to Be $31,734,283.—The Past Predictions.

St. Paul.—Minnesota's claim that it is the richest commonwealth in the world was again strengthened when state Auditor Iverson in his report for the fiscal year shows that the total permanent school fund has reached $31,734,283.25, an increase of $1,959,515.54 over July 31, 1912.

In 1906, State Auditor Swedish reported the fund to be $6,935,000 and expressed the hope that it ultimately would reach $15,000,000 or $20,000,000.

Prediction Comes True.

In 1903, State Auditor Dunn reported it to be $15,500,000 and predicted that some day it would reach $30,000,000.

Today it has well passed the Dunn prediction and Mr. Iverson says that $200,000,000 is a conservative estimate of the amount of the fund in 1950, thirty-seven years hence.

Largest Gain on Record.

The increase of the fund this year was the largest on record. It was made up as follows:

Sale of 126,557 acres of state land at an average price of $7.87 an acre	$1,074,960.37
Income from iron mine royalties	654,101.79
Sale of pine and other timber on state lands.	350,912.59
Total addition	$1,959,515.54
Fund July 31, 1913.....	29,743,768.25
Total today	$31,734,283.79

Land Brings More Money.

Although during the year ending July 31, 1913, 168,270 acres of state land was sold, the average price was only $6.46 an acre and the income $1,087,005, only $13,000 more than the amount received this year for the sale of 39,300 acres less.

The rapid increase of the permanent school fund is well illustrated by the report of the state auditor for the two years ending July 31, 1912, during which period the total was 27,771,935, less than $800,000 more than for the last twelve months.

CHILDREN TAUGHT FARMING

Cloquet, Minn., Public Schools Teach Pupils Practical Agricul-ture.

Cloquet.—Saturday was visitors' day at Horsby field, the ten-acre public school farm. This is the second season of growing, the land having been given to the schools two years ago by the Cloquet Lumber company and named for the company's manager, H. C. Horsby.

This summer a small house has been built, the farmers erected old attudbildings painted, the tract fenced, an orchard of small fruit set out and some of the common breeds of chickens are being reined. Potatoes, cabbages, corn, rutabagas, onions, tomatoes, buckwheat and other grains are being raised.

Thirty-five children have individual plots and walk out to the farm once a week to work in their gardens. At the end of the season prizes will be distributed to the winners.

Held for Chanhassen Murder.

Chaska.—An interpreter with a construction crew working for the Milwaukee road near Chanhassen was murdered and his body found early Sunday at the edge of an apple orchard near the tracks. Robbery had been the motive, apparently, as the pockets had been rifled. The dead had been committed with a machete, a weapon, the man was a Pole, whose real name could not be learned, but he went among members of the crew as "James Smith." The foreman of the camp is Otto Sandwick. Three members of the crew are under arrest here, as they were with Smith when he was seen last, about 11 p. m. Saturday.

Two Drown; Two Rescued.

Duluth.—One drowning and two heroic rescues occurred in and around Duluth. Frank Rice, 32, Buffalo, suffer on the steamer Marshall Roberts, Jr., stumbled over a rope at the Missabe docks, fell into the bay and drowned. A poor swimmer, but gifted with a brave heart, Rudolph Sahlen, son of Clerk Jiggren of the St. Louis county poor commission, made two rescues of drowning persons.

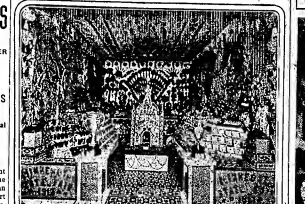
New Mine Ships First Ore.

Ironton.—The Cayuna-Duluth mine has just shipped its first ore. The mine is served by the Northern Pacific railway, this being the second mine to ship on that line in the Cayuna iron range. The ore, averaging 55 per cent and testing 1450 a ton, was shipped to Ashland, Wis. The mine has established a record, making its shaft and shipping ore within eight months from the time the first spade of dirt was thrown. A large body of excursionists were present when the shipment left.

Conscientious Burglar Ate Fruit.

Preston.—The little village has a burglar whose conscience is stronger than the scope of money, but when sweet-tooth cannot resist the temptation of delicious, newly preserved fruit. One night last week the home of Brother Workman was robbed and $5 in cash and two jars of fruit were taken. Monday Workman received another envelope containing a $5 bill with a note from an unknown person expressing regret for the theft. The jars came back, too, but the fruit had been rumored.

A PRIZE WINNING COUNTY EXHIBIT AT MINNESOTA STATE FAIR



The Minnesota State Fair has distanced all competitors in her agricultural group exhibit. Five unique of soil products made by forty-six counties, representing over seventy-five per cent of the state's area, last year furnished a show that for attractiveness and educational value has never been equaled in the United States, says Supervisor C. P. Craig and Supt. F. H. Lippitt, who are both working to make the county exhibits still more attractive and valuable. They are judging not alone on variety and quality of the articles that go to make up each exhibit, and the men in the various counties who have charge of collecting and arranging the materials, will have the benefit of past experience.

ORGANIZED INCENDIARY GANG

Series of Fires Reported at Intervals of Twenty Minutes in Virginia.

Virginia.—Incendiaries and robbers made a trip across the city after 2 o'clock Sunday and set fire to Mesberg & Lavicka's furniture store and that's all above; to the State Bank of Virginia, to the Duluth, Missabe & Northern station and to Andrew Grende's warehouse.

The Mesberg block was gutted and occupants of three apartments had narrow escapes, having to grope their way out through smoke in their night clothes. Mr. and Mrs. Fred Mackey were burned about the feet in escaping through the rear window.

All of Incendiary Origin.

The fires are all known to be of incendiary origin and were reported at intervals of about twenty minutes. At all the places there were oil-saturated clothes and paper and attempts were made in every case to break into drawers and open safes.

Evidence was collected in each case through a window. At the bank a small amount in cash and stamps was obtained. The robbers by mistake locked the safe at Mesburg's store not knowing it was open.

The police received a fake call to a distant part of the city when the gang was ready to operate. One man was seen by Jay Hughes, who was coming at the offices worthwhile.

Detectives and Police.

The police are being assisted by many special men from Duluth and by national detectives. All the range cities are picking up suspects.

People are searching the field with the gang that operated in the northern part of the state two or three years ago with whom Dr. Dunnan was convicted of being associated.

Great excitement prevails and threats are being made that in case of the arrest of the criminals, no quarter would be shown. Many lives were imperiled by living apartments of over stores, the bank and the old road depot.

The Theory.

The theory is that the chain of fires was to attract attention while another gang entered the city hall safe. Special guards are placed at all banks, the postoffice and other places while the criminals are still at large and suspected of not having completed the work they undertook.

TWENTY-ONE ARE DEAD IN ALLOUEZ DOCK WRECK

Six Crushed to Death and Fifteen Believed Drowned—Many Others Are Injured.

Duluth, Minn. — Six men were killed in death, fifteen others are believed to have been drowned and many more injured, when two ore trains collided on the Allouez dock.

Some of the victims were crushed beneath the debris of ore cars, while dozens of men were hurled from the dock into Allouez bay, as the cars piled up. Still others jumped into the water to escape death.

Train Crew Drowned.

After the accident and while wreckers were making efforts to extricate the men caught beneath the wreck-age and searching for the dead, nearly two hundred and fifty dock workers threatened to mob the train men. Police had to be called to prevent serious trouble.

The bodies of those were taken from the debris of a broken car. They cannot live.

Cave-in Kills 11; Injures 5.

Anoka, Minn., Aug. 3.—One man was killed, five were injured, one so seriously he may die, and twenty or more narrowly escaped when the roof of an excavation being made in the basement of the state asylum for the insane caved in this afternoon. The accident occurred at 2:30 p. m. From that time until 5:30 scores of workmen dug frantically in the ruins of the trench for the men caught beneath more than a ton of cement and mortar, might be taken out alive.

Brainerd Man Successful Artist.

Brainerd.—Miss Dunn has been a struggling art student and to return to America from the American Academician in Paris, France, leader in the Dunn circles, and after a visit in Paris and New York, with examples of his brush accepted by the Museo di Luxembourg and the Palis Palais, Paris, is the experience of Thomas R. Congdon, American painter and scribar. Mr. Congdon left Brainerd a poor boy. He acquired his art education and his experience abroad through his own efforts.

NEW HEALTH OFFICER PLAN

Whole-Time Experiment Proves Success at Rochester.

Rochester. — Dr. Harold B. Wood, Rochester's first whole-time health officer, severed his connection with the local health department on August 1, having completed his year of service.

The employment of a whole-time health officer for the city was made on experiment, which was adopted through the influence of the state board of health, that body agreeing to pay the city $1,000 a year if Rochester would furnish $2,000 a year. The success of the proposition, offered to raise $1,000 of the $3,000 and the city agreed to pay the $1,000.

The experiment of a whole-time health officer, who gives his entire attention to the health of the community, has been a success. When Dr. Wood undertook the work a year ago, the city was filled with contagious disease and no systematic work had been fully started to cope with the conditions. He leaves the city health office after one year's work with but two contagious diseases within the corporate limits, and a system of keeping a record of health conditions of the community that cannot be equaled.

NEW STATE MONEY BOLLOW

Standing Allowances Are Abandoned in Minnesota for Biennial System of Appropriations.

St. Paul.—Beginning August 1 the State of Minnesota started a new financial system through the abandonment of all standing appropriations. This system was done away with by the last legislature, and the new plan became effective Friday, when the appropriations for the coming year became available.

Standing or annual appropriations are those made by law to continue in force in future years until modified or replaced by subsequent legislation. It has been a long standing custom for the legislature to make such grants to cover items of a permanent nature, like salaries of state officers and assistants, contingent funds of departments, partial support for various educational and charitable institutions, and many other purposes.

The last legislature, however, wiped out the system and determined to begin August 1 with a clean slate. Herschel Jr. the appropriations for every need of the state are to be made by each legislature for the two-year period following and there are to be no standing allowances.

MILL CITY MURDER MYSTERY

Most Baffling Case of Recent Years Confronts Minneapolis Police.

Minneapolis. — The most puzzling and at the same time the most mysterious murder the police of Minneapolis have had to deal with in many years came to light early Thursday, with the finding of the body of a murdered man in an empty freight car in the Milwaukee yards, within a stone's throw of both the Washburn-Crosby mills and the plant of the North Star Cereal company.

A bullet had apparently entered the left side and ranged downward into the heart, causing death. No weapon was found in the car, and the rifled pockets of the dead man indicated robbery as the motive for the crime. Even the dead man's coat, hat, shoes and stockings had been carried away.

Remains Found in Swamp.

Cass Lake.—The body of William McIntosh, aged 45, was brought here, having been found in a swamp twelve miles southwest of Cass Lake. The body was imbedded in the mud. McIntosh had spent the past three years in northern Minnesota lumber camps. Two brothers survive, one being an engineer in the Northern Pacific shops at Brainerd, and the other living in Nova Scotia. The body is being held at the morgue here awaiting word from his brothers.

Relief Comes at Midnight.

Minneapolis.—Wednesday was the hottest day of the year, and of many years in Minneapolis, causing many deaths and several prostrations in the Twin Cities, ending with a sudden break in the temperature, that came on the crest of a heavy rain and also lyrical storm. Thursday wind and electrical disturbance, which struck the Twin Cities at midnight, and was but a symptom of a general storm throughout the country, caused a number of fires in Minneapolis, among them one at the Minnesota state soldiers' home

EXCELLENT FOR TENDER-SKIN

Victim of Sunburn Will Find Relief in This Preparation, Which Is a Home Remedy.

A preparation that will suit most tender skins or skin that has been sunburned is made by mixing together three ounces of pure almond meal, an ounce of powdered orris, two ounces of powdered castile soap, one-half dram of oil of bergamot, four drops of bitter almond oil and a quarter of a drachm of extract of musk.

Only tepid water should be used on the skin and after wetting it rub on some of the above preparation. Instead of using soap, using the hands to work up a lather. Sometimes a warm cloth usually causes friction and this, added to a sunburned skin, would make it sore and tender. More water is used and the skin is cleansed with the hands and finally rinsed several times and with cold soft towels dried dry. Then a more suspicion of cold cream is massaged into the pores over which will be carefully rubbed. Be careful to protect her skin and care for it as just described when through. It is naturally of a dry texture will not burn or tan nearly so quickly as the girl with the oily skin. She would think that a girl with oily skin would not have as healthy a skin as the girl with the dry skin on account of sufficient oily moisture, but nevertheless it often been proven that she burns even more quickly. Why this is so is because of the difference in the skin tissue.

Draped Lace Tunics.

Although, perhaps, the lace tunic has a tendency to age in weave, it has compensating merits which recommend it to women of middle age and "even younger women who have a tendency to stoutness. For the close fitting petticoat of black satin worn with the upper part in the form of a coat tends to make the figure look slim in a manner that many, also, find eminently desirable as years come fast upon them.

The favorite lace employed is Chantilly, and when one knows how to drape artistically nothing can be more elegant. On the contrary, nothing can be dowdier than a drapery which looks to be artistic and falls lamentably in the attempt.

BETTER THAN ANY COSMETIC

Combination of Repose and Relaxation Is the Only Beauty Secret That Is Worth Knowing.

There is a beauty secret, not found in cosmetics, and which does not linger in the perfume-laden hearings of the parlor of the masseuse. It is a secret which any woman can possess, and its magic effect is almost instantly noted. The secret is merely a combination of repose and relaxation.

A restful woman always appears to advantage. There is culture in a repose of manner that makes itself felt both at home and in public. There is a suggestion of reserve intellectual strength, more impressive than the uneasiness of the woman who feels that her tongue or her body must be in motion to let the world know she is in it.

At the same time, the wear and tear will leave the marks of strain on countenance and body, and blissful repose can be had only by learning to take things easy. Repose is more beautifying than rouge, and relaxation than any bodybuilding thus massage.—Leslie's Weekly.

For the Rose Jar.

The following mixture has kept its fragrance for twenty years: Gather the rose petals on a sunny day, in the early morning, before the weakened varieties are best. Let stand in a cool place for two hours, toss them and put into a bowl or covered dish in layers. Sprinkle each layer with salt. Keep adding to them until you have enough "stock." Into a large glass jar place two ounces of crushed cinnamon; then put in the stock, which has been shaken up every morning for two weeks. When all is in the jar, let stand for eight weeks, covered. It is now ready for use,

Attorney General Smith is busy handing out a few licenses for the privilege of milk in Minneapolis and it looks as if he might make good. Last month the Minneapolis milk company which had been convicted of a violation of the state pure food laws, gave notice of an increase in the price of milk to 4 cents. Mr. Smith acted for an enjoining order and got it. The order for a permanent order is yet to be argued. The aim of the law was to go into effect Aug. 1 and whether Mr. Smith succeeds or has saved the consumers of the company's product a tidy sum. For every day that the company's increase was held up Minneapolis has been saved $2,500. This is the amount the company would have realized each day had the increase not been attacked.

Keeping overlastingly at it sometimes brings success, all of which Attorney General Smith can attest to. When he was decided to make a test case at Washington the Great Western road protested. It carried the matter through the federal district court. Mr. Smith threatened reprisals and last week the company, after looking into the threats, agreed to be good. It will now charge but 2 cents a piece for sangers. As to refunds, however, it will only make them after a fight. As Mr. Smith views it half loaf is better than none, and he accepted the company's findings. However, if any passenger or shipper has a grievance in the way of a refund he is ready to help. Mr. Smith goes on the proposition that his department belongs to the people and if they have a lawful grievance it is up to him to give relief.

State Senator Victor Johnson of Chisago county is the first to get in to the political game which will express the voters of the state a year hence. He is going after Congressman Minahan's scalp in the seventh district. Senator Johnson filed a list of exposures with Secretary of State Schmahl last week. He is required of any voter who aspires to political office. Senator Johnson is a Scandinavian and is due to give Mr. Minahan, the present incumbent, who is an Irishman, some run.

A BETTER DISPLAY OF COUNTY EXHIBITS.

At Least Fifty Counties Will Be Represented in the Big Building at State Fair.

More completely than ever before Minnesota will be pictured agriculturally in the Big Dome Building on the State Fair grounds. Last year 45 counties, representing over 75 per cent of the state's area, had complete and artistic exhibits of their soil products in this one building. Nothing like it was ever seen before at any state fair or exposition. This year, nearly fifty counties represented last year, have already taken space, and there are a number of new counties. The total will undoubtedly exceed fifty, and the display will be one that will inspire Minnesotans and attract prospective Minnesotans.

The list of the counties that have already been assigned space in the big building is as follows:

Todd, Pine, Roseau, Beltrami, Aitkin, Cass, Isanti, Norman, Koochiching, Becker, Carlton, Hubbard, Clearwater, Stevens, Douglas, Ottertail, Wadena, Mcrrison, Washington, Sherburne, Anoka, Benton, Houston, Renville, Redwood, Olmsted, Cottonwood, Waseca, Scott, Blue Earth, Nicollet, Nobles, Sibley, Wright, Red Lake.

Watson's car, with Norman Schreiter at the wheel and Dr. Watson, Sam Hunt, Banker Delorme and one sharpshooter, the entire party being armed to the teeth, and secured many ammunition belts here. STEINERT DAM IS COMPLETED

It Is a Mass of Rock That Ice Jams Will Not Move.

The finishing touches are now being put on the Steinert dam across the Clearwater river. The new dam is practically one mass of rocks and is so substantially made that it seems impossible that ice jams or any other condition due to high water will have any effect upon it.

Except for the frame-work and covering the dam is all rock. The framework was constructed of very heavy timbers, the rock "poured" in to fill all spaces and the heavy lumber used for the covering.

The construction of the dam completes the improvement of the Steinert Milling company's valuable property on the Clearwater river.

MONEY BROUGHT OUT OF HIDING

Popular Sale of State Bonds Shows Cash is Not Scarce.

St. Paul—(Special)—Representative Spooner's claim that there was any amount of money in Minnesota ready to invest in state bonds was realized last week when State Treasurer Smith and the members of the state board of control placed $260,000 worth of educational improvement certificates on the market and sold them in a day. The sale was in the face of the refusal of the banks of Minneapolis and St. Paul to absorb the offer, as they usually do. The period, three years, and the interest, 7 per cent, did not look good to them. Anticipating a sluggish bond market Representative Spooner, whose home is at Morris, when he put over an authorized issue of nearly $3,000,000 in state certificates for the construction of a new state prison at Stillwater some years ago, provided that in the event the banks and the state investment board did not elect to take over any issue of state obligations offered that the generil public should be given a chance. His contention was that there was any amount of money in the state in small amounts awaiting a safe investment. A few months ago the state board of control had on its hands $210,000 in prison certificates and $700,000 in educational building improvement certificates authorized by the last legislature. It advertised freely for bidders and sons came. Finally the state, after several lengthy conferences, took $255,000 of the certificates. It was then that Representative Spooner stepped in and he pointed out a few things to the state board of control. He advised them through interviews and personal letters that the general public was entitled to a chance.

The popular sale of the certificates was opened following several large sized advertisements in the Twin City and Duluth papers. It was the first in the history of the state and if you will accept the word of yours truly it was a success. At 6:30 a. m. there were several score of people in line and at 10 o'clock, when the office of State Treasurer Smith opened for business, there were fully as many more. Half of them were women and the majority of them had currency. The male end of the line was similarly supplied and the fact so impressed the St. Paul police authorities that four plain clothes men and as many uniformed officers were detailed to protect the treasurer and see that there was no quarreling for position. At noon many of the women had become exhausted from standing in line and chairs were supplied for them by State Treasurer Smith and the state capitol custodian. At noon over $100,000 of the certificates had been subscribed for and the state board of control ordered that $100,000 more be thrown on the counter. They could be purchased in amounts as low as $100. The majority of the purchasers were working people. One Greek came with $3,100 tied up in a bandana handkerchief. It was all in $100 bills. A woman had $10 in pennies and the balance in bills. Before the day was closed the entire $260,000 worth of certificates had been sold.

I am going to tell you in though on a few things regarding the latest idea in the sale of municipal and state obligations. The opinion is that when the banks and the bankers will not buy that money is either tight or that the prevailing rate of interest is not high enough. This is not, I suppose I will be called a cynic for asserting it, but this popular sale scheme is bringing to the banks thousands of dollars that they would not touch them. It is perhaps beyond comprehension, but there are in Minneapolis hundreds of thrifty persons who are hoarding money. They will not trust the banks, or if they do, they keep from $100 or more does not appeal to them in the least of finding a place for their pocktory. It is this popular sale of municipal and state securities that appeals to them and it has never better exemplified than in the case of the bonds and certificates offered in the first two or three sales, which were all gone before the publication of the vox populi followed and then the hundreds of applications came in. The investments ranged from $100 to $500 and the money was paid over in real coin of the realm. It was forth reluctantly from stockings, skirts and limbs of parasols and the owners watched the clerk who counted it out with incredible care. There were no mistakes on either side. Now all this money has since found its way to the St. Paul banks. It was through the State Treasurer Smith immediately on its receipt and will remain there until the certificates are redeemed. Had this popular sale of certificates not been conducted there would have remained in the hands of the owners and not realized anything. Great head, eh?

The Wrong Time.

Yesterday afternoon a small part on the Gazette's linotype broke and as a consequence the machine will have a vacation of a few days. That was decidedly the wrong time of the week for such a performance, or lack of performance as that, and some difficulty has been experienced in getting out this issue of the paper.

HUERTA AUDIENCE RUMORED

Declared That Steps Are Being Taken to Bring About Conference—Mexican President Cables Peris.

Mexico City, Aug. 14.—Former Governor John Lind, the personal representative of President Wilson and advisor of the American embassy here, was received in an unofficial capacity by Frederick Gamboa, the Mexican minister for foreign relations. No further steps were taken by Mr. Lind to advance the object of his mission to Mexico.

Mr. Lind is in communication with Washington and it is not improbable that his movements will be governed by instructions from there, based upon the progress he is able to make here.

Significance of Reception.

In view of President Huerta's note of last week, issued through the acting foreign minister, stating that Mr. Lind would not be received officially unless he brought credentials and also official recognition of the Huerta government, great significance was attached to his reception by Huerta's cabinet chief, even unofficially.

By some persons his reception is taken as an indication of the disposition of President Huerta to leave the character of the message Mr. Lind bears. Officials, high and low, persist in saying that President Huerta will never receive Mr. Lind, especially as President Wilson's emissary, but there is an unconfirmed report in circulation that steps already have been taken to bring about a conference between them.

It is the opinion of Mexicans generally that even if President Huerta should receive Mr. Lind it would be merely to show him a personal courtesy, and not to alter the stand the Mexican executive has taken in regard to foreign interference to the republic. It is pointed out that even if President Huerta do consent to listen to suggestions there remains the rebel element as a bar to the restoration of peace. Rebel sympathizers in the capital and even the government see by the rebels are no more inclined to permit mediation than the administration.

Rebel Defeat Reported.

Official reports received are to the effect that Torreon, which has been under active siege for some weeks, has been relieved and the rebels defeated with a loss of 3,000 men killed, wounded or taken prisoners.

The report said that the rebels, who were commanded by Venustiano Carranza personally, were permitted to enter the streets of the city as a strategic move and when they believed that they had won and were rushing toward the heart of the city they were mowed down by federal rifles and machine guns.

Settlement of Trouble Seen.

Washington.—News from Mexico City that John Lind, personal representative of President Wilson, and Frederico Gamboa, Mexican minister of foreign relations, established unofficial relations by a personal meeting, brought encouragement to administration officials here. It was felt by them that the first step in the program of the American government, to throw its influence in the direction of a quiet and peaceful settlement of the revolutionary troubles, had succeeded.

The incident, however, it was learned from official sources, will not change the procedure previously outlined by Mr. Lind before he left Washington. He will submit all his representations to Charge O'Shaughnessy, who will transmit them to accordance with diplomatic proprieties to the Mexican minister of foreign relations.

It has been left entirely to Mr. Lind's discretion upon whom to call. While there is nothing in Mr. Lind's instructions which would prevent him from calling on Provisional President Huerta, it is not regarded that he would do so unless the latter had indicated his desire to receive the unofficial envoy.

Huerta's Cable to France.

Paris.—The Matin having cabled President Huerta that some anxiety had been caused by dispatches received here concerning the relations between the United States and Mexico, has received the following message from Mexico City:

"Anxiety over the relations of Mexico with the United States are without foundation."

(Signed) V. HUERTA."

German Arrested As Spy.

Sterling, Germany, Aug. 13.—The arrest of Captain Stein of the Third regiment of field artillery on a charge of espionage is considered in military circles likely to turn out as disastrously for Germany as was the case of Colonel Alfred Redl for Austria. While the Third field artillery was manoeuvering at Hammerstein the colonel sent an apparently harmless summons to Captain Stein. The captain suspected a trap and immediately fled to the railroad station but was arrested.

TO APPROVE CURRENCY BILL

CAUCUS LIKELY TO ADOPT IT WITH FEW CHANGES.

Administration Measure Given Enthusiastic Reception When Introduced Before Democrats.

Washington, Aug. 13.—A vigorous defense of the administration currency bill by Representative Carter Glass, author of the measure, was received with general applause and support to the first session of the caucus of Democratic members of the house, before which the measure is to be worked over and in fate determined.

Representative Glass' speech followed an unsuccessful attempt by the insurgent members of the house, during red currency committees to have the caucus throw open to the public.

The currency bill was laid before the caucus by Representative Glass, as chairman of the committee, with the recommendation that it receive members. Representative Neely and Representative Lobeck, Democrats of Texas withheld their approval.

Mr. Glass' speech in explanation of the bill, which began as a general statement of the purpose and hopes of its framers, was turned into a emphatic defense of the measure when the insurgent contest that it should make provision for the issuance of additional paper currency to care for corn, wheat and cotton.

Speculation was worked on the ex the support of the government, he decided, if these amendments were put into the bill. The legitimate function, of forming commodities, he said, for money to carry on commercial farming and commercial operations were fully covered by the measure, and to make warehouse receipts for cotton or grain a legal security, the issuance of the proposed new currency notes would furnish the means by which speculators could hold the cotton and grain crops in storage for an indefinite period.

Friends of the administration bill, as the result of the opening session, predicted that the caucus could approve the measure with few changes.

IAPS MAY TEST NEW LAW

No Further Protest Submitted but Individuals May Try Out Measure

Washington, Aug. 13.—Though it had been expected that the Japanese reply to the state department's last note regarding the protest against the California alien law legislation would be submitted today, it was learned that legislation became effective, there has been no further move in the matter.

Ambassador Chinde has served notice upon Secretary Bryan, however, that the Japanese answer will be forthcoming in the future. Meanwhile, there is some expectation that a test case will be instituted before the California courts by some individual Japanese whose property rights are threatened. It is not believed that to be seen whether the Japanese government is the one to prosecute the original contention that it is the duty of the United States government to protect the interests of its subjects in treaty rights of an alien resident.

TRY TO TAKE ASQUITH'S HOME

MILITANTS FAIL IN THIRD ATTEMPT AT STORMING.

Leader Sylvia Pankhurst Is Arrested in Flight— Police Use Clubs Freely.

London, Aug. 12.—The third attempt of the suffragettes, under the command of Sylvia Pankhurst, to take Premier Asquith's house in Downing street, by storm, failed when the militant leader was captured by a cordon of police, thrown across Whitehall, after a stiff fight in which the officers used their clubs.

The trouble began after a mass meeting held under the auspices of the free speech defence committee, called to demand the unconditional release of George Anshury, former socialist member of the house of commons, who was sentenced, July 30, to three months imprisonment for mail, log inflammatory speeches. He was released Aug. 2 under the "cat and mouse" act after he had refused to permitted to urge her hearers to march upon Downing street.

Free speech speakers advised the crowd not to attack the premier's residence, but to go to the mass meeting Mrs. Pankhurst, true to her leadership, went around the north gillath of the Nelson column, and, in fiery words, ordered her supporters to follow her.

Hatless, and her hair bound close to her head, the young militant leader started down Whitehall, surrounded by women carrying the Women's Social and Political union flag surmounted by a red liberty cap, and preceded by a flying wedge of dock men and other husky East Siders. The police in Trafalgar square allowed the procession to leave the square and then fell in behind. The suffragette sympathizers saw the reason for this move when their movements in the cloud of excitement drawn across Whitehall at the Horse Guards.

Mrs. Pankhurst, Mrs. Pankhurst and five other women and nine men were arrested, the mob dispersed.

FINALLY IMPEACH GOVERNOR SULZER

ENEMIES OF NEW YORK EXECUTIVE MUSTER SUFFICIENT STRENGTH.

WIFE ASSUMES ALL BLAME

Reported That She Felt Need of Money for Household and Speculated As a Means of Securing Funds.

Albany, N. Y., Aug. 14.—Governor Sulzer was impeached yesterday by the New York state assembly. The action of the lower house of the state legislature raised a vital question as to whether, under the constitution, the governor must vacate his office pending final adjudication of the impeachment issue by the senate and court of appeals, sitting jointly as a trial court.

Will Contest Theory.

Indications are that he will contend utterly the theory of the opposition that he becomes automatically barred from exercising the functions of the office the moment the articles of impeachment are formally presented to the senate and that he will be disqualified from resuming the duties of executive until the court of impeachment fails to sustain those charges. The governor has not announced his intention.

The governor smiled cheerily to correspondents who greeted him as he entered the front steps of the capitol and passed good naturedly for a battery of cameras men.

Wife Makes Confession.

Albany, N. Y., Aug. 14.—A declaration attributed to Mrs. William Sulzer, wife of the governor of New York, that she had used sums of her husband's campaign funds to supplement his knowledge to invest in stocks before the state banking department of money, and that she alone was wholly responsible for his impeachment, was made the subject of much talk on the lower house of the New York legislature during the consideration of the impeachment resolution. The motion was defeated by a vote of 73 to 49.

Story is Spread.

On the eve of the governor's probable impeachment the story was spread broadcast throughout the capitol here. Sulzer has assumed all the blame for the revelations brought out by the Frawley investigating committee concerning the governor's transactions in Wall street.

Mrs. Sulzer's statement was made, according to this story, to Senator Patrick E. Gilchrist, of Staten Island. "I am wholly to blame for this whole affair."

Although the story was the property of the city, apparently no one could be found who would be quoted as confirming it. Governor Sulzer referred full inquiries to Senator Palmer, who declined either to confirm or deny it. It is reported that Palmer told a reporter of the governor's supporters.

Origin of Story.

Senator Palmer, a Grand Army veteran, called at the executive mansion to consult with Governor Sulzer about the dedication of a monument at Andersonville, Ga. The senator is said to have confided her story to the senator during his call.

Senator Palmer, other friends whom Mrs. Sulzer has confided, she has declared that she took some of the governor's campaign contributions because she felt that the household "was in need of money."

The governor, it is said, knew nothing of his wife's speculations in stock exchange until shortly before the Frawley committee began its investigations. When he first heard the revelations, it is said, he was enraged, believe them, and ridiculed them as a hoax.

ALABAMA SENATIR IS NAMED

Governor Appoints H. D. Clayton Without Consent of Legislature.

Montgomery, Ala., Aug. 14—Henry D. Clayton, a member of congress from the Third district of Alabama, was named by Governor O'Neal, in the senate to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Senator Joseph F. Johnston.

Mr. Clayton accepted the appointment and left for Washington to present his credentials to the senate. He will be sworn in and resign his seat in the house until after he was seated in the senate.

Governor O'Neal issued a statement outlining the reasoning by which he decided to act in the absence of action on the appointment. He recounts the election of Senator Johnston for a term of six years prior to the adoption and ratification of the seventeenth amendment and says he had the assistance of prominent attorneys in reaching his decision.

Milwaukee, Wis., Aug. 14.—The formation of a national Catholic women's league, after a strenuous campaign of two years, was defeated by the supreme council of Archbishop S. G. The decision of the women, it is said, was the result of a three hour session.

REFUSES TO GIVE UP OFFICE

Governor Sulzer, according to a close friend, already has drafted with the advice of his counsel a letter embodying reasons for refusing to turn over his office to Lieutenant-Governor Glynn in anticipation of such a demand immediately following official reception of the articles of impeachment by the senate.

SAYS TOBACCO TRUST GROWS

NOT DISSOLVED, IS CHARGE OF SENATOR HITCHCOCK.

Will Press His Amendment for Crack Next Year in Production—Recess Talk.

Washington, Aug. 14.—That the tobacco trust instead of being dissolved by the decree of the supreme court of the United States has increased its monopolistic control of tobacco manufacture was asserted in the senate by Senator Hitchcock, of Nebraska, in discussing the tobacco schedule of the tariff bill. Senator Hitchcock said he intended later to press his amendment to the tariff bill, which would place a graduated income tax on tobacco products, Senator Hitchcock, who belted the Democratic party can on tariff, said he intended also to discuss the propriety of that course in restraining its members from supporting his amendment.

Reading from statistics furnished by the secretary of the treasury Mr. Hitchcock declared that four great concerns manufactured last year 71.35 per cent of all cigars manufactured in the United States; that three of these concerns manufactured 90 per cent of all the small cigars, and three men 65% per cent of all the cigarettes.

The tobacco schedule was approved by the senate without amendment, the metal schedule was completed with exception of some paragraphs which the finance committee had passed for further consideration and the sugar schedule was passed over because of the illness of Senator Randell of Louisiana.

Then debate was begun on the agricultural schedule, one of the sections most vigorously assailed by the senators of the minority.

Republican leaders in the senate renewed discussion of a possible recess of congress carrying with it delay in the final passage of the currency bill to November. The announcement was made in Republican circles that if the Democrats would agree to a recess immediately after the tariff bill was passed until Nov. 1, much of the present opposition to the currency measure might be withdrawn and the passage of the bill greatly expedited.

INNOCENCE COSTS MAN NEARLY $2,000

SAILOR FORCED TO SPEND SAVINGS TO CLEAR HIS NAME IN COURT.

ALSO SUBJECT OF DISGRACE

John Anderson Now Wondering If Republics Are Not, After All, Very Ungrateful of Those Who Serve Country.

Taylors Falls.—As blameless of wrong doing as a star Sunday school scholar, it cost John C. Anderson nearly $2,000 in cash to prove his innocence of the charge of burglary. Besides, he was subjected to the disgrace of arrest and thrown into jail. Citizens of Taylors Falls who have known Anderson for years and can vouch for his good character feel that the stain owes him much more than a verdict of vindication; that it should indemnify him for the humiliation which he paid out and the anxious moments which he spent while trying to keep his good name clear. The victim of circumstances he appears to have no recourse, however.

In Navy 18 Years.

For eighteen years Anderson has been in the United States navy—the last four years on the battleship Delaware, which is regarded by many experts as the government's most efficient man of war. He was born in Sweden and served in the navy of that country before coming to the United States. It speaks well for his intelligence and seamanship that some time before the term of his last enlistment expired he had been appointed chief boatswain mate of the Delaware.

For several years Anderson has been spending his summer furloughs along the St. Croix river in this vicinity. Late last May he came here again and remained until June 9, when he left for his station at Norfolk, Va. On June 6 and 9 two houses one at Norfolk and the other across the river at Portsmouth, Va., were broken into at night. From one house a gold watch and $3 were taken; from the other $7 in money. A Norfolk pawnbroker told the grand jury that Anderson had pawned the watch at his place and the two householders swore that Anderson was the burglar, asserting they had seen his features by the flashlight which he carried.

Arrested at Norfolk.

Of course the jury indicted, although Anderson left Taylors Falls for the south on the very day that one of the burglaries was committed. On his arrival at Norfolk he was arrested. The case came to trial only recently and three witnesses from Taylors Falls—Frank Kolpin, assistant postmaster; V. D. Canedny, a farmer and poultry fancier, and Mrs. M. H. Heath—went to the Virginia city to establish an alibi for the sailor. Other witnesses for him were F. J. Jones of Omaha, who rode with him from Chicago to Norfolk, and Morris Strumberg of St. Paul.

The state's case fell like lead when the northern witnesses had testified. The presiding judge said the alibi was flawless and the prosecuting attorney moved that the court instruct the jury to return a verdict of not guilty. This was done instanter and the jury, once was discharged, but his savings of years as a good seaman and high-class petty officer of his adopted land were wiped out in paying for the services of a lawyer and the expenses of his witnesses. It was a costly experience and the sailor is wondering if after all republics are not ungrateful.

Closet Masons Erect Temple.

Cloquet.—The ceremony of laying the cornerstone of the new Masonic Temple of Dalles lodge, No. 121 took place and W. Hayes Laird of Wyoming, grand master of the state, officiated. The stone was laid at the northeast corner of the building and contains historical records of the lodge, which received its charter in 1889, has grown from a membership of 15 to 200, and the new building represents not only the growth of the lodge, but the permanency of the city. The main part of the temple will be two stories high, of buff brick with Bedford trimming and 42x80 feet in size with a wing at the east and 16x24 feet. The lodge room will be 50x82 feet, and the banquet room 32x62 feet. The building will cost $10,000, exclusive of furnishings.

Bemidji.—Twenty-five thousand quarts of blueberries were shipped out of this city to North Dakota and Montana by W. G. Schroeder and the Plattsmouth-Baldwin company, while as many more could be gathered by the Indians in various sections of the county and sold by dealers in the surrounding towns. The local consumption used for canning purposes is estimated as being nearly 10,000 more quarts. Thousands of bushels have gone to waste this season on account of the scarcity of pickers.

Three Follow Clash Between Auto and Horse and Buggy—Save Excitement.

Fergus Falls.—Some excitement has been created in the northern part of the county by a collision between an automobile, alleged to have been driven by Roy and Roy Jardine of Wheaton and a buggy driven by Rolf Tones of the town of Dunn. The Jardines, with their cousins Ernest and Richard Brock, and other relatives are spending the summer at the lakes in Dunn township. Tones claims he was driving a quiet horse along the road when the Jardines ran into him with their auto. He brought suit for $1,000 damages for personal injuries and $276 for the damage to his horse and buggy.

Hearing that the defendants would return to their Canadien home, he attached the automobile. Sheriff Billings seized the auto and placed it in the barn of Charles S. Merden, the attorney who is bringing the suit. Yesterday word came that Ernest and Richard Brock had taken forcible possession of the auto and were heading for Canada. Sheriff Billings at once went after them, but they went only to Detroit, where the sheriff, who had been notified, again took possession of it. Sheriff Billings arrived on the scene soon afterward and arrested both of the young men. They claimed the machine belonged to Nore Jardine end, as he had made affidevit of ownership, they thought they had the right to take it. Their fines and costs here amounted to $50, and Sheriff Billings again took possession of the machine, chained it and locked it up, and took out the starting key to prevent their attempting to get away with it.

Meantime, Mrs. Merden claims that Ernest and Richard Brock treated her rudely when she attempted to prevent them from taking it from the barn, and she has brought suit for $1,000 damages. County will not prosecute malicious prosecution may also be started.

HAIL DAMAGE VERY GREAT

Anoka Swept by Heavy Storm—Crops Are Practically Destroyed and Other Damage Done.

Anoka.—Anoka and vicinity Thursday night was visited by a heavy hail and electrical storm. Heavy reports from the surrounding country in Hennepin and Anoka counties indicate that the hail swept a strip one and one-half miles wide and several miles long. In some districts crops were almost totally destroyed, corn being battered down, small grain threshed out in the ground, tree stripped of their leaves, vegetable gardens ruined and many small buildings demolished by the force of the storm.

Many windows were broken by the hail, which left the ground covered with stones that in appearance resembled a field of recently harvested

INSANE; HOLDS TOWN AT BAY

Ambushes Self in Barber Shop Basement and Fired Only After Fierce Battle.

Anoka.—A man now generally supposed to be insane ambushed himself in the cellar of Horace Hapeman's barber shop in the center of this village and for nearly seven hours held the entire town at bay.

He was captured only after he had wounded John Heley, chief of police, and after the fire department, playing six streams of water into the cellar, had tried unsuccessfully to drown him out. A combination of hurling gas bombs and oil of mustard finally drove him into a stairway leading to the basement, when the police, protected by citizens, finally overpowered him.

LATEST EFFECTS IN PARISIAN GOWNS

Models of black charmeuse and white lace, both featuring the draped skirt and transparent waists.

FOR DAY OR EVENING WEAR

Smart Coat That May Be Made Up in Black Satin or Other Materials to Suit the Taste.

This is an extremely smart coat of black satin; the style is one, however, that may be copied quite well in poplin, Bedford or fine cloth, and is suitable for day or evening wear. Our model is lined throughout with black merve, which has the advantage over a colored lining that it looks well with a dress of any color, and is really better for this day wear. The right front is braided at edge with silk braid, and is lightly draped up at lower part under a handsome passementerie ornament. The collar and cuffs are also of silk.

The hat has a crown of dark-merove straw, with a brim of lighter shade. It is trimmed with a wreath of mixed flowers.

Hessenite.

Hessenite might be a new disease or a new fad, but it's simply a new shade and it's named for the Grand Duke of Hesse. The shade, which is neither distinctly rose nor amethyst, but a blending of the two, is found chiefly in the semi-precious stones of translucent composition and brilliant luster such as are used for necklaces, chains and lorgnette holders, as well as for hatpin tops and toilet pins of a minor character. Hessenite, combined as a color, is a perfect paradise of the futurists' idea of shade blending, for the rose and the amethyst tones so melt into each other that it is impossible to say which one has the stronger characteristics.

Sashes for Color.

If one does not wish an all white gown for evening there is always the sash to fall back upon as a means of obtaining color. It may be as brilliant a bone wishes—or as demure. Plesh pink is so exceedingly popular that it is difficult to choose otherwise when one is building a summer evening gown, but the deeper shades of pink as well as purple, scarlet and green are all to be had for the asking, and fashion smiles upon them.

The coolest looking girdles are those of net. They are tied around the figure in a careless manner, and add to the daintiness effect.

Rich Ribbons.

The characteristics of the new ribbons are richness of coloring and very large, bold patterns. Large designs poppies and orchids and roses are typical. In the velour ribbons dark floral effects will be especially in favor. Moire brocaded ribbons, with floral backgrounds in rich tones, both will be used for millinery.

COLORED FOOTWEAR IN VOGUE

Black and White Combinations Still Popular, Though Not in the Latest Style.

Great attention is paid to footwear by well dressed women of the present. The most dressy styles are the sandal with the instep and without buttons. High button boots have sended otrep openings, and low shoes in sandal strap style are the latest word.

Low-cut slippers are loced in sandal fashion with ribbons or leather straps across the instep, and fasten around the ankle. Sometimes the strapping is simulated by an openwork design. This gives to the slipper a more permanent shape and appearance. Ankle strings were fastened et will when the shoe is worn.

Lace shoes in English style have the vamp of the shoe in black leather, with a tan or beige cloth top, which is trimmed with strips of brown leather. Over the strips cover the instep and the back seams of the gaiters. If a shoe is worn in a brown leather with a brown cloth top those little strips or bands are in black to afford a contrast.

Black and white combinations in footwear continue to be popular, in spite of the fact that colors are the current feature in costumes. Black patent leathers with white stamped leather tops, both in high button and in low button shoes, are much worn. A very smart model has a gaiter finish of white silk stitching over which the instep piece of white leather fastens with impression onap buttons.

ARTISTIC EFFECT IN FLOWERS

Each Woman Must Study Her Personality and How Best to Achieve the Desired Effect.

Roses are best for evening wear. Even if they are buds do not wear three or four of them, as that would spoil the artistic effect. Have one bull-blown crimson rose, or a delicate pink one if you are dark haired, and tuck it into the coil of your hair, allowing it to nestle close to the ear. A pink rose will look well in the golden hair of the blonde girl. Some blondes may wear a yellow rose with good effect.

The smart way to wear flowers on the tailored suit it is to attach them to the left lapel of the tailored coat. Violets look best worn near the waist line just a little to the left side, and tied with soft, narrow, shaded violet satin ribbon.

The girl who is just now wearing quaint fichus and has a fancy for parting her hair in the middle and dressing it in a Japanese effect can wear old-time garden flowers with artistic effect. They should be made into small bouquets and fastened to the chiffon scarf or the fabric until fichu, or a bunch of loose flowers may be worn at the corsage. Yellow roses are considered especially pretty as attractive corsage bouquet.

A pretty custom is to wear one flower which becomes associated with your personality. Not every girl can afford expensive jewelry, but she can always have flowers.

Blue and White Japanese Crepe.

There is no reason this popular for out having attractive summer furnishings for one's self and one's home. Artistic goods are not very reasonable.

Particularly pretty blue and white cotton crepe in Japanese effects can be purchased for 33 cents a yard. This material is to be had in many draperies for windows, table covers and sofa pillows. Besides the fact of its decorative and thrifty blue and white is one of the coolest-looking combinations for hot weather that one can select.

Silks for Wraps.

Moire silks are one of the accepted novelties for wraps, combining purposes and for garnitures. Brocades and matelasses in variety are being largely used for outer garments, combinations, trimmings, and conference is expressed in an increased distribution during the forthcoming fall season. Small and printed chiffons are staples.

INCREASED DEMAND FOR HARNESS HORSES

Prize Winning Team at the Albany County Fair.

(By J. M. HILL.)

In spite of the marked increase in use of automobiles all over the country, it is a well-known fact among horse dealers that the right kind of harness hors is scarce and high. The real lover of horse flesh still selects a lively sentiment regarding their equine friend, and this sentiment expletia itself in a practical way by good prices for the first class light harness horse, or roadster.

The right combination and disposition and the firm actual requisites of a high-class light, harness horse, every quality above mentioned in a successful one, it is safe to say mentioned. Without these four excomplishments an animal of the roadsted class cannot command the topnotch price on the market, as it is greatly to the advantage of the farmer, who at the same time is a breeder, to remember these requisites. It may be safely said that without style the light harness horse does not elicit admiration, that without speed he cannot keep pace with the times' and that without beauty of appearance or conformation he will not set off handsome trappings as well equipage—and lastly that lacking a docile disposition he is practically useless for the purpose for which he is meant.

No animal used by man needs to be so carefully handled and trained as the roadster, for oftentimes he is driven by some one unfamiliar with his nature upon his docility depends the safety of their lives.

In these days of horse terrifiers—such as motor-cars, bicycles, traction engines and the like, a horse must be thoroughly broken to be sold as safe, and "bolt jockey." Will not be facious as far as all ordinary objects are concerned, yet he must be imbued with the proper amount of spirit when occasion demands.

It is conceded fact among horsemen that the American trotter is the fastest light harness horse in the world, it is natural to suppose that the former who wants to raise light harness horses will choose a trotting bred sire, where as in whose veins flows a generous infusion of their trotting or thoroughbred (running blood). This line of breeding should bring desired results in the way of colts which will later on develop into road horses of a high type.

The writer well remembers e race horse, strictly thoroughbred, who in doing his work, under the saddle would trot a mile in 2:06 and he was a good trotter besides at that. The late Senator Leland Stanford of California raised many great horses in that line of breeding which by breeding his great stallion Electioneer to mares that are practically thoroughbred. So it goes, running and trotting blood lines a resist, and a trotter must necessarily be a good roadster even if he is never put into regular trials ing.

We will suppose that a farmer has a pair of mares, and suppose that he has raised, breeding, style, conformation, edurance and speed are up in the standard. This pair will perform well in single and double harness, and if the latter, he should be not less than $600 to $800, may be a little more. Could not be induced to sell for less.

The writer feels assured that the above figures are not extravagant in the least, as the demand for a high class pair of harness horses is very good, but horses of this class must come up to the requirements of the trade.

COMFORTABLE HENS ARE THE LAYERS

Anything in Poultry Line Finds Market, but High Prices Paid for Choice Goods.

(By M. K. BOYER.)

Each year the public grows better understand the care of poultry, knows their wants and has discovered how to keep them comfortable. The comfortable hens are the ones that do the laying.

About thirty years ago when poultry farming was young, as a business, a city egg was a rarity. Eggs were sold before there would be such a surplus of stock that prices would go tumbling, but notwithstanding that there are ten successful plants today to every one that failed then, the demand does not half reached!

Today the increase of supply came the increase of demand and today we have a poultry business the demand than we ever were.

However, there is a change in the market which must not be lost sight of. Almost anything in the poultry line will find a ready sale, if it comes along given to the "fancy goods."

The word "fancy" implies more than appearance. It means also quality. Poultry and egg buyers are becoming particular, but they are willing to pay for their goods. If they want the brown eggs they will not take white, and if they prefer the white they will not be one to imposition. The market today demands choice, plump, fresh stock. Have you got it? If so, the market is waiting for you.

We have today quite a number of broods, and all, to a certain extent, are practical. But they will not, any one of them, fill all the purposes, therefore, it is necessary for you to select on this such breeds as will best serve his customers.

Of the native list of breeds none will meet the demands of Americans so satisfactorily as do the American varieties, and in this class the most popular are the Wyandottes, the Plymouth Rocks, with the Rhode Island Reds closely following. Also our American strains of Light Brahmas and Leghorns.

The Brahmas belong to the Asiatic class as a breed, but the Light Brahma of today, as our people have it, differs from that bred in England that one will hardly suppose them to be of the same family. This is also true of the Leghorns, which belong to the Mediterranean class.

Rye a Poor Ration.

Rye is the poorest of poultry grains. Corn and buckwheat should be fed sparingly, as they are very fattening. Wheat feeds as a well balanced food, and barley is a close second. Feeding too much buckwheat has a tendency to produce a vile odor and light-colored yolks in eggs.

Comfort for Calf.

Plenty of pure water and a shady place to feed dies are two things that are said to provide for calves, yet when found in them

SELECTING AND PREPARING SOILS

Good Supply of Decomposable Organic Matter Helps Bacterial Action of Plant.

Many people make the fatal mistake of expecting alfalfa to do well on soils that are not fit properly to produce any kind of crop, says Bulletin 28 of the Purdue experiments (Indiana) station. There is just as much need of care in selecting and preparing for alfalfa as for any other crop, and probably more, because of its rooting habits and large plant food requirements.

Deep, loamy soils with open subsoils are undoubtedly best for alfalfa, but there is plenty of evidence to prove that it can be successfully produced on almost any type of soil. From light sands to heavy clays, and peats or mucks to heavy clays, if the land is well drained, sweet, and properly supplied with organic matter and available plant food, alfalfa can be produced by the Purdue station in recent years in cooperation with farmers in northern Indiana, 68 out of 82 clays, 167 out of 183 loams, and 69 out of 77 sandy soils gave satisfactory results.

Many soils that at present are not fit for alfalfa can be made so by providing drainage facilities, correcting acidity, adding organic matter, or supplying needed plant food, according to the requirements. Good drainage is essential to make that the roots may go deep into the soil. Hardpan must be broken up or avoided altogether. Soils that are sour may be made sweet by thorough drainage and the application of lime.

A good supply of decomposable organic matter in the soil helps the bacterial action in making plant food available. Stable manure is the best lasting, grooses, and together with a good drainage prevents heaving in the spring. For soils that are out of condition in this respect, a good way to supply organic matter is to plow under green manuring crop before seeding.

Peat and muck soils may be used for alfalfa if they are well drained and properly supplied with mineral plant food. Potash is nearly always lacking in these soils and often phosphoric acid and lime must also be supplied to the poultry. A clay subsoil or a flooding are not good for alfalfa.

Cleanliness With Ration.

Always discard any decayed potatoes or other vegetable, and cut away any decayed portion, before boiling them for feeding to the poultry. A clean chicken a rotten potato as much as you do, and if forced to eat it, she is harmed thereby.

Largest Incubator.

One of the largest incubators in use for hatching chicks is to be found in New Orleans. It is operated by electricity and the heat is automatically regulated by the system.

The Long Prairie Leader is literally forking the Minneapolis Journal to cut its own words as to the seven-senator bill. The Journal has been hunting around to find some argument that will hold water to justify its stand against the seven-senator bill but thus far its diligent search has been fruitless. Among the country press of the state the only fault found with the proposed law is that it doesn't limit the representation of densely populated districts enough.—Owatonna Tribune.

The Wadena Pioneer-Journal has "absorbed" the Wadena News. The Pioneer-Journal has shown a remarkable capacity for absorbing and has in the twenty years of its existence disposed of several competing newspapers representing investments aggregating fifty thousand dollars. The publisher of the News put in a fine equipment and had all the capital he might desire to use in making his paper a good one, and, according to his own statement, he used the capital. What he discovered, he says, was that a town the size of Wadena cannot have two good papers unless they are run at a loss—which the newspaper service must be of a low standard or the business unprofitable. The latter is the case the town for fewer and better papers, which is to the advantage of the subscribers and the advertisers as well as the publishers of local papers. The Pioneer-Journal is so good a paper that the people of Wadena had nothing to gain and much to lose in the encouragement of a second paper.

CO ADJUTORS' REMARKS.

Roscoe Religion: In 1908 Senator H. E. Sundberg of Goodhue, Rittner county, filed a complaint against an insurance company for charging what he thought was too much for transportation. He spent $4,000 of his own money in fighting his case, and as a further effect of his suit the interstate commerce commission has now ordered reductions at express rates.

Clara City Herald: A town that is not good enough to spend your money in, isn't good enough to make money out of, says the Dawson Sentinel, and there is more truth than poetry in that statement. The man who hounds all his earnings to spend in another city or state is a most miserable wight and should be hounded a trifler to the community. We have had examples of such men right here in Clara City.

Pine River Sentinel-Blade: Somehow it reports that Beltrami county wished to borrow $250,000 from the state to dig drainage ditches and that it can not get it because the state auditor reports that the state has no funds available and is a million dollars behind on applications for loans from municipalities. Every dollar of the money asked from the state by localities—counties, cities, school districts, etc.,—is needed for domestic developement. Yet applicants are confused because millions of the state money are loaned to other and distant states which are paying 2% to 3 per cent for the accommodation. Meanwhile Minnesota itself at home owing money rather liberally and is paying 5 per cent for it.

RULES OF THE ROAD.

Adopted by the Anti-Automobile Society of America.

The owner of an automobile who has probably been compelled to travel in the wake of a speedy country rig sack for several miles and then learned that he was on the wrong road is probably responsible for the following rules of the road that have been suggested to him by the anti-automobile society:

1. Upon meeting an approaching team, the automobilist must stop, cut off the power, throw off the clutch, put on the emergency brake and in case of a runaway, jump.

2. In case an automobile meets a team run away, the penalty will be $25 for the first mile, $50 for the second mile and $100 for the third and each mile in addition to the usual penalty.

3. On approaching a corner, where he cannot command a view of the road ahead, the automobilist must stop and whistle for posts from the town, and the horn, or gong, or bell, or whatever he has, and wait at least ten minutes intervals of five minutes.

4. Automobiles may be made to seasonably extend the top so that they will merge with the general landscape and not be startling. In the country in spring, golden in summer, red in autumn and white in winter.

5. Automobiles running on the country roads at night must send up a rocket every ten minutes for the first hour and every half hour thereafter, showing their large and shining flames earthward.

6. All members of the Society will be required to wear a uniform consisting of a slouch hat, a linen duster, making arrests and otherwise discouraging country loafing that they may.

7. Each car's horn will not pass an autoed automobile without tooting it in order to call the driver's attention to the passing and conceal the facts in the press.

8. In case an automobile approaches dusty, it must slow down to one mile per hour and remain behind the rig until the dust of the chauffeur must be buried in front of the house with a hand sprinkler worked over the dashboard.

SYNOPSIS.

George Anderson and wife see a pedestrian struck down by a motor car. They assist him home. He proves fortunate, with his hands in the snow and on his head. Connection attracts them to the Clermont, a fashionable apartment house, where Edith Challoner has fallen dead of strychnine poisoning. Her husband, Dr. Challoner, is under suspicion. Anderson, who is a detective, takes up the case. They become involved in a mystery in which a letter found near the scene of tragedy is believed to be the weapon used. Mr. Challoner tells of a batch of letters found in his daughter's desk, signed "Initials Only," and of a threat made by a man who said that the writer was displeased. This threat was signed by Orlando Brotherson, who is connected with Parenthood as Identity Protection, who is to address a meeting of anarchists.

But before an answer could be shouted back, this man was drawn fiercely inside, and the scramble was renewed, until with George's head in Sweetwater's whisper at his ear:

"It's no police. The chief has got ahead of me. Was that the man were after—the one who shouted down?"

"No. Neither was he the speaker. The voices are very different."

"We want the speaker. If the boys get him, we're all right; but if they don't—wait, I must make the matter sure."

And with a bound he vaulted through the window, whistling in a peculiar way. George, thus left quite alone, had the pleasure of seeing his mate protector mix with the boys as he called them, and ultimately crowd in with them through the door which had finally been opened for their admittance. Then came a wait, and then the quiet recuperance of the detective alone and in no very amiable mood.

"W-ll?" inquired George, somewhat breathlessly. "Do you want me? They don't seem to be coming out."

"No, they're gone the other way. It was a red hot scent—a regular scent—and no mistake. They have arrested one of the speakers, but the other escaped. How, we have not yet found out; but I think there's a way out somewhere by which he got the start of us. He was the man I wanted you to see. Had black, fiery, deep-set eyes, but at the end of my resources. If you'll have patience with me and accompany me a little further, I promise you that I'll only risk one more failure. Will you be so good, sir?"

CHAPTER IX.

The Incident of the Partly Lifted Shade.

The two took a car which eventually brought them into one of the obscure quarters of the Borough of Brooklyn.

The sleet which had stung their faces in the streets of New York had not been left behind them somewhere on the bridge, but the chill was not gone from the air, and George felt greatly relieved when Sweetwater paused in the middle of a long block before a forbiddingly tenement house of mean appearance, and signified that here they were to stop, and that from now on, mum was to be their watchword.

What kind of haunts were these for the cultured gentleman who spent his evenings at the Clermont? A tenement—such a tenement as this—mean home—home for himself or for those he counted his friends, and such a supposition seemed incompatible with my poor husband, with the memory of the gorgeous parlors of the Clermont in his mind.

"An adventure! certainly no adventure!" flashed through my poor tired mind, as he peered, in great curiosity down the row of flats before him, into a dismal rear, opening into a still more dismal court. Should he be suspected to penetrate into those dark, ill-smelling recesses, or would he be fool up the long flights of naked stairs, so feebly illuminated that they gave the impression of extending indefinitely into dimness and dismay heights of decay and desolation?

Sweetwater seemed to decide for the rear, for leaving George, he stepped down the hall into the court beyond, where George could see him casting inquiring glances up at the walls above him. Another tenement similar to the one whose rear end he was contemplating, covered behind, but he paid no attention to that. He was satisfied with the rear, and with a glove and camo quickly back joining George at the foot of the staircase, up which he silently led the way.

It was a rude, none-too-well-cared, for building, but it looked respectable enough and very quiet, considering the mass of people it accommodated. One flight—two flights—three—and then George's guide paused, and, leaning back at him, made a gesture. It appeared to be one of caution, but when the two came together at the top of the staircase, Sweetwater spoke quite naturally as he pointed out a door in their rear:

"That's its room. Well keep a sharp watch and when any man, no matter what his dress or appearance, comes up these stairs and turns this way, give him a sharp look. You understand?"

"Yes; but—"

"Oh, he hasn't come in yet. I took pains to find that out. You saw me go into the court and look up. That was to see if his window was lighted. Well, it wasn't."

George felt non-plussed.

"But surely," said he, "the gentleman named Brotherson doesn't live here."

"The investor does."

"Oh!"

"And—but I will explain later."

The suppressed excitement with which he said this made George stare. Indeed, he had been wondering for some time at the manner of the detective, which showed a curious mixture of several opposing emotions. Now, the fellow was actually in a tumult of hope or impatience—and, not content with listening, he [illegible] down the hall and [illegible] well of the staircase, and when he was not doing that, tramped from end to end of the narrow passage-way separating the head of the stairs from the door he had pointed out, like one to whom minutes were hours. But when, after some half hour of this tedium and suspense, there rose from below the faint clatter of ascending footsteps, he remembered his mask companion and beckoning him to one side, began a studied conversation with him, showing him a note-book in which he had written such phrases as these:

"Don't look up till I say the word" and "Don't change your position."

There's nothing to fear, he doesn't know either of us.

If it is a face you have seen before it will be a surprise to you, and a decrease, pull your necktie straight. It's a little on one side.

The man they were waiting for was no further up than the second floor, but instinctively they all turned and frowned to his recitals, and he was only relieved from the premature rearrangement by a warning look from Sweetwater.

"Not unless you know him," whispered the detective.

The footsteps below paused, and George heard Sweetwater draw in his breath with a irrepressible exclamation. But they were immediately resumed, and presently the head and shoulders of a workingman of uncommon proportions appeared in sight on the stairway.

George cast him a keen look, and his hand rose instinctly to his neck and then fell back again. The approaching man was tall, very well-proportioned and carried himself erect, and his face—such of it as could be seen between his cap and the high collar he had pulled up about his ears, conveyed no exact impression to George's mind, and he did not dare to give the signal Sweetwater expected from him.

"You're not sure?" the latter cried at the end of my resources. If you'll have patience with me and accompany me a little further, I promise you that I'll only risk one more failure. Will you be so good, sir?"

CHAPTER IX.

The

IMPROVING the CORN CROP

By HORACE MARKLEY.

It is surely an amazing fact that the corn crops of the states should average year after year only about 30 bushels to the acre. The acreage planted is increased by millions from year to year. Vast areas of virgin territory are constantly being brought under cultivation. It is a matter of record that many farmers raise 100, 200, some as high as 300 bushels to the acre, yet the average for the entire crop is never increased.

Is it likely that there is anything wrong with the government figures? I do not think so. There is as much care given as is possible to insure accuracy, and I daresay that many farmers, even if they raise more than 30 bushels to the acre, will feel satisfied that the figure are correct from his knowledge of what the average yield is in his district.

The farms are filled by a pretty good type of farmer, on the whole, hard working and fairly intelligent. The best that we have been able to produce of the true American, and for the most part the best of the sturdy sons of the soil from many foreign lands. We have a national department of agriculture that has been the envy and the care of the world, which is to a sense, a farmer's university, and the sole aim and purpose of which has been and is, to make better farmers. For a generation or more, it has striven by study, experiment and printer's ink lavishly distributed, to educate the farmer and bring him to a higher level as an efficient tiller of the soil. Through the work of the many professors it has presumably told the farmer much about seeds, and soils, and methods of cultivation, and of protection from insect pests, an infinite variety of details about the vital facts concerning his business, yet the result remains the same, so far as corn is concerned, year after year—thirty bushels to the acre.

In almost every state in the Union there is now, and has long been, an agricultural experiment station, working in co-operation with the federal department of agriculture and hand and hand with the farmers of the state to educate him. The stations are equipped with professors, and experts, many of them of the highest authority in the land, vast tracts are under experimental cultivation, they have been planning, working, testing soils and seeds, and fertilizers, to aid the farmer in the exercise of economy and the growing of better crops. The net results of their labors they are constantly disseminating by means of lectures, and correspondence, and bulletins free, for all who want them, of such—yet the net result after all these years is an average of 30 bushels to the acre for corn.

The agricultural colleges have gone even further than this. We have in many instances not been content to work and bother over and study the results of their labors for the benefit of progressive farmers, they have been militant in their work, have instituted campaigns of education by sending out scores of corn lecturers on special trains, right in the heart of fertile districts, and getting the farmer heart-to-heart talks, and object lessons in better farming methods; telling him about soils, methods of cultivation, seed selection, inviting them freely to ask questions, to the end that he may become a more efficient worker and acquire better crops. Although this has been going on for years and beyond question many have profited by it, yet the average yield for corn the past year was but the same—30 bushels.

Is it possible that the present type of farmer has reached the limit of his capacity to improve? It may be so. At any rate, besides all this there is an agricultural press, of vast proportions throughout the states, working hand in hand with the farmer and keeping him posted on everything that may be of help to him in his business. Many farmers take several such publications. Then again, the tools that are available to the farmer for his work are far superior to what they have been in the past, and are improved every year. Is it possible that the farmer is not as a class taking advantage of the best tools for his work?

What is the first thing to be done in the growing of better corn crops? I think, in seed selection. There is nothing startling or original in this, I admit; it is the doctrine that has long been preached, but I would simply add my testimony from the results of my experiments with the hope that it may lead others to try along the same line. There is nothing difficult about it, there is certainly nothing costly; it amounts to simply a little more thorough and intelligent heart interest in one's labor.

The seed corn that will yield tofold what he has been accustomed to, setting the farmer must breed for results. He has got to improve the corn in the same way that he would raise the standard of his stock or his grain. And once he has secured a type of corn that shows increased productiveness, he must try to keep it true to kind through breeding and retain its stamina, with the same watchfulness and care that all breeding demands.

It does not require a scientific education to grow more and better corn or better crops of any kind. It does require brains, it does require that things to be done is to get out of the beaten tracks of working. Corn, especially, is one of the most adaptable crops of the farm. Because it will grow and give some returns under a lot of neglect—it gets it.

Take corn as an example. The average farmer more careless than in his selection of seed, and this may be said to be the prime secret of his failure. He never is plowing, manuring, performing all the operations that can be given to harvest, year after year, and with most of these he takes considerable pride; for instance, I know farmers who are perfect plowmen; they know and are proud of their skill, but in the spring time, they go to the crib and pick out sufficient likely ears from what they have and use that for seed, and let it go at that.

It is a enigma how a man can be so skilled as a workman in many respects and yet be absolutely inert to one of the most vital factors of increasing perfection in that work. It needs no argument for it has been demonstrated over and over again that the breeding of plants can be brought with as much certainty as to results, as the breeding of animals. Then why not do it? The only added equipment which nine out of ten require is the exercise of more intelligent care and precision in some of the details.

It seems strange, but it is nevertheless a fact, that most farmers are content to let the work be done in plant breeding, and know the general principles, but they will not wake up to the practice of them in their own interests.

If we are to increase the corn yield we have got to get it in the breeding of better corn, by the selection of seed—and this may be said to be the prime secret of success. The only added equipment which nine out of ten require is the exercise of more intelligent care and prevention of disease, it might have been thought that there was little left for surgery and medicine to accomplish, but the report comes from New York of an operation hitherto deemed impossible, which bids fair to be successful and to prove a life practically given over.

The spine of Vito Tassquika had been affected by dorsal tuberculosis, and he was in imminent danger of death. The spine is one of the most delicate portions of the human anatomy, and tubercular affection of the spinal column has been deemed well nigh hopeless.

Yet surgeons have succeeded, in Tassquika's case, in removing a three-inch segment of the diseased spinal column and substituting therefore a healthy shin bone. The patient, it is reported, is on the road to recovery, and is likely to completely regain his health.

It is truly marvelous. It is the remaking of man by the surgeon's giving him almost the ability of create anew his crushed tissues. Who would seem as if science should do little more for humankind, and yet the scientific grovelers are but preventive medicine and conservative surgery are, simply in their infancy. If this be true—and we cannot dare doubt it—future generations will have cause to be profoundly grateful.

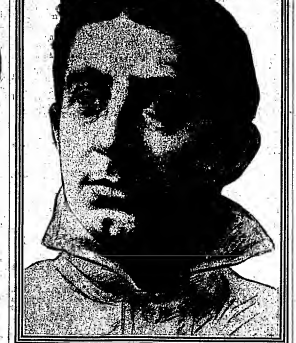
MANY DISCARDS BACK IN MAJOR LEAGUES



Johnny Kling, Now With Cincinnati.

The present year is one of the greatest in history for the genus comeback. Players regarded one year ago as has-beens of the deepest quality have been dragged back in numbers to the big show from either retirement or the bushes to bloom forth once again as capable members.

Probably the top of the comeback list should be assigned to Fred Falkenberg, otherwise known an Long Cy, who has pitched Cleveland back onto the map, showing even more surprising form than his team-mate Vean Gregg. He has become the pop-eyed favorite of Nap fans. When Falky was sent away to Toledo a little over a year ago, he was figured a dismal failure.

Jack Knight, who has been with the Yankees but a short time, going back to his former love in trade with Jesse Cly for Baker Rotion, has proved a tremendous improvement over the latter at first base. George McQuillan, who made his re-debut at the same time with the Phillies, appears like the same old George he was when starring with the Phillies three years ago. His time spent with the Columbus American association team seems to have made him a better behaved McQuillan, while accounts for the principal difference in his efficiency.

Another pitcher who has proved a selection is Ed Sweeney, sent south as Dick Rudolph, of the Boston Braves. Rudolph made a wise move when he took the one-time Giant from the Toronto club of the International league. Medford Brown, the veteran and grizzled veteran, has begun to show some of the prowess of his old days. His knee bothers him somewhat, hit the strong right arm with its three fingers is the same. Joe Tinker says that Brownie will be a success with the Reds for at least two more years.

condition too rapidly after his long layoff from all forms of the game. Outside of the pitching staff there have been other comeback failures. One is Claude Derrick, who had to be sent back to Toledo. Frank Frank Chance, of the Yanks. McKechnie, Pitcher Yankee, also has failed to meet Chance's requirements.

Charlie O'Leary, who has been playing a good shortstop for the Cincinnati, is another former big leaguer who has come back. He was good in the minors compelled the majors to give him another chance. His work with Cincinnati has not been outstanding, but this does not merely mean the pitching out of the best looking ears either at harvest time or in the husking. It is necessary that the grower shall watch his corn from the first start of the seed and through the growing.

Vigor, productiveness and early strong should be noted, not merely in the stalk, but in the husk, and the stalks should be marked so that they can be identified at any time. My method is to split but little bits of tin, about 3 by 5 inches, bend them in one side and put a bit of thin wire through and twist this loosely about the stalk when planting the corn. Then I scratch a number with a sharp awl. There is not likely to occur any accident that can destroy this tag or erase the figures

BUILT UP TEAM ON $45,000

Manager Dahlen of Brooklyn Spent but Little Money in Getting Contending Team Together.

How a major league ball club that threatened for a time early in the season to be a contender for the pennant in the National league was gathered together for an outlay of $45,000 is the story by C. H. Ebbets, president of the Brooklyn Dodgers.

Ebbets' figures to prove that the present members of the Brooklyn team were obtained either by draft or purchase at an outlay of not more than $45,000. When Dahlen assumed the management in the spring of 1910 he began weeding out the old material, with the result that Recker, Hummel, Knetzer and Wheat are the only players left of the former lineup.

Hummel was purchased for $1,000 from Hoyleke, Moss, in 1905, Recker, one of the pitching stars of the National league, was drafted from Augusta in 1907 for the ridiculous sum of $500, while Knetzer and Wheat were purchased in 1909 for $2,500 and $1,500 respectively.

Daubert was placed on first base in Dahlen's first year after he had been drafted from Memphis for $1,500. In 1911 the Brooklyn club secured three men: Miller from Duluth, $750; Hagen from Nashville, $3,500, and Erwin from Rochester, $3,500.

In 1912 Ebbets obtained Shortstop Fisher from Newark for $3,000; Kent from Birmingham for $1,000; Allen from Mobile, $5,500; Kirkpatrick from Dayton, $2,000; Stengel from Aurora, $750; Phelps from Toronto, $2,500; Yingling from Toledo, $1,000; Cardis from Philadelphia Nationals, $1,500; Moran from Rochester, $1,500, and Cutshaw from Oakland, for $1,500.

Reviewing the list, Ebbets pointed out that Dahlen has built up a comparatively young team. Of the players he has turned loose, only one, Hob Perdue of the Boston Nationals still draws his salary in the big league.

He is credited with knowing a lot of baseball, and with being able to say "No" as fast as any man in the world if he wishes to.

Story on Frank Dwyer.

Frank Bancroft tells a story on Frank Dwyer, former pitcher for Cincinnati. Al Orth once hit a line drive, which struck Dwyer on the pitcher out cold. Dwyer was taken to the hospital, and after the game Bancroft went to see how the pitcher was coming around. As he approached Dwyer's bedside the latter was just coming to. Looking up he saw Bancroft.

"Where are we, Frank?" he asked. "In a hospital," said Bancroft.

"Is it a cheap one?" asked Dwyer.

One Honest Ball Player.

Bill Klem says Chief Wilson of the Pittsburgh Pirates, is one of the squarest ball players in the game. He relates an anecdote of a game in Philadelphia when he left a decision to the chief. There was a question as to whether a long smash was fair or foul, and Doubs protested Klem's ruling of the latter sort. Klem asked Wilson how it was, and Wilson replied, he thought his own team, and

COMPLETING THE BIG HARVEST

Practically all of Grain Will be in the Shock by Saturday Night.

It is estimated that by Saturday night practically all small grains except flax and late barley will be in the shock—and it is a beautiful harvest. Very little threshing has been done so it is impossible at this time to give a definite statement of crop yields.

Red Lake county is now growing what promises to be the best corn crop in the history of the county and a large acreage. Secretary Richbertus of the fair association says there is no doubt that the exhibit of corn at the coming county fair will be the equal of anything ever shown in the state.

Goodker Got Cup.

In the clay pigeon shoot held in Red Lake Falls Sunday F. S. Goodker got the big score and principal prize, the silver loving cup. BOY CAPTURED WOLF.

Grabbed Animal by the Tail and Hung on.

Very few people have had the experience of chasing a perfectly healthy wolf across the prairie until the brute gives up in exhaustion and then capturing it alive by grabbing its tail and holding fast. Such, however was the case performed by Clarence Lukkanson of this city today.

Clarence espied the wolf on the prairie a short distance east of town and apparently nearly exhausted with the terrific heat, the brute seemed in no hurry to get away. Clarence gave chase and the wolf, while making a desperate effort to escape, was soon overtaken by the chief-eyed pursuer. Being unarmed, there was nothing to do but grapple with the brute or let it get away. Clarence was equal to the occasion, unwrestled for the hard chase and grabbed his wolship by the tail and had not. The animal was too overcome by the heat to put up much of a fight. After a while some of Clarence's friends came to his aid with ropes and the beast was led back to town and is now safely domiciled at the Lukkanson home. He is reported in his vicinity and is ready to fight on short provocation.—Enid Grand Forks Weekly Record.

Dr. Spofford will be in Red Lake Falls Sept. 9. At the Grand View Hotel.—Adv

TERREBONNE

The wedding bells still continue to ring.

Harvest is on. Soon all will be cut and chance will be made for any idle man to get a job threshing.

Miss Lea Beaudin and A. M. Berry autoed to Crookston last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Lackman and daughter, Miss Mable, autoed to Red Lake Falls Saturday, spending the morning out.

Miss Lea Porter is visiting with her sister here, Mrs. Jos. Suprenant.

The two first quarter sections recently sold here will soon be occupied by two families who are going to build and make their home.

On Friday of last week while the church bell was tolling out the noon hour Bapt Beaudin was seen leisurely walking to his dinner at Pete Genereux's where he was harvesting, and meditating but little or anything save the anticipation of two or three chivalries and thinking of the scheme to attach his seven thunder-strings to the screetch horse he had devised for the occasion, when a jack-rabbit greatly surprised him by leaping almost under his feet and away. Upon raising his head he was instantly astounded to see a huge monster animal apparently in pursuit, not 40 rods in the rear. Taking in the situation at a glance, 19 seconds brought him to the top of a 30 foot elm and just in time to see the brute pass, leaping 20 feet to the leap. He then secured a shot gun following the trail to the brink of the Clearwater River through a clump of bushes where he declared the trail ended and the animal must have jumped the stream, about 37 feet, at this point. The wild animal was 6 or 7 feet long and a large head with yellowish stripes around. The young folks don't go out evenings any more.

MINNESOTA HISTORICAL SOCIETY.

THE RED LAKE FALLS GAZETTE—ESTABLISHED 1903
RED LAKE COURIER—ESTABLISHED 1910.

RED LAKE FALLS, RED LAKE COUNTY, MINNESOTA, THURSDAY, AUGUST 28, 1913. VOL. XXX—NO. 48

DEPOT UP TOWN; IMPROVED SERVICE

PERSISTENT RUMOR OF IMPROVEMENT IN NORTHERN PACIFIC SERVICE.

THROUGH PASSENGER TRAINS AND DAILY FREIGHT, IT IS REPORTED.

The Gazette has a report which though it cannot be called an authorized statement, seems to be not without foundation, that there is to be much improvement in the Northern Pacific railway service, changes that if they are to be made will be greatly appreciated by Red Lake Falls people.

If the report is correct the right of way through the city is to be changed so that the company will have an up-town depot. Through trains, Grand Forks to the twin cities, with daily freight service, are the other changes.

If all that is so the Northern Pacific will get a big share, if not the "lion's share," of the Red Lake Falls business. The auditing departments won't know the old town when the figures are examined.

Let us hope—and pray.

CROCKSTON BUSINESS MEN HERE TUESDAY

FIFTEEN CARS IN SOCIABILITY RUN. STOPPED HERE FOR SUPPER.

Fifteen automobiles carrying Crookston people making a sociability tour arrived to this city at six o'clock Tuesday evening. The visitors took supper here and spent about an hour greeting local people. They were accompanied by the Crookston band and the band played a few selections.

They had been on an all-day tour visiting villages and the country to the east of Crookston. In the forenoon they stopped at Dogdale, Mentor, Erskine, McIntosh and stopped at Fosston for dinner. In the afternoon they visited Goodrich, Trail, Lambert, Brooks, Terrebonne and Red Lake Falls. A stop was made at Gentilly on the last lap of the trip after supper.

The plans for the tour as originally made did not provide for the stop at Red Lake Falls and few people here know that the Crookston people were to be here. For that reason few Red Lake Falls people were on hte street to greet the visitors when the music of the band announced their arrival in the city at six o'clock.

IMPORTANT CHANGES OF PARCEL POST

LOWER LOCAL RATE AND IN FIRST AND SECOND ZONES.

During the time that the parcels post has been in operation since Jan. 1, 1913, there have been several changes about which everybody should be informed. These are about as follows:

Abolished the special stamp, ordinary stamps may now be used, parcels can now be sent C. O. D.; parcels can be labeled and invoices or bills enclosed in the package; insurance rates are now 5 cents for packages valued to $25, and 10 cents from $25 to $50; distinguishes between the local and first zone; made the local zone to include all the territory within the local deliver of any office by either city carrier or rural route; increased the second zone so that it includes a radius of approximately 150 miles; the weight limit has been raised from 11 to 20 pounds within the local, first and second zones.

Since August 15th the rate of postage, for the local zone will be 5 cents for the first pound and one cent for each additional two pounds or fraction thereof. The rate for the first zone outside of the local territory and for the second zone or 150 miles from any given post office will be 5 cents for the first pound and one cent for each additional pound or fraction thereof. These radical changes have been made by Postmaster General Burleson, with the permission of the Interstate Commerce Commission, as the law directs.

Under this new rate it will be seen that a package weighing 20 pounds will be delivered on a rural route going out from the local post office for 13 cents, a 10 pound package for 10 cents, etc., five cents for the first pound and one cent for each additional two pounds. Because of this new regulation the publishing of many of rural carriers delivering packages "by request" will be done away with.

With them came Mrs. Drier's brother, August Lieder of Northfield. They are now enjoying a regular family reunion at the Drier home.

GOVERNOR'S PROPOSED UTILITY LAW

EXECUTIVE OPENED CAMPAIGN WITH LENGTHY ADDRESS EXPLAINING PLAN.

The announcement made some months ago by Governor Eberhart that he would convene the legislature in special session to pass a public utilities law providing for state control of telephone, light, power and other public service corporations, created much public discussion. The governor would have the authority vested in a commission similar to the railroad and warehouse commission. The governor has opened his campaign for his "plan" with a public address and he expresses his determination to call the extra session of the legislature. Whether or not you approve of the governor's plan the report of his address will be worth reading.

St. Paul.—(Special.)—Governor Eberhart opened his campaign for statewide control of public utilities in a speech before a crowded meeting of the St. Paul Office Men's association at the St. Paul hotel. The governor said:

FARMERS TOO BUSY TO COME TO TOWN BUT MARKET DAY WAS SUCCESS.

In spite of the fact that the farmers were too busy harvesting their crops to come to town Monday, the State Fair Market Day was a success. Mother and the children came to town and brought a big loads of farm products to be used in Red Lake county's exhibit at the state fair and there is no doubt that the exhibit will be a creditable advertisement of the resources of the county.

Parenteau-Barrow Wedding.

One of the prettiest nuptial affairs of the season occurred on Monday at Terrebonne, when Miss Della Parenteau and Mr. Charles Barrow were united in holy wedlock. The bridal train was punctual and at 10 o'clock marched to the altar to the time of Lohengrin's bridal chorus. The nuptial mass was sung by Rev. Father LaFleur, who solemnly pronounced the wedding vows.

The bride most charmingly attired, looked beautiful with her arm bouquet of bride's roses and lillies of the valley.

Miss Myrtle Barrow, sister of the groom, attended the bride, while Joe Sivren was best man. Cards were issued for the reception and nearly all the young folks between Badger and Lambert gathered at the Brooks hall in the evening where all enjoyed themselves at the wedding dance.

Coffee and lunch served at midnight put all in the right mood and the people went home voting for another wedding.

BIG CROP HAS BEEN HARVESTED

THRESHING RIGS NOW BUSY IN ALL PARTS OF THE COUNTY.

Red Lake county's big grain crop has been harvested and many threshing machines have been started up during the past few days. The crop is a big one. While the yield of some grains in some quarters will be ordinary, the harvest as a whole is a big one and the Red Lake county farmer has every reason to be happy. Not enough threshing has been done to give an accurate estimate of crop yields for the county.

THE INSURGENTS WILL FEED 'EM

FREE COFFEE AND DOUGHNUTS FOR WOODMEN ATTENDING FAIR.

The Gazette has received the following "exclusive story" from the chairman of the publicity committee of the "Insurgent Democracy" of Minnesota:

Minnesota Woodmen will serve free coffee and doughnuts at their State Fair tent. Leading members of the order will greatly increase their membership and influence.

Recent developments have convinced the committee that those who join the state order may remain in the parent order if they like. The insurance department is expected to rule that way. A former contrary ruling was made at the time section three was left out of the bill but since the return of section three the situation has changed and the commissioner has agreed to give a new ruling when the petitions signed by 10,000 members are filed. The committee now has no doubt about the final decision that members may hold both certificates. The statement in the application that the member does not intend to quit the M. W. A. is held to be formal and directory but not compulsory. This will greatly increase the membership of the Minnesota order. The office of the Minnesota Woodmen at Minneapolis, 317 Plymouth Bldg. supplies literature and forms to all those who enquire.

C. B. Bjornson, chairman of the publicity committee, warns the press and public against erroneous reports that go out from St. Paul.

A statement is being sent out by a certain enemy of the insurgents stating that only 120 have signed for the new order in Minneapolis, whereas in just one of the 14 Minneapolis camps over 200 have signed.

McIntosh Hotel Fire.

Monday morning as the early morning train pulled into McIntosh at 6 o'clock parties going toward the depot noticed smoke issuing from the roof of the O'Brien hotel. An alarm was turned in and when the fire department arrived the hotel was filled with smoke and the fire had good headway in the attic and several of the rooms. After pouring about 300 barrels of water on to the blaze the fire was extinguished, but the hotel was drenched from cellar to garret, and the loss from water and smoke will be heavy, partially covered by insurance.

The origin of the fire is a complete mystery. When the cry of "fire" was heard there was a night shirt parade such as was never before seen at McIntosh.

A special train went through on the Great Northern just before noon today carrying the Crookston Elks to Thief River Falls. The train stopped here a few minutes and the "Little Norman Band" rendered a few selections and the Elks made some of the glad noises for which they are famed. The Crookston Elks are to institute a lodge of Elks at Thief River Falls this evening.

YIELD ON HILL PLOT

Five Acres on Longtin's Farm Produced 31 Bushels Per Acre.

Five acres of wheat grown on the Hill demonstration plot on Jerome Longtin's farm east of town has been threshed. The yield is 31 bushels per acre. Mr. Longtin has also threshed 19 acres of his own wheat. This yielded 30 bushels to the acre. However, this grain was on potato land while for the demonstration plot proper ground was chosen. The result demonstrates that scientific methods of farming will bring most satisfactory results.

THE EXHIBIT HAS BEEN SHIPPED

RED LAKE COUNTY'S DISPLAY AT THE STATE FAIR WILL BE GOOD SHOW.

Red Lake county's state fair exhibit was shipped over the Northern Pacific yesterday and will reach the fair grounds at Hamline, in time, it is expected, so that it may be attractively arranged before the the opening of the big state fair next Monday.

The exhibit is in charge of E. G. Rose and he will be assisted in the arrangement of the exhibit and during fair week by L. E. Healy and J. A. Westphal. Messrs. Rose, Healy and Westphal and others have been working diligently during the past few weeks collecting material for the exhibit and it is expected that the county's exhibit will be a creditable one.

Fifteen thousand booklets telling the Red Lake county story have been printed and will be distributed from the county booth.

AGAIN GENTILLY CHEESE SCORES

TAKES SECOND PRIZE IN THE JULY SCORING IN CONTEST FOR STATE.

Father Thiellon this morning received notification from the State Dairy department that Gentilly cheese had taken second place in the six months contest, for the month of July with a score of 96. Gentilly cheese took first prize for May with a score of 97, first place in June with a score of 95, and as the factory taking first prize this month scored 94 in May Gentilly cheese has practically a cinch on first prize for the season's contest at the end of the six months. The letter of notification said: "Your cheese had a very fine flavor, is an excellent sample but is a trifle open." Another great record for the Gentilly factory which has made it great reputation for Polk county by winning state and national prizes. —Crookston Times.

THAW IS FIGHTING EXTRADITION PLANS

ARRESTED AT ST. HERMENEGILDE DE GARFORD, JUST ACROSS LINE.

CHARGE HE IS UNDESIRABLE

Faces Deportation on This Ground—Prisoner Says H- Was on Way to Detroit and Cannot Be Detained.

Sherbrooke, Que., Aug. 21.—Harry K. Thaw, cut short in his flight from the state hospital for the criminal insane at Matteawan, N. Y., by arrest at the village of St. Hermenegilde de Garford, just over the international line from New Hampshire, is preparing in his cell in the county jail here to fight against being sent back to the United States.

Thaw faces deportation on the ground that he is an undesirable alien and extradition on a warrant charging him with bribery. The warrant already issued in New York state for his arrest on a charge of conspiracy, will not suffice to extradite him, in the opinion of local authorities.

Officer on Way.

These authorities received word that the district attorney of Dutchess county, in which Matteawan is located, is on his way here prepared to swear out a warrant charging Thaw with bribery—an extraditional offense—if necessary.

In his own defense Thaw claims that he was merely passing through Canada on his way to Detroit, when his passage was interrupted by arrest. He exhibited what he claimed to be transportation to Detroit in support of this claim and cited the case of Jack Johnson to bear out his contention that he cannot be sent back to the United States by the Canadian authorities as long as he was simply passing through the country and intended to be so beyond its borders.

District Attorney Cooger of Dutchess county, New York, it is understood here, wants Thaw confined as reported. He wants Thaw returned to the United States over that part of the international line touched by the state of New York.

Custody of Case.

Thaw came into the Dominion from New Hampshire, however, and if custom is followed, he would go back to New Hampshire.

The Canadian immigration department at Ottawa wired the chief of police here to hold Thaw under the immigration act, indicating that steps would be taken to deport him. This theory was made almost a certainty by the information that the department had sent back two lunatics over the Sherbrooke with instructions to watch the case and institute proceedings to deport Thaw.

At Coaticook, where he was lodged in the lockup immediately after his arrest, Thaw engaged a local lawyer, He was arraigned before Justice of the Peace Dupuis. The justice read to him an indictment charging him with having unlawfully escaped from Matteawan and without permitting a plea remanded him to the jail at Sherbrooke.

Conversations Are Released.

Three men were arrested with Thaw, but the liberated later at Coaticook. They are believed to be confederates who aided Thaw in his escape. The men refused to give their names or say anything about themselves. They followed Thaw here from Coaticook.

W. L. Shurtleff, the Coaticook lawyer retained by Thaw, denounced the hearing before Justice Dupuis as unfair and said he would apply for a writ of habeas corpus for Thaw prior to the hearing before the extradition commissioner. Should the writ be refused, Mr. Shurtleff said he would seek an appeal.

From his cell in the county jail Thaw sent out to the newspaper men a statement under this caption, typewritten in capitals:

"No one has contended that for the two years that Thaw has been in the Tombs he has been insane. There is no evidence of delusion in the slightest degree as to his part. He has simply crazy to take a pistol to defend yourself against a man who calls you a — and threatens to kill you before morning."

Earlier Story of Escape.

Matteawan, N. Y., Aug. 19.—Harry Kendall Thaw, the slayer of Stanford White, escaped from the hospital for the criminally insane here at 4 o'clock Sunday morning. A dart for liberty through an open gate, a dash into the open door of a waiting automobile that stood on the outside, and a flight like a meteor across Connecticut state line, 30 miles away, accomplished his escape.

The hospital authorities feel certain he is outside the state. Once he Will Arrest Thaw on Sight.

New York, Aug. 19.—New York's 10,000 policemen have orders to arrest Harry K. Thaw on sight. A general alarm for his apprehension was sent out to every precinct in the city. The police acted on request of the Matteawan state authorities. Here is a description of Thaw sent out by the police: "Height, 5 feet, 11½ inches; weight, 160 pounds; brown hair and cyes; dark complexion." The clothing worn by Thaw at the time of his escape was not described.

Guardian Thinks Him Sane.

Pittsfield, Mass., Aug. 19.—Miss Jane Addams of Chicago addressed a peace meeting, marking the conclusion of the conference here of the National Council of Women Voters, representing about 4,000,000 feminine voters in several western states. Urging the need for universal women's suffrage, Miss Addams said that women should have the franchise not only to bring about intelligent humanitarian legislation, but in order to be in a position to follow it into intelligent enforcement.

Wife Closely Guarded.

New York.—Informed policemen took every entrance to the hotel where Evelyn Nesbit Thaw is staying.

Always fearful of her husband, she showed her terror to a remarked degree when she learned he was at large. Her mother, Mrs. Charles J. Holmes, was frightened even more than she and Mrs. Thaw began to go into seclusion until Thaw is found.

"Harry has threatened to kill me," Mrs. Thaw said.

Why Women Should Vote.

Washington, Aug. 19.—Miss Jane Addams of Chicago addressed a peace meeting, marking the conclusion of the conference here of the National Council of Women Voters, representing about 4,000,000 feminine voters in several western states. Urging the need for universal women's suffrage, Miss Addams said that women should have the franchise not only to bring about intelligent humanitarian legislation, but in order to be in a position to follow it into intelligent enforcement.

yond its boundaries, Thaw is free. Only perhaps years of litigation can bring him back and then only in one event—that he be adjudged insane in the state into which he fled.

Five confederates manned the car in which Thaw escaped and a big black limousine which trailed it past the asylum gate. The police have the names under which they registered at local hotels, but Friday night and are seeking them. The hospital authorities believe Thaw has fled to the shore of Long Island sound and hoarded a boat waiting with steam up, to rush him to Europe.

A reward of $500 for Thaw's apprehension has been offered by Dr. R. T. C. Kleb, superintendent of the asylum. Edward I. Berman, the attendant at the gate, past whom Thaw fled in his break for freedom, is under arrest and other arrests are expected to follow in the rigid investigation begun by Dr. Kleb.

The shades were drawn in the dormitories and the inmates were asleep when Thaw left his room. He was fully dressed. The milk man's cart was standing on the road outside as he walked through the storeroom and into the outer court yard of the grounds.

Passes Lone Attendant.

Berman, the attendant at the road gate, was pacing back and forth when Thaw called his name from a door behind him, and apparently did not recognize him.

Thaw, standing a few feet away, approached the attendant, walked with him unlocked the gate and swung it wide to let the milkman enter. At the same moment Thaw stepped out on the further side of the road, opposite the gate, and closed their engines throbbing.

Berman stepped aside for the milk man to drive inside the grounds, he heard the diesel crunch beneath the wheels of the car and saw it flash past him for one of the waiting cars. The attendant immediately was in pursuit, but a flying leaped leaded Thaw safe within the car. The whoole thing was over in a few seconds and Thaw had fairly reached the roadway. They were throwing on a cloud of dust before he had gone 25 feet.

Keeper Sounds the Alarm.

"Thaw's gone! Escaped!" he shouted, bursting into Dr. Kleb's presence, but by the moment the hunt was on.

The great black car flashed like a meteor through Dorcester, 10 miles east of Matteawan, along the road to the Connecticut line.

Early this morning the little hamlet saw three men—and Thaw—crouching low in the recess in the sweep of their rush through the air. They were going 70 miles an hour. Then the car of the fugitives out of Matteawan. At the speed which the black car traveled through Silverton Thaw should have reached the state line within half an hour.

DEAD HUSBAND ON BACK OF BURRO

WIFE PROVES HEROINE IN DETERMINATION TO BURY HER DEAD.

THREE DAY JOURNEY ALONE

Story of Prospector's Death and of the Hardships Undergone to Get Corpse Back to Civilized Camp.

Grizzly Gulch, Cal., Aug. 19. — A tired little woman, leading a burro with a lopsided pack, came down the mountain into the camp and in a few minutes was transfigured into a pitiful heroine. Every man helped to unhitch a rope which fastened a plank coffin to the saddle and carry it into a house where the little woman, who had not wept at all, cried her heart out over the body of her husband.

The Pitiful Story.

Her name, she presently told her new friends, was Mary Stribling. Her husband P. T. Stribling, a prospector, was killed, and his partner was badly hurt, last Friday in a cave in on their claim. She said the injured man was comfortable as she could, placed some provision where he could reach them, and then built the coffin around her husband's body and succeeded in getting it on the burro's back. She walked 24 hours with hardly a halt to reach Grizzly Gulch, where her husband might be buried with suitable rites.

All has been sent to the injured man.

CHEF MURDERS FAMILY; DIES

Found in Home Days After Crime Is Committed—Letter Explains Motive of the Horrible Deed.

New York, Aug. 20.—Leaving for police headquarters a letter in which he repeatedly sought through quotations from philosophers and poets to justify the taking of life, Henry W. Lake, chef in a restaurant, murdered his wife and four children and shot himself, dying in a hospital later.

The bodies were discovered by their Brooklyn home several days after the crimes were committed. The police are not certain whether it was Friday or Saturday that the tragedy was enacted.

"I am tired of living," Lake wrote to the coroner. "My wife is slowly dying and our four children are small, delicate and sure to get trampled on by the surface cars. It is best for them to return to unconscious dust than to suffer." He signed himself "Spencer's 'Essay on the Sufferings of the World.'"

TURKS TO HOLD ADRIANOPLE

Situation Between Ottomans and Bulgarians Is Again Critical, Reports.

Turkey quite clearly has not the slightest intention of abandoning Adrianople, says Reuter. Boy has a force of 250,000 troops, which soon will be increased to 400,000.

Senator Bankhead and Senator Heyburn's credentials would be presented to the senate later.

ORIENTAL LIMITED WRECKED; 2 DEAD

ONE FATALLY HURT AND TWENTY, OTHERS ARE SLIGHTLY INJURED.

FIRE IN TRAIN WRECKAGE

Began to Burn Soon After Coaches Leave Rails—Panic Among the Passengers.

Crary, N. D., Aug. 21.—Two unidentified men were killed, another man was fatally injured and 20 passengers were slightly hurt when the Oriental Limited on the Great Northern railroad was wrecked late Tuesday night.

Cars Leave Track.

The engine, mail car, baggage car, smoker and two day coaches left the rails. The smoker rammed its way through a small elevator. The wreckage caught fire and several persons were believed to have lost their lives but only two bodies were found beneath the wreck.

The exact cause of the derailment has not been ascertained. Relief trains carrying doctors and nurses were sent from Devils Lake, Lakota and Grand Forks.

Only one member of the train crew was injured. The train was traveling rapidly when it left the rails.

The Spectacular Feature.

Great Falls—The spectacular feature of the wreck is the manner in which the smoking car rammed its way into the Duluth Grain company's elevator. Half of the big steel coach carrying the load of human beings was sent crashing through the side of the elevator, tearing a hole in the building, moving it about six feet off its foundation and tilting it over at a dangerous angle.

Fire in the wreckage gave members of the train crew their first alarm. Apparent a hard fight, but the flames were conquered after fierce struggle and a smoking car end two day coaches were saved. It was after midnight before the fire was under control.

Pandemonium Reigned.

Pandemonium reigned on the wrecked train. Nearly all of the passengers were asleep when the locomotive, just after passing a switch on entering the Crary yards, jumped from the rails, dragging the tender, mail, baggage and day coaches with it.

The passengers did not even know yesterday with Provisional President Huerta, that the interview had been cordial and was brought about at the suggestion of Huerta himself; a denial from Charge O'Shaughnessy, as reported by Provisional President Huerta, declaring that there was no truth in the report of an ultimatum demanding recognition from the United States.

Officials took this view that nothing could be done by the United States, at least until Mr. Lind concluded his parleys with Huerta and his cabinet.

One thing that confuses the situation is the fact that only the first part of the Huerta letter rejecting the American proposal had been received.

This was couched in cordial terms and cited particularly that the pride of the Mexican people could not brook the restriction of an international conference at foreign hands.

The world of war was pulled out of danger of fire by citizens. Bodies of the dead were found after the wreckage had been hastily mangled and both were partly burned. Those who were supposed to have been stealing a ride.

Saves Self With Parachute.

Paris, Aug. 21.—Aviator Pegoud carried out safely a sensational experiment in the use of the parachute in descending from his aeroplane while in flight. Rising to a height of 1,800 feet Pegoud pulled the lever attached to a parachute folded on the upper wing. The parachute opened, lifting the aviator from his seat and let him slowly but safely fall down to the ground. The driverless aeroplane fell and smashed to bits. The parachute arrangement is intended for use in emergencies.

Mercury Continues Above 100.

Kansas City, Mo., Aug. 21.—Although the maximum were reported from some parts of Kansas and Missouri, high temperatures are quite general over the two states. In central and western Kansas the mercury climbed well above the 100-mark and the humidity following the recent showers made the suffering more intense than during the dry heat of last week. Six in this state. Ten was born in Pennsylvania and in his early life settled in Ohio. He came up the Mississippi in 1855.

U. S. OFFICIALS ARE PUZZLED

ARE HOPEFUL, HOWEVER, BECAUSE OF DEVELOPMENTS.

President Huerta Denies Issuing Ultimatum and Authorizes O'Shaughnessy to Deny Report.

Washington, Aug. 21.—Hopeful, though puzzled, best portrayed by developments, administration officials earnestly await the receipt of the text of government's complete reply to the American note communicated by John Lind, personal representative of President Wilson in Mexico.

President Huerta and Secretary Bryan received a summary from Mr. Lind yesterday, but the Huerta government's rejection of the American proposals; about 1,000 words of the text of the Huerta reply; a message from Mr. Lind stating that he had been in conference in early hours yesterday with Provisional President Huerta, that the interview had been cordial and was brought about at the suggestion of Huerta himself; a denial from Charge O'Shaughnessy, authorized by Provisional President Huerta, declaring that there was no truth in the report of an ultimatum demanding recognition from the United States.

Officials took this view that nothing could be done by the United States, at least until Mr. Lind concluded his parleys with Huerta and his cabinet.

One thing that confuses the situation is the fact that only the first part of the Huerta letter rejecting the American proposal had been received.

Historic Church Edifice in N. Y. to Be Conserved.

Old Chapel of Trinity Parish Is One of the Two Structures of Their Kind Standing on Manhattan Island a Century Ago.

New York—Blocking the road of progress—there is in the road of temporary progress only—is an offense of which growing cities are wholly impatient. They are apt ruthlessly to destroy for some immediate commercial end landmarks which cannot be restored when, after a few years, the road of progress must be shifted again. New York naturally is particularly apt to be heavy in such matters. Perhaps, in view of the comparative scarcity of historical architecture worthy of preservation, it has more excuse than some older cities for an unsentimental attitude. All the more reason therefore exists for protecting whatever exists that is worthy. And the case of St. John's chapel of Trinity Parish is a timely case in point.

The beautiful old building in Varick street had many narrow escapes already, and Trinity Corporation can hardly claim the credit for its survival to the one hundred and twenty-first year. Rather the vigilance of the newspapers has saved it, as the newspapers again which have widely advertised three recent plans for street improvements to meet new conditions in the region of west side elevated which contemplated once more the sacrifice of St. John's rather than, for instance, any part of the ugly pile of brick across the way—the freight station which was the unroof ed Hudson river depot. The chapel, and though the fashion that erected it has moved far uptown, should still face it. Publicity is doing for it in the house dark, for the organ stains of a Saint-Saens indicated in the following statement from George Mc-Anerny, the borough president of Manhattan, has the streets in charge:

"It is regrettable," says Mr. McAneny, "by all who want to preserve the old landmarks of New York, that nothing should be left undone to prevent the demolition of St. John's chapel. It is believed here in the borough now pending the acquisition by the city of the block on which it stands, and in connection with the widening of Varick street. When the map has been fixed, however, the plan for the widening and apportionment will have the power to change it from time to time, or abandon or the sidewalk. I propose to ask the board to take action upon this not later than the first meeting in September. It is impracticable to obtain action before that time, because any change in the plans at present would involve a delay of the entire street proceeding for widening Varick street, which would mean a long delay."

St. John's chapel is one of the two church edifices that were standing on Manhattan island a century ago, the other being St. Paul's chapel, between Fulton and Vesey streets on Broadway. The Trinity church, which then stood in Broadway opposite Wall street, was also the present Trinity church, which is the third on the site, the first having succumbed in 1839, having been destroyed in the great fire of 1776, and a subsequent structure, erected after that benediction, pulled down to make way for the present one. St. George's, on what was known as Chapel hill at Cliff (then Cliff) and Beekman streets, was the first of the Trinity chapels to come into existence. It was consecrated in 1752 and was destroyed by fire in 1811. The edifice was burned in 1814 and rebuilt, only to succumb to fire after 1846 rebuilt once again on the ground on which it now stands, in Rutherford place.

Robbers Hold Up Soo Train.

Portland, Ore., Aug. 21.—Four or five masked robbers held up the Soo-Spokane fast passenger train on the Oregon-Washington Railroad and Navigation company's line between Pendleton and Huntington, Ore., and looted the Express company's safe, according to the passengers to give up their valuables and firing in intimidation the trainmen. A tramp riding on top of one of the Pullman cars was shot and seriously wounded. It is thought he is to estimate the amount of booty.

Had First House in State, 9

Minneapolis, Aug. 21.—Elmer L. Snyder, 37 years old, 408 Tenth street south, one of the oldest residents of Minneapolis and a pioneer land owner, bank president and real estate man, is dead at his home here. Mr. Snyder once completed the first house in Minnesota, now preserved at Minnehaha park. He owned the first bank here, the first real estate office here and his name. He was born in Pennsylvania and in his early life settled in Ohio. He came up the Mississippi in 1855.

Woman Appointed Market Clerk.

Philadelphia—Mayor Ashbridge has appointed another market clerk here at a salary of $1,500 a year. She is Miss Ida Wood, who has had charge with a higher average than three competitors. She will study market conditions in other cities.

THE LIFE OF A SPANISH FIGHTING BULL

AN EARLY START

BULL fighting is of very ancient and not strictly Spanish origin. The Moors in Spain, in their rare intervals of peace, practiced warlike pursuits, from the teen—not ungrounded, as it proved—of becoming luxurious and effeminate. So the way began bull fighting. The Moor "ish knight, anxious to keep himself and his horse "fit," pursued and speared the wild or semi-wild cattle of the plains. Probably the next step was the introduction of the bull into an arena, where the prowess of the knight could be witnessed and criticised by his friends and rivals. If the rider was unhorsed, he endeavored to kill the bull with his sword. One murder we have he did it with a scimitar; but possibly by this time the Moors had adopted the straight swords of their rivals, the Spaniards, with whom, during intervals of peace, they not infrequently held combined feats de torog, in which both Christian and Moslem vied in friendly rivalry at the slaying of mighty bulls. To quote Mr. Abel Chapman in "Unexplored Spain": "... At this period, during the thirteenth and fourteenth centuries, the knight who, lance in hand, had been hurled from the saddle might draw his sword and with the bull; his vassals being allowed to place the bull (by deft display of colored cloaks) in a position to facilitate the death stroke. Here doubtless originated the art of 'playing' the bull, and incidentally sprang the professional bull fighter." I could not quote Mr. Chapman further, as this is sufficient to show the origin of the "pro," matador, and the general decadence of the sport is not difficult to follow.

As time went on, owing in opposition on the part of kings and queens and nobles, the aristocracy of Spain gradually fell away from the sport, and the mounted gentleman was portion of the spectacle became of less and less importance as the knights withdrew from the contest. Thus, in due course, we arrive at the ghastly farce of the present day, when the skillful rider, who was, if not disgraced, at any rate severely bored if it the horse sustained damage in the contest, is replaced by the professional picador, whose sorry nag is never intended to escape the bull's horns. As the horseman's role in the show is cut shrunk, so has the footman's part increased, until we come to the highly paid matador of the present day. Though not usually patronized by the aristocracy or the army, and nominally condemned by the church, yet bull fighting still remains the sport of the people, and consequently of the press. Shooting, racing and polo have taken its place among the upper classes; but La Corrida comes before everything in the popular estimation. You may go to a race meeting in Spain and see English and French thoroughbred horses, English, French and Spanish jockeys, a fashionable and crowded paddock, police and troops to keep the course—but no crowd to be kept in order!

So much for the importance of the sport of bull-fighting; now as to the animals employed in it and the method of trailing them. It must first of all be borne in mind that the Spanish fighting bull is a very different animal from the big, stolid and solid shorthorns and Herefords which we see in this country. Like the race horse, he is an artificial creature, bred by selection for generations for one purpose, namely, for fight, and I can assure the reader that, with every circumstance against him, he will fight, from "the fall of the flag" to his last convulsive effort to get on his feet again when stricken to the heart. In various parts of Spain there are many stud farms, which keenly compete with each other in producing the best fighting stock. That of Don Miura is perhaps at present the most famous. Fighting bulls are in appearance not unlike the old English longhorn breed on a smaller scale; but as they vary in appearance, they might equally be likened to Jersey bulls (with longer horns) or black Welsh bulls. They vary in color, as three comparatively exaggerated types will show: spots and patches, white with red spots and patches, the dark purple brown with light muzzle and ears and a light brown stripe down the backbone. (This last variety is said to be descended directly from the Aurochs.) The most common of all is jet black all over; at least, I personally have seen most of the bulls of nearly days of calfdom are spent in luxurious idleness on the plains, but at one year old some sort of trial is held, I believe. This I have not personally witnessed, so I cannot give any details. At two years old comes the second trial, and of this I will endeavor to give a short description.

I personally witnessed a tentadero (trial) through glasses, and from a safe and fairly comfortable position on top of the cabin of a yacht on the Guadalquivir. Judging by the behavior of people who were at closer quarters, the role of spectator would at times appear to call for considerable activity, and be unsuitable for a stout old gentleman on foot, or even if mounted, unless he were a good horseman and did not mind "buckeling" about. On the occasion in question I did not notice any dismounted spectators, but I am glad they do attend on foot, and as there is no cover of any description, the mounted must at times have amusement quite as exciting as those taking part in the trials.

Some few days before the tentadero is somewhat as follows: The herd is "rounded up" as we should say, and the cowboys (ganaderos) then divide it, cutting out a large number of decoy bullocks, which they drive some few leagues away. When the two herds are safely rounded up, each under the charge of silent, watchful horsemen, the sport is ready to begin. The farm is en fete (open house, in fact), and lots of friends of the owner turn up, well mounted for the occasion (though, personally, I am not an admirer of the Andalusian). The owner and his sporting friends now appear on the scene, mounted and armed with the garrocha (lance), which is quite five feet long and has a small, blunt point about a couple of inches or less in length. At last the owner gives the signal, the ganaderos let a bull escape. Off it runs to its friends in the distance, and after it gallop three horsemen—two in close pursuit and one following more leisurely. The latter is a picador, or professional horseman. The two horsemen gallop on either side of the bull, but I could not make out whether the one on the left spears on the right and vice versa, or whether the spearing is from one side only, and the other horseman merely rides to keep the bull going straight. It seemed to me the horsemen usually tried to spear the bull "haha"—that is, that it was not always the first man alongside who got "first spear." The bulls, being young and active, gave good little gallops, and were as quick as cats (very different from their later appearance in the ring). I saw one bull charge round and round a horseman at his full speed, as he was between me and the bull.

Generally speaking, after the bull had been "grassed" twice he turned nasty and would gallop no more, but got up, breathing heavily, and faced his pursuers. At this point up comes the picador (called at tentadero correctly speaking), with lance in rest to await the charge, which usually comes promptly enough, to be received with the point of the garrocha and warded off. If the bull charges twice, he is considered good enough for the ring, but should he fail to charge and show a not unnatural desire to escape, after running off second best, his fate is beef or agricultural work in plow or cart as a draft ox. So the sport goes on until all the animals (of both sexes) have been tried. The ladies apparently sit through the trials to see if they are humane and courageous enough mothers for future scions of the illustrious race.

For several years more the bulls graze at their ease on the plains, guarded and guided by the ever-watchful ganaderos, for they are animals of considerable value by this time, with prices ranging from forty pounds to seventy pounds apiece. The occupation of the ganadero, however, seems likely to decrease, if not vanish. Barb wire is changing the face of the earth in most places, and in Spain it is bringing about the passing of the cowboy. Strange that Spain, the originator of the cowboy, should practically see the last of him!

I have often been asked if the bulls do not fight among themselves. They do occasionally, and I had a passing glimpse, from the train, of a regular battle, which was fought in close contact inside an almost dried-up pool. There is, I am told, always a master bull among the herd, who tyrannizes over the rest; and in the "Encyclopedia of Sport" there is an account of how the master bull, unable at last to stand his tyranny any longer, nulls to slay him, and having slain him, carious to relate, stand and bellow mournfully round his carcass until the latter is taken away.

The removal of the fighting bull from the plains to the bull ring is not without interest. If the bull ring is not far off the method is as follows: Some few days before the fight, decoy oxen, with bells round their necks, are tirned out with the herd, which soon get accustomed to their presence. A little before dawn on the appointed day, by the light of the moon, the herd of decoys and bulls are hurried along by side roads and lanes into the town and on to the bull ring. For long distance journeys the bull is tied to an ox, and as the ultimate sorting out of bulls and decoys is much the same, whether it be at the bull ring near by, or at the railway station for a distant fight, a description of the method by which the animals are boxed for transit will serve a double purpose.

Imagine a country railway station of the primitive order; on the right a dusty road leading through olive hedges to a distant town, with market gardens in the middle distance; on the left a single railway line, stretching away in a not too straight line to infinity. Behind you is a large yard or corral, surrounded by high walls and divided down the middle, which is entered by two massive wooden gates. A few porters, then, half a dozen cowboys with their ponies hitched to posts, a couple of guardia civile, and probably a few tourists stand about outside. In the distance are seen the bulls and their decoy brothers, guarded by a single horseman. Presently there arrives on the scene a third party—presumably the overseer.

The cowboys mount their ponies, doing a little "shewing off" as they canter away to the distant herd. Rounding up the bulls and oxen, they herd them for the corral. Some gallops a ganadero, with lance in rest, driving before him a decoy ox. It has been thunder down the Faster and faster, they come, into the post and rail lane, which leads from the gates to the entrance of the corral. Behind, with wild yells and waving lances, gallop the rest of the cowboys. Into the corral dashes the decoy ox; the horseman at the tail wheels at a gallop into the open stable down the lane, coming up with a bang into the stall as a small boy hastily slams to the door behind him. Meanwhile, the entire herd has poured into the corral and the gates are fastened behind them. The ganaderos dismount and come up on to the walls, lances in hand. The small boy pops out of the stable, cracking a whip, and the herd "gets a move on" towards the next section of the corral, of which the doors stand open. Out rushes the small boy, who dives for cover like a rabbit; in goes a second bull, and in it once more and again cracking his whip. The cowboys aid his efforts by leaning over the rails and prodding those cattle within reach with their lances from above. Presently the bull is in the enclosure No. 2. At the right-hand and of this is a lane leading backward in the direction from which the cattle came. Down this is driven the small bull before, a decoy or promptly trots off down this lane to freedom. He is followed at a more leisurely pace by a bull—but not to freedom. The old decoy is driven into the second animal's face. Quickly turning around, he rushes back to the door at the other end and is shut also. Round he comes again, and in the middle of the illusive cloud. He is now in a trap and knows it. With angry bellow he charges the door, sending the white splinters flying. A second charge and he is a prisoner, as well as the small bull before, a decoy or promptly trots off down this lane to freedom. He is followed at a more leisurely pace by a bull—but not to freedom. The old decoy is driven into the second animal's face. Quickly turning around, he rushes back to the door at the other end and is shut also. Round he comes again, and in the middle of the illusive cloud. He is now in a trap and knows it. With angry bellow he charges the door, sending the white splinters flying. Round he comes again, and in the middle of the illusive cloud. He is now in a trap and knows it. With angry bellow he charges the door, sending the white splinters flying. A second charge and he is a prisoner, ready to be sent by train to the bull ring and his fate.

U. S. GRANT, JR., AND HIS BRIDE

This is a specially posed photograph of U. S. Grant, Jr., son of the great general, and his bride, formerly Mrs. America Will, taken on board the steamer just before they left San Francisco on their honeymoon trip to Asiatic trails. It is said that because of the opposition of his son to the marriage Mr. Grant in a pre-nuptial agreement deeded to his bride the greater portion of his $4,000,000 estate.

A VERY MUCH-TRAVELED DOG

Russian Wolfhound Has Circled the Globe With Owner Montgomery Schuyler.

New York.—One of the most traveled dogs in the world is the Russian wolfhound owned by Montgomery Schuyler, United States minister to Ecuador, South America. This dog was born in St. Petersburg and was inherited there while his new owner was attached to this country's embassy in the Muscovite capital. The dog moved from embassy to embassy and from legation to legation with Mr. Schuyler in Europe and then crossing Asia both man and dog found themselves in Japan.

From the land of the chrysanthemum Ibo Russian dog again came east, and in America has been greatly admired from coast to coast. His name, ownership and particulars of reference to him were engraved on the dog's collar in Oriental and Occidental characters. This borzoi grows a lovely coat under all conditions of atmosphere and high temperatures. He is a beautifully made one, but lacking in the Roman face, considered so characteristic of these wolf coursing and tackling dogs. Mr. Schuyler is naturally very fond of his dog, which has borne him company over tens of thousands of leagues on continents and oceans.

INJURED GIRL WAS A STOIC

Uttered Not a Whimper From Her Arm Broken Arm Is Reset by Physician.

San Francisco.—Elizabeth Rood is only thirteen years old, but she is a real "cowgirl." She was bounding up cattle on her uncle's big ranch near Carlin, Nev., when her pony threw her into the air, breaking her arm from the ranchhouse, breaking her arm in two places.

That night she came to the St. Francis, escorted by her uncle, Jack Tore, overcover of the famous Big Tree Wickiup mines of Lone mountain.

Dr. Lane Taylor found the little girl to have the best medical attention and the hands and the physician to reset the bones without uttering a whimper.

BABY HANGS SELF IN CRIB

Peculiar and Distressing Mishap to Little One Asleep in Its Bed.

Phoenixville, Pa.—Strangled to death in her crib, where she had been placed to sleep but a few minutes before, the baby daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Hallman of this place was found by her father.

The child had literally hanged herself. The small body, with the feet a few inches above the floor, was found hanging by the neck between the bars of the crib.

In some unaccountable way the baby had forced her small body through its bed, a wedge of bed-covering preventing the head from following.

TALKING TEMPERANCE.

The Gazette is in receipt of a marked copy of the New York Journal sent him a four-column editorial on temperance might be perused. It might be remarked that about the only temperate thing about that copy of the Journal was the editorial and that was only moderately so.

Bully Hayes, though existing in the largest field in the world, makes no consistent effort to cover the news of the big town, but grabs at the sensational and plays it up "to beat the band." One may be interested in knowing the editorial that appeals to his intellect and affected as greatly thereby as in intemperance in any other thing. Perhaps the Journal finds it profitable to supply the "goods" to satisfy the craving

But the Journal should be more consistent and refrain from indulgence in temperance discussions unless it be in a special holiday editions gotten out for that purpose.

The democratic administration will not strike the responsibility for the fine crop now about harvested.

Vice President Marshall lost the pocket book containing his base ball pass and now he and Mrs. Marshall are not on speaking terms. He ought to be able to live within the vice president's salary.

No doubt the extradition laws need fixing, but no one will regret that Harry Thaw may be able to "fire the country" because of the defect in the law.

The New York Journal says that twenty-five now we may expect the whole United States army to be rushed over the border and all of the battle ships in commission popping it to the crowers from both oceans. But don't you get excited until you hear the bombardment.

"Don't try to look handsome or coy or charming when you are eating corn on the cob. We've been making observations lately and have come to the conclusion that it just 'can't be did,'" says the Hartwood Falls Gazette. And that no doubt is true, but who cares so long as he can get the corn.

The seven senator amendment will have the largest majority of any amendment to be voted on at the next election. With practically no help at all it received a majority of the votes cast on it in every county of the state but three in the last election. With the growing sentiment among them in concerning it, it will sweep the state in 1911.—Long Prairie Leader.

It is to be expected that some of the "reformer" metropolitan papers will play up the war talk, but it is to be regretted that a name country newspaper would say: "The leader Republican president there is little doubt but that there would be no warlike talk left in Mexico to spout about what they will do to the 'Yankee Pigs'" as did one of the exchanges last week. A lot of "mouthings, a few bloody noses or a few slanderous statements by irresponsible greasers is no cause to agitate any cause for a nation to go to war.

nation have greater problems confronted us for solution. Enormous agricultural and mineral resources and unsurpassed facilities for transportation, coupled with a most wonderful genius for invention, organization, and development, have enabled the American people to produce untold millions of wealth and to form the most gigantic commercial and industrial organization ever known to the civilized world.

The effective control of these businesses organized by nation, state, and municipality has long been the object of legislative and executive authority, but not until the present decades has such control become generally effective. This control is specially to public utilities organizations. Prior to the last two decades the control of public utilities was attempted only by the various municipalities. That such regulation, with very few exceptions, has been a failure is now quite generally admitted. It has been found utterly impossible to keep the public utilities out of politics and the constantly changing local influences, dominated largely by ward politicians, have made their campaigns on these issues furnishing such public utilities organizations with the result generally that the public utilities have either dominated the administration or have been made a political football for the benefit of unscrupulous politicians. Only the favored few have benefited by such administration and the vast majority of consumers have been compelled to pay high and discriminatory rates for inadequate and inferior service.

Perhaps the strongest evidence of unsuccessful municipal regulation of public utilities is the rapid growth of municipal ownership. That municipal ownership of public utilities as a cure for the regulating authority must be able to make a full and complete physical valuation of all properties belonging to such utility and prevent the issuing of watered stocks and bonds on which to base fictitious returns and dividends. The municipality cannot control the issue of stocks and bonds. This is a right granted by the state and must be regulated by it. But in order to determine the merits of a stock or bond issue and properly regulate it, the regulating authority must have full and complete jurisdiction of all property involved for the purpose of valuation and be able to enforce its decrees. Very few, if any, of the utilities are entirely within and subject to the jurisdiction of any one municipality. They are either inter-municipal or have their sources of supply and power outside the limits of the municipality. These companies are entering their mains far beyond the city limits. Street cars are reaching out into the adjoining country. Electric light and power companies transmit the currents from power plants located at some waterfall many miles away. Telephone, telegraph, electric and steam railroads are all inter-municipal and cannot possibly, for lack of jurisdiction, be regulated by the municipality.

The Consumers' Power company of St. Paul furnishes light and power to dozens of Southern Minnesota cities and villages. In this case its most valuable and valuable property are the water power plants at Cannon Falls and Hopkins. How in the name of common sense can any city or village dependent for light and power upon this utility corporation deter mine the fairness of a rate by making a physical valuation of properties and enforcing rules and regulations outside the limits of its jurisdiction? Granting, however, for the sake of argument, that this were possible, how can such city or village determine the fairness of a rate dependent upon the issue and security for the entire capitalization of these public utilities is not a municipal problem but a state problem.

2. Deficits Fixing of Responsibility.—The inefficient regulation of public utilities require the definite fixing of responsibility in the issuance of new securities as possible. Under the old system of ward government it has been found almost impossible to fix the responsibility for mismanagement of city affairs. Whenever the advocates of more efficient government start a movement for a change from the ward system to the city wide commission form, the ward politicians, certain special interests and the voting consumers joining with them, would immediately unite, under the guise of "home rule" proceed to defeat the movement. In all such efforts, for years, in each of a number of Minnesota cities have adopted the commission form of government and the remaining cities will unquestionably do so in the near future. The city wide commission form of the commission form of government is the definite fixing of responsibility for the operation of each department in one person elected at large and held responsible to the people through the initiative, referendum and recall. Municipal ownership of public utilities when properly directed by such a city wide commission has been generally successful will not be disturbed ness or securing service more suitable to the need of the community in question, it cannot in any way conflict with present state regulation, but will on the other hand be a valuable aid.

THE GOVERNOR'S PROPOSED UTILITY LAW.

As to the maintenance of separate service and equipment for the purpose of testing products, ascertaining reasonableness of rates, and making behavior by the municipality, it is largely a question of economy. If the local taxpayers are willing to impose this unnecessary burden upon themselves, the taxpayers not affected thereby should not complain.

Whenever disputes arise under the application of the home rule principle between the municipality and the public utilities corporations, the state commission must be the arbitrator in such subject, as in all cases, to an appeal to the courts. It has been found by experience, however, that the decisions of state commissions have been so uniformly thorough and fair that few appeals to the courts have been taken.

FORM AND SCOPE OF THE PUBLIC UTILITIES LAW.

This is a matter for the legislature to solve. In my discussion I have pointed out the essential elements of all the different bills now before us. important. After having made a careful study of the laws of other states, I do not hesitate to state that the Wisconsin law, with some modifications, that apply specially to our state, is the best. Under it Wisconsin has successfully regulated its utilities and while instances of inequalities, inferior service and high rates can still be found there, its commission has performed inestimable service for the people of that state in improving service, lowering rates, and establishing uniformity in accounting and operation.

Practically every state which in recent years has established a public utilities commission has followed the Wisconsin plan and provided for an appointive commission. Minnesota formerly had an appointive railroad and warehouse commission. When Governor Lind was elected, the Republican legislature did not want him to appoint the members of this commission, and for that reason made the commission elective. The Republican leaders in the legislature, who succeeded in securing the passage of this law, acted not in the interest of better service, but purely for political expediency, in the hope that the commission would select employes of the Republican faith only and thus strengthen the forces of the Republican organization. True, Minnesota has been fortunate in the election of good men on the railroad and warehouse commission, but that fact does not right the wrong so justly in its continuance. Under the appointive system, where the commissioners are appointed for a long period, the governor cannot change the entire board except for proper cause shown upon public hearing. This method insures more stability and more service, because the commission can devote all its time to the service required from the expense and troubles of political campaigns and independent of excessive dictation.

Minnesota should profit by the experience of nearly all the other states and make its railroad and warehouse commission appointive. Two more commissioners should be added, making five in all, its name changed to the "State Public Service Commission" and then be given the regulation of all state public utilities. Such arrangement would remove the objections raised against public utilities commissions and would all ways secure to the state an experienced working majority of commissioners. They should be appointed at a higher salary for a longer term, and their employes should be placed under strict civil service.

I am well aware that some of my enemies will not let me make these appointments if they can help it. I must not be forgotten, however, that their objections are not made in good faith. The character of my past appointments furnish the only standard by which I should be judged, and I am perfectly willing to submit the question to the people upon that record. Should I so far forget myself and my duty to the state as to appoint on such an important commission men of inferior qualities or men under the control of any interest in this state or make such appointments as a reward for political services, I earnestly hope, and now request, that I may be made the first example of the recall now before the people for action at the next election. Let us be frank about this matter. My political enemies are not at all afraid but I shall cast my political career aside by making bad appointments on the public service commission. That would not shed many bitter tears if I did. But I am afraid that I shall succeed in securing for Minnesota the enactment of the most important and truly progressive measure ever adopted by this or any other state, and that I shall get some little share of the credit for its adoption.

EXPERIENCE OF OTHER STATES.

While a large majority of the states now have one or more important public utilities under state control, the following states have all public utilities, or nearly so, regulated by a state commission: Wisconsin, Massachusetts, New York, New Jersey, Nevada, New Hampshire, Rhode Island, Vermont, Washington, California and Kansas. During the last six months the following states have added to the list: Maine, Missouri, Ohio, Indiana, Pennsylvania and Colorado. Many of these states have followed the Wisconsin law, adapting it to their conditions. The experience of Wisconsin can, therefore, be used as an example, in addition to saving large sums of money in the operation of the various public utilities by uniform accounting and statistical information, the direct reduction of rates by the Wisconsin commission amounts to about $1,500,000 per year. It is estimated that in reduced rates and economy of service the Wisconsin commission has since its organization made a net saving of about $12,000,000 to the people of that state. This is surely a most excellent record.

Objections have been made to state regulation, because certain public utilities are in favor thereof. Those objections are made only for the purpose of creating prejudice. It is not a question as to who are for or against; it is a question of right, justice and equity. Many public utilities in this state are favorable to state regulation. They know that it must come sooner or later, and also that in other states, where it has proved of great benefit to the people, it has not in the least legitimate business enterprise, but rather helped it by establishing more efficient and economic management, by furnishing expert service and equipment to every municipality in the state at a minimum expense, by providing uniform systems of valuation and accounting, by eliminating useless duplication of service as well as equipment, and by attracting to this service a higher grade of experts and employes through its merit system. The most powerful public utilities corporation in the state, however, has been the leader in opposing state regulation of all public utilities, and through its influence largely the opposition to this measure in the last house was made successful.

It is needless to state that in this, as in other matters, there are many honest men who sincerely oppose state regulation. The strong opposition, however, comes mainly from three sources, namely: the large consumers who receive special rates, the ward politicians, and the Socialists.

As to the first class the opposition is well founded. Under state regulation all special rates and privileges would be abolished. The ward politicians do not wish to let go of the public utilities. This is perfectly natural. Under the guise of fighting for "home rule," they have opposed every advanced movement to strengthen and purify the administration of our cities. They always wanted to do it themselves. When the fight for a commission form of government was taken up, they cried aloud that the wards should be allowed to manage their own home affairs and for many years succeeded in delaying the adoption of a strong centralized city government. The same opposition is raised now by the same powers and for the same purpose. Socialists believe in public ownership.

JAIL BIRD FLOWN.

Man Captured at Thief River Magis Brief Stay.

Chief of Police Erickson and his force received such a surprise early Monday morning when they found that the jail bird which they had been holding for nearly a week had escaped from his cage and taken to the green woods.

Alba Julius Bolinski, John Ward, Jas. Boyd, Jas. Howard, Jas. Ford, whose real name is unknown, while serving a sentence for burglary in Waupaca county jail, Wis., escaped from the prison on April 16th. Circulars bearing his photograph and the offer of $100 reward for his arrest were sent all over the northwest. Chief Erickson of this city received one of the circulars about three months ago. On Tuesday night of last week the chief discovered a man at the Soo depot who strikingly resembled the man being sought by the Wisconsin authorities. Mr. Erickson immediately placed him under arrest and locked him in the county jail to await the coming of the sheriff from Wisconsin. There is no doubt but that he was the right man as he filled every description given even to the long mixed gray toss on his left foot.

At about three o'clock Monday morning Policeman Pare visited the jail and found everything alright. At about six o'clock the same morning he was found that the prisoner had escaped from his cell, sawed through one of the bars protecting the windows and took his departure from his unpleasant place of confinement. His escape has so far been made good and no trace of him whereabouts has been discovered.

Every evidence goes to prove that the prisoner had some friend at large who aided him in making his escape. Alba Bolinski etc., was thoroughly searched when he was placed in the cell and no tools which to effect his escape. The Yale lock of his cell was picked which would be almost impossible from the inside.—Thief River Times.

Moorhead Depot Robbed.

Two unknown tramps, one of them masked, held up Grover Coxsy, night operator at the G. N. freight depot in Moorhead, at 2:30 o'clock Tuesday morning and robbed the cash drawer of $170. The robbers overlooked the receipts from the freight office. Coxsy was bound and gagged before he was relieved of the money.

"I was making out my expense account at the desk and was not paying much attention to anything, when someone said, 'Hello, Jack,' and I looked up into two big black guns," is the way Coxsy described his experience, this morning.

"Two men, One about 25 years old and the other a kid about 16 years, stood holding guns at me," Coxsy said. "'Hand over the coin,' they said, and I put up my hands. While the older one kept me covered, the young fellow came around and opened the drawer and took some in.

They got the cash in small denominations. They left the checks and overlooked the freight house money in a sealed bag. The amount in the safe is not known. They went east after they finished with me."—Pioneer.

SYNOPSIS.

Louise Anderson and Mrs. are a remarkable looking man come out of Clermont hotel look around hastily, and then walk rapidly away. Mr. Thornbrother attracts them to the Clermont, where it is found that the beautiful Miss Edith Challoner has fallen dead, apparently from heart disease, in the arms of her husband in the parlor. The hotel manager declares him to be Orlando Brotherton, Physicians find that Miss Challoner was murdered. Mr. Brotherton is arrested. Amos Sweetwater, a retired detective, and Sweetwater, his assistant, take up the case. They believe Miss Challoner stabbed herself. A paper knife with her initials on it is found. She suffered up to the weapon itself. Mr. Challoner tells of a batch of letters found in his daughter's desk, signed "S. S." All are love letters except one which shows that Miss Challoner had refused S. S. She was visited by Orlando Brotherton. Anderson does with Sweetwater to identify Brotherton, who is to appear a motion picture concerning the case is found by the police. Mr. Brotherton is identified. Brotherton is living in a tenement under the name of Smith. He is on trial for murder. Testimony of his acquaintance with Miss Challoner.

"I see. It made a great impression on me." I shall hope for our further acquaintance, she said. "We have also very strong interests in common." And if ever a human face spoke eloquently, it was hers at that moment. I thought it sprang from personal interest, and it gave me courage to offer me the intention which had taken the place of every other feeling and ambition by which I had hitherto been moved. If she could ignore the social gulf between us, I felt free to take the leap. Cowardice had never been a fault of mine. I realized that I must first let her see the manner of man I was and what life meant to me and must move a bit from the point I contemplated should become an actual fact. I wrote letters to her, but I did not give her my address or even request a reply. I was not ready for any word from her. I was not that either men and I could wait. And I did, for weeks, then suddenly appeared at her hotel."

"This was when?" put in Dr. Heath, anxious to bridge the pause which must have been very painful to the listening father.

"The week after Thanksgiving. I did not see her at once, but met her casually the second. But she knew I was in the building, and when I came upon her one evening at the very desk in the mezzanine which we all have such bitter cause to remember, I could not forbear expressing myself in a way she could not misunderstand. The result was of a kind to drive a man like myself to an extremity of self-condemnation and rage. She rose up as if insulted, and flung me one sentence and one sentence only before she bolted the elevator and left my presence. A sentence I could not have dismissed with less ceremony."

"That is not like my daughter. What was the sentence you allude to? Let me hear the very words." Mr. Challoner had come forward and now stood an aching his reply, a dignified but pathetic figure, which all must view with respect.

"I hate the memory of them, but since you demand it, I will repeat them just as they fell from her lips." Was Mr. Brotherton's bitter retort. "She said, 'You of all men should recognize the unsceminess of these proposals. Had your letters given me any hint of the feelings you have just expressed, you would never have had this opportunity of approaching me.' That was all, but her indignation was scathing. Ladies who have supped exclusively off silver, show a fine scorn for the common ware of the cottager."

The emotion boldness—some could call it bravado—with which he thus finished the story of his relations with the dead lady, seemed to be but more than Mr. Challoner could stand. With a look of extreme pain and perplexity he vanished from the doorway, and it fell to Dr. Heath to inquire.

"Is this letter—a letter of threat you will remember—the only communication which passed between you and Miss Challoner after this unfortunate passage at arms at the Clermont?"

"Yes. I had no wish to address her again. I had exhausted in this one outburst whatever humiliation I felt."

"And she? Did she make no sign, make you no answer?"

"None whatever." Then, as if he found it impossible to bide this hurt to his pride, "she did not even seem to consider me worthy the honor of an added remark. Such arrogance is, no doubt, accumulated in a Challoner."

The thin his bitterness did not pass unchecked by the coroner. "Remember the gray hairs of the only Challoner who can hear you, and respect his grief."

Mr. Brotherton bowed.

"I have finished," said he. "I shall have nothing more to say on this subject." And he drew himself up in expectation of the dismissal he evidently thought pending.

But the coroner was not done with him by any means. He had a theory in regard to this lamentable suicide which he hoped to establish by this man's testimony, and, in pursuit of this plan, he now addressed to Mr. Brotherton to recast himself, but began at once to open a fresh line of examination by saying:

"You will pardon me, if I press this matter. I have been given to understand that notwithstanding your break with Miss Challoner, you have kept up your visits to the Clermont and were even on the spot at the time of her death."

"On the spot!"

"In the hotel, I mean."

"Then you are right; I was in the hotel."

"At the time of her death?"

"Very near the time. I remember hearing some disturbance in the lobby as I came in, just as I was passing out at the Broadway entrance."

"You did, and did not return?"

"Why should I return? I smelled a mare of small curiosity. There was no reason why I should connect a sudden alarm in the lobby of the Clermont with any cause of special interest to myself."

This was so true and the look which accompanied the words was so frank that the coroner hesitated a moment before he said:

"Certainly not, unless—well, to be direct, unless you had just seen Miss Challoner and knew her state of mind and that was likely to follow your abrupt departure."

"I had an interview with Miss Challoner."

"But you saw her? Saw her that evening and just before the accident?"

Sweetwater's papers rattled, it was the only sound to be heard in the moment of silence. Then—

"What do you mean by those words?" inquired Mr. Brotherton, with studied composure. "I have said that I had no interview with Miss Challoner. Why do you ask me then, if I saw her?"

"Because I believe that you did. From a distance possibly, but yet directly and with the possibility of being taken."

"Do you put that as a question?"

"I do. Did you see her figure or face that night?"

"I did."

Nothing—not even the rattling of Sweetwater's papers—broke the ensuing silence which followed this admission.

"From a point far enough away to make any recognition further than a guess impossible. I do not think you will require me to recall the exact spot."

"If it were one which made it possible for her to see you as clearly as you could see her, I think it would be very advisable for you to say so."

"It was such a spot."

"Then I think I can locate it for you, or do you prefer to locate it yourself?"

"I will locate it myself. I had hoped not to be called upon to do more than what I cannot but consider a most unfortunate exposure, but if you insist on the coroner's part for one instant from the top of the little staircase running up to the mezzanine. I had yielded thus far to an impulse I had frequently resisted, to seek by another and an elevator to retrieve the bad effect which must have been made upon her by my angry note. I knew that she frequently wrote letters in the mezzanine at this hour, and got as far as the top of the staircase in my effort to join her. But I got no further. When I saw her on her feet, with her face turned my way, I remembered the scorn with which she had received my former heartfelt proposals and, without taking another step, I turned, I turned away from her and fled down the steps and so out of the hotel by the main entrance. She saw me in the lobby

STATE NEWS IN BRIEF

GOVERNOR MAKES KEYNOTE SPEECH

EBERHART ASKS FOR STATE UTILITY BOARD IN ADDRESS.

OPENING OF CAMPAIGN

Determines to Push Measure Through —House Majority Scored and Combination Charged to Defeat It.

St. Paul.—In his "key-note" speech on state control of public utilities, Governor A. O. Eberhart outlined for the first time the terms of the public utilities bill which he will urge the legislature to pass at the coming extra session. His plan, briefly, is:

Increase the present railroad commission from three to five members, make it opposite by the governor for long terms, and give it control of railroads and all other public utilities.

Adopt the Wisconsin law into the Minnesota statutes, with some modifications.

Give the five commissioners large salaries and provide for a staff of experts and other employees, under civil service.

Retain a certain measure of local control for the municipalities.

Defends Race Men.

The address was delivered at a meeting of the St. Paul Association of Office Men at the St. Paul hotel. It was a prepared speech and had been advertised as the opening of the governor's campaign for the enactment of a public utilities law at the extra session, which he says he will call in October.

In saying that the railroad commission should be opposition, and "two more commissioners should be elected," the governor was believed by his hearers to forecast the appointment of the present three railroad commissioners.

Some reply was made to the attacks on his position. The governor stated that the talk about the public service corporations favoring state control is to arouse prejudice.

Aggressive Towards House.

Governor Eberhart took no aggressive stand toward the house organization, which defeated the Wallace-Knopp utilities bill at the regular session, and passed the Nolan and Minnette bills over the executive veto. He asserted that it was through "the most powerful public utilities corporation in the state" that the state control bill was beaten in the house.

With a threat to take the issue to the next legislative campaign, if balked by the present legislature, the governor closed.

Chief Arguments Advanced.

Some of the chief arguments for the Utilities board were:

Municipal control of public utilities has been a failure, as shown by the Duluth and Minneapolis street railways.

The tendency is toward state control, because it is superior to co-ordinated, competent and uniform.

State control is not intermunicipal, and regulation of rates between cities and local cities is an absurdity.

State commissions are more efficient because of their greater responsibility and continuity of service.

State commissions restrict stock and bond issues, which municipals do not.

Determination of rate questions by city officials who have another interest in politics is unfair.

State commission supplies expert knowledge of valuation and accounting, otherwise assisting municipalities.

Cities may by the present commission, pay the cost of hiring experts, but the state pays the bulk of the cost.

Of all the largest three cities in the State regulation removes public utilities from politics.

Many cities have no makers for betterment legislation, and can only be secured by a state commission.

Municipally owned plants are helped by state regulation, as the state board is likely to get on to bigger financial basis.

Wisconsin's system has worked well and with some changes should be transferable to Minnesota.

Land Seekers From South and East.

Fergus Falls.—This county is enjoying a genuine real estate boom and new men are coming from the south and east on almost every train. C. J. Julian, president of the lowa Holstein Breeders' association, has purchased the William A. Woodhall farm, a short distance north of this city, and will move here and bring a large herd of thoroughbred cattle. He buys 250 acres of land at $40 an acre. Mr. Woodhall immediately purchased the Blim farm just south of the city —a half section—paying $20,000 for it. There has been a steady stream of immigrants from Iowa, Kansas and other states, for some time, and it is expected it will be very materially increased this fall.

Nineteen Ore Boats Set Sail.

Duluth, Aug. 16.—Nineteen ore boats have cleared the Duluth-Superior harbor within the last 24 hours, bound down the lake with full cargoes. This is one of the biggest ore shipping days since the recent strike on the Mesabe and Cuyuna iron ranges. The Mesabe docks are working with a full crew on each shift and the Allouez docks have more than the usual number of men. From the way boats are being dispatched vesselmen predict that the loss caused by the strike will be made up quickly.

Albert Lea House Robbed.

Albert Lea.—Burglars entered the residence of former Mayor C. B. Swenson by breaking through the screen and using a hammer to smash the plate glass door. Jewelry and rings are missing.

Mines Ship 480,173 Tons Ore.

Crosby.—The mines of the Rogers-Brown Ore company, which include the Kennedy at Cuyuna, the Armour No. 1 and No. 2, near Crosby and Ironton, have shipped this season 480,173 tons.

Bemidji.—After having spent a day in Bemidji, members of the State Affairs School Board and officials of the Normal School Locating committee declared their satisfaction over the site offered the state for the new institution. It was agreed that a tract of between twenty and twenty-five acres should be deeded the state. The visitors were taken for auto mobile and boat rides and in the evening for a tour of inspection of the Crookston lumber mill. Those in the party were: Frank B. Lawrance, president of the State Normal School board; C. A. Ballerd, president Moorhead normal; W. A. Schumacher, president St. Cloud normal; C. G. DIES OF A BULLET WOUND

McAlpine of Duluth Thought to Have Shot Himself While After Burglars.

Duluth.—The body of John McAlpine, pioneer Duluth millionaire lumberman, was found dead in the basement of his home with a bullet through the head.

Members of the family and friends do not give credence to the theory that the shooting occurred accidentally while Mr. McAlpine was seeking a burglar who, he thought, had attempted to break into the house through a window. Mr. and Mrs. McAlpine was in excellent health and spirits, friends say.

Mr. McAlpine was about 58 years old and had been a resident of Duluth since 1870. He came here from Eau Claire, where he had operated extensive lumbering interests. He had operated extensively in Wisconsin, Minnesota, California and in the Puget Sound country.

Brainerd Indorses Street Railway.

Brainerd.—The Third ward mass meeting called to consider the Minnesota Central Railway company's street railway franchise voted unanimously in favor of granting it to the company and Aldermen Batcelo and Hanke declared they would vote for it. The company will build a street railway in Brainerd and extend interurban lines to the Cuyuna range.

Services for Seven Drowned.

Duluth.—Funeral services for the seven victims of Wednesday's motor boat accident took place Friday at the Jewish synagogue. Superior's throng of several hundred people attended. Interment at Duluth, as the Superior people was in the Jewish cemetery. The body of Mike Goldberg was taken to Minneapolis. It is probable that an investigation into the cause of the accident will be started.

Tennis Player Drops Dead.

Minneapolis.—Arthur C. Herrey, 1201 West Thirty-first street, dropped dead as he was walking from the tennis court to the club house of the Athletic and Boat club at Lake street and Calhoun boulevard.

Elwell Inspects Winona Highway.

Winona.—State Senator J. T. Elwell of Minneapolis was in Winona on Monday and went on a trip of inspection over the concrete state highway laid in East Burns valley. The first one in the state constructed under the provisions of the Elwell law. It was much pleased with the improvement and commented on the fact that many more miles of such road might be constructed in the state. Today he went to Rochester to meet with the Olmsted County board, which is considering road petitions.

Seventeen-Year-Old Youth Drowns.

Duluth.—Fred H. Fawcett, 17 years old, was drowned in Spirit lake. Wal ter Clarence accompanied him. "I know he couldn't swim and asked him not to go," wished Swanson to the police.

Thirty-five Bandit Suspects.

Moorhead.—Thirty-five arrests were made as the result of a dragnet thrown out after two men had held up the night ticket agent, Grover Cooper, of the Great Northern station.

A NOVEL FARMERS' CLUB AT MOE, MINN.

MEAT CLUB SOLVES ONE OF THE MANY PERPLEXING RURAL PROBLEMS.

FRESH MEAT DURING SUMMER

Old but Unique Organization Is Found in Douglas County Township and Proves Satisfactory to Its Members.

Alexandria.—One of the most novel farmers' clubs has been discovered in the town of Moe in this county. This organization is known as a "meat club," and while it has no formal constitution and by-laws there is a tacit agreement among its members which is complied with implicitly.

Purpose of Club.

The purpose of the club is to supply its members with fresh meat, especially in the summer months when securing good meat is one of the serious problems of rural life. The club has only ten members, although it has been in operation over twenty years. These members meet once each week at the home of one of the members. Monday kills a beef animal, often a yearling or a heifer calf. Each member takes his turn in killing, the slaughtering and the division of the carcase taking place at the home of the member whose turn it is to supply his neighbors with meat. The club keeps an account of what each one receives.

Fixed Prices.

The club has a fixed price for the front and hind quarter cuts, that of the former at seventeen and a half cents, while the hind quarter cuts are figured at 10 cents. The member at whose home the cutting takes place keeps most of the soup bones. No money changes hands except at the close of the season, when an accounting takes place. The affairs are so skillfully managed that often there is little if any cash to be paid to any member.

The members of the club are Gunder T. Winkel, Laurits Larson, Peter Syverson, Peter and Henry Hanson, Cras and Olaus Angen, Alfred Foslin and E. K. Gilbertson. Winkler is the dean of the club,—being the oldest in years and longest belonged, except for a short period; for about twenty-five years. At that time there has never been a word of criticism or a dispute over any of the club's actions.

SCANDAL CAUSES A SUICIDE

Mrs. Blair of Crosby Kisses Children and Drinks Poison as the Sheriff Waits.

Crosby.—After being arrested here on a statutory charge by a deputy sheriff from Duluth, Mrs. Charles L. Blair stepped into an adjoining room, drained the contents of a two-ounce bottle of carbolic acid and died before assistance could be given.

William A. Guith, charged with the same offense, was arrested and taken to Duluth. The warrant for their arrest was sworn out on complaint of Mrs. Guith, who alleged that they had visited Duluth hotels together. Guith is a railroad drill contractor. Both families live here.

Deputy Sheriff Schmieley served the warrant on the pair. He informed Mrs. Blair she was under arrest and requested her to get ready to leave for Duluth. She agreed to go, and, after kissing her two children, each less than 4 years old, she requested permission to go to her bedroom and dress.

Schmieley waited about ten minutes and, hearing no noise, entered the room. He found Mrs. Blair lying on the floor, with the empty phial in her hand. She was dead.

Mrs. Blair was 24 years old. A husband and two children survive.

Two Drown in the Mississippi.

St. Paul.—Fred Boyce, 18 years old, son of F. B. Boyce, auditor of Stanton county, Wash., was drowned in the Mississippi river, near the state fish hatchery. The body of a negro, about 40 years old, was found in the river near the Milwaukee freight house.

Record Year for Creamery.

Caledonia.—The Farmers' Co-operative creamery is having a record-breaking run this year. Over 10,000 pounds of butter were shipped this week. The price has been the high est in five years.

Aitkin Gets New Industry.

Aitkin.—The Jones Smelting company has selected Aitkin as the site for a new plant to be built near or a thorough examination of all the towns on the Cuyuna range. The company, when everything is completed, will employ about 200 men. Aitkin was selected because of its central location on the Cuyuna range. The company will use about 300 cords of wood a day, and will be ready to start part of the work by January 1. The furnace will separate manganese from iron ore and cost $250,000.

Pennington Pit Mine Ships.

Ironton.—The big Pennington pit mine, lying west of Crosby and Ironton, has commenced shipping and in the first three days' work its two steam shovels loaded 255 cars of ore.

Red Lake Falls.—The panther scare was revived when little Willie Krueger, who was hunting snipe in the brush east of town, was chased by a strange animal which he describes as a big white brute with little black spots.

NEW COIFFURES ATTRACTIVE

THE new coiffures have arrived; the most ordinarily pretty conceptions that we have had for years. They answer to a general demand for something new. There are high ones and low ones, but although these fluctuations show that ever-passing and more fascinating. They still preserve some features of those elsewise but rather meager styles. For instance, in all the new designs the ears are still covered.

The hair is as unobtainable a return to the small pompadour which was so universally becoming. A little fringe across the forehead is favored in the dressiest models, but the arrangement of the hair about the forehead varies so that every one may be suited.

The hair may be worn moderately low, as in the evening coiffure here, or extremely high, or just at the crown of the head in a Psyche knot (of which a glimpse appears in the second picture). It is very loosely waved and manufacturers of hair goods are using the same loose and almost imperceptible wave in switches and other hair pieces. Bewitching little clusters of three short, full curls appear either at the nape of the neck or at the sides below the ears.

The new styles are fuller and the effect sought for is for greater abundance of hair than in the severe and somewhat formless coiffures of the past seasons. This gives women a chance to improve the contour of their heads if need be. These new coiffures are built on definite lines; the styles are more striking than those just preceding them; more vigorous, and the finished coiffure achieves the look of careful, perfect grooming; a consummation worth striving for; a charm within the reach of everyone.

The dressy coiffure shown with hair band and ostrich feather decoration is not difficult to arrange. A slight amount in the form of a short, small hair roll forms the pompadour, extending over the top of the head just above the forehead. A strand of hair is brought back from the temples, and another strand is arranged in a loose puff over the ears and extends into the back hair, which is arranged with a little support also. The remaining hair is arranged in big, soft coils across the back, having the appearance of irregular puffs. These little curls are pinned in on each side just below the puff over the ears.

In the second figure the front hair is arranged in the same way except for the curls. The back hair is combed up to the crown of the head and coiled into a regulation Psyche knot. The strand at the nape of the neck is also in the back for the coming season, but the tendency is toward the high effect, so that there will be no difficulty in wearing them with any of the new coiffures. Soft, feathery effects are to be immensely fashionable and they shape themselves to the head of the wearer.

Dressing the hair as in the second coiffure shown here may be simplified by using pinned-in puffs over the ears. With these and a short roll to support the pompadour there will be no trouble in copying these charming designs.

CHIC PARISIAN GOWN

Model of blue and white striped silk crepe with red flowers. The gown is in one piece with short skirt.

Fruit Buttons.

The latest thing in buttons are in the form of fruits, the small ones cherries and grapes, the larger ones apples and plums. These are used for trimming country dresses in light crepe or voile. It must be noted that the buttons are made of the same silk or satin with black velvet heels and sandals of black satin ribbon are the latest suggestion.

For protection from the sun on the piazza or the seaside a new sunbonnet-tea is in white linen with branches of black grapes appliqued all round the edge and raised. It is the cretonne sunshade in matt-color is enjoying much popularity.

Chicky Dress.

An extremely pretty dress of natural colored linen is made with a round extending from the round neck to the hem in front. The neck and sleeves are finished with a scallop, buttonholed, while a wide black velvet girdle gives the long waist-line effect. It is slipped through buttonhole openings either side of the panel and fastens in front with a buckle.

BROWN LEATHER IS EDICT

To Be Really Smart All the Various Belongings Must Be of That Color, —No Matter the Material.

The brown leather era has arrived. You're not smart at all this year if your small belongings are not of brown pelt—real leather, walrus, seal or morocco grain—from your card-case to bills dressing bag fitted with nickel or ivory toilet articles, manicure set and strap bracelet holding a small gold-filled watch enameled. Which, by the-bye, two extremes in leather come immediately to mind—the one of them, the handy pocket kit, consists of a neat leather case containing a large knife, a smaller one with a file and a screw and a wrench. Another is a pigskin case containing a knife, like glass, a folding knife, spoon and fork, and a corkscrew. Another leather con case lined with white flannel, containing pockets for handkerchiefs, gloves, soap and so forth. Not unlike the last mentioned case, is a silk-lined receptacle for necktie.

There are three types of sewing case from which to choose. The largest is bag shaped with a drawstring and contains a pin cushion, scissors, case of needles and reel of thread. Next in size is a satin lined folding case fitted with scissors, tape needle, bodkin and two thread reels. Smallest of all is a brocade lined sealskin book holding a leaf of need les and a leaf wound with threads.

Slashed Petticoats.

At the sight of the word petticoat one is apt to say, "Dear me, and I say, "What, are there any?" There are still a few to be found about ones are cleshed. The cleah is made at the sides on each side.

The most particularly popular in Paris just now, but many have come to us also. White embroidered ones may be had with the fashion-required slash—these are also some good satin petticoats laced up the sides with softer satin ribbon.

Effective Collar.

The little black velvet collar that is so much seen on otherwise the pale evening costumes is more effective than could be imagined by anyone who had not had an opportunity of seeing the same gown without this distinctive note. The form is of the simplest, the collar is of the same width all round, and stops short in front, leaving a space of about an inch and a half. This is filled in with the Byron tie, the ends floating rather loosely, as may be guessed from the title.

Wide Rose Bowl.

In selecting the rose bowl decide upon one that is wide, shallow, and facing so that the flowers may expand unrestrained, and be seen to the best advantage, says the Chicago Journal. They are fascinating for the dining table, the tea table, the drawing room, the boudoir and the veranda or the seaside.

TIMELY HINTS FOR WORK WITH FLOWERS

Bamboo Poles Are Used to Form This Rose Trellis, Making an Effective and Unusual Support.

(By L. H. BENNINGTON.)

Just as much this month as possible procure some fresh loam and plant five or six in a six-inch pot. Put the pots where it will receive the sun for at least half a day.

It does not need to be deprived of light and air, as do the Holland bulbs to start them, but wants a bright-airy place with enough sun to insure its growth. The flowers do not appear for several months.

One of the loveliest flowers grown is the Madonna lily (lilium candidum). It should be planted in August, as it needs a leaf growth in autumn. Set the bulb ten or twelve inches deep in well prepared soil, in a little pocket of sand.

Lilies prefer muck and leaf mould, and dislike manure unless it is thoroughly rotten. Protect the lily bed during winter with leaves and other litter. The American Turk's cap, and the Canadian bell-flower lily also demand this treatment.

The following biennials and perennials should not be planted later than the middle of August: Hollyhocks, Canterbury bells, sweet Williams, Iceland poppies, foxgloves, Canterbury bells, the primroses, English daisies, columbine, and forget-me-nots.

Rhododendrons, azaleas, and other evergreen shrubs require a summer mulch, especially if planted last spring. They like "cold feet."

If the ground is a clay deep, allowing the roots of plants to strike deep for nourishment, they are slow to start and the grass and weeds to go to seed.

Plant evergreens in August in order to allow them time to become established before winter sets in. Do not allow the roots to become dry or chilled, or they will die. Keep the roots in a puddle from the time they are dug until planted.

Dig the hole for evergreen much larger than the roots; fill it up partly with good soil, put in the evergreen with the roots spread out naturally; work the soil between the roots, water and pat up with soil, tramping to firm it. Water and mulch.

After August first stop pinching the chrysanthemums shoots. When large buds appear run off three or four numerous, and the small weakly ones. Make cuttings with the new sprays removing all the leaves, but the top cluster, and these will almost to the top leaves. Turn an old tumbler or glass can over each cutting, and keep moist.

SUPERIOR HORSES FOR GENERAL FARM WORK

The illustration shown here represents full brothers—five and six years old. This pair is well matched as to size, color and height. Their combined weight is 2,400 pounds, color a dark coal black; height about 16 hands.

They are a kindly disposed pair but full of life. This is a breed which the farmers of Kentucky breed with more than ordinary care and which will stamp itself to pulling the plow on the farm, the loaded wagon, or may be driven to the carriage at three-minute gait with perfect ease to themselves and driver.

Horses like these are generally from the old Morgan breed.

Shredded Corn Fodder.

Shredded corn fodder is one of the things that have not been fully appreciated on the farm. It is good for bedding the stock, it is convenient to have in the hen house as a litter, and it is surely worth considerable as a feed.

Care of Sows.

After weaning the litter sows should not be fed heavily but should have plenty of good pasture and be bred soon in the early winter.

Pinwing Plan.

In plowing the ground it is a good plan to finish each day's work by plowing around the outside of the field.

AUTO TOUR WAS GREAT SUCCESS

COUNTY FAIR ADVERTISING TOUR MONDAY COVERED 140 MILES.

ONE DOZEN CARS CARRIED SIXTY PEOPLE INCLUDING THE SAND BOYS.

Many thousand people were advised Monday of the fact that Red Lake county is going to have a great big county fair in Red Lake Falls three days this month, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, Sept. 24, 25 and 26. This wide publicity was accomplished by means of an advertising tour of 140 miles covering many surrounding towns.

A dozen cars carrying sixty people, including a bunch of the band boys who furnished much glad music for the occasion, participated in the tour.

The first stop was made at Plummer where the band entertained the people with some good music and the tourists filled the town. Brooks, Lambert, Gibbs, McIntosh, Erskine, Nowlin, Maple Bay, Fertile and Crookston were visited. At each stop the tourists were cordially greeted by many people.

The crowd had dinner at Erskine and a brief stop was made at Cerlson Bros. stock farm near that village. The band surrended the barnyard and won the promise of the big white bull that he and some of the other stock will be at the Red Lake county fair if the boss will consent.

Though the tour started on hour behind schedule,Crookston was reached a few minutes ahead of schedule. This was accomplished by hard driving and necessitated making several short stops in each of the towns. The each of the towns advertising matter was distributed and banners were strung while the band played. At Crookston, after supper, the band and tourists fell in regard and with gaial noises advised the several thousand inhabitants that there is to be a big Red Lake County Fair at Red Lake Falls this month. The visitors were cordially received at Crookston as they were by the people of each town visited.

It is quite natural that such a long tour could be made without delay or serious mishap. There was a little tire trouble and one car has a broken spring. J. D. Hoseman got one wheel, but being an expert he was able to drive on three wheels until he found the last one. No one who took the trip failed to make his town before the crowd pulled out.

The tourists went so fast sometimes that you couldn't see 'em for dust, and when they were not going you could not seen them for the same reason.

When Crookston was reached the colored gentleman who is sub-boss at Hotel Crookston rushed out with open arms to greet members of his own race. In the full hack with the explanation, "If dat aint de durkies back from de country I'se a nigger." Then he added, "I'se glad to see you, too—guess I know."

Oscar Helm and Walter Quesnell put on a first class continuous vaudeville performance. Charley Gilbert made a fine showing as a black face artist. He was a little too fat body for the part of "Topsy" but was a first class male man.

P. B. Gates in his daily Herald has gone under and stirred up a fine assortment of dust for consumption by the rest of the tourists.

After the little evening demonstration at Crookston each driver "hit the trail" for home as he chose and made his own speed.

At Brooks Mr. Strand and Mr. Hughes joined the tourists with their cars filled with Brooks people and continued with the bunch until Fertile was reached. Fertile Dr. Watson, who could not make the start in the morning, joined the crowd and with him were Sam E. Hunt and Mr. Bailey.

In spite of the dust and in spite of the rush the tour was declared a success in every way. The only regret of the tourists is that because of the distance to be covered the stop in each town had to be brief.

As a result of the tour Red Lake County fair has been widely advertised. For the publicity campaign the officers of the fair association have asked the Gazette to express their gratitude. They wish to thank the car owners and the band boys for their generous co-operation in the undertaking.

The band boys almost literally "blew their brads off" and they were a tired lot of boys when in Crookston was reached but they did not hesitate to go to bed until the last little show.

Following are the names of the automobile owners who drove their cars on the tour and those who accompanied them:

P. B. Gates with A. Bakeman, Emily Brunelle, John Hennessey and Robert Erskine.

Crookston Boy Shot.

Late yesterday afternoon, while playing close to his home on South Ash street, Elmer Larson, aged five years, was possibly fatally injured by a rifle bullet which entered the left side of the back, at the side of the shoulder bone. The physician called that it inadvisable to probe for the bullet, so the extent of the injury, but it is believed to be a 32.

Where the bullet came from is a mystery. Chief Eck investigated and discovered that two boys, one nearly grown, had been shooting at a telegraph pole west of the Great Northern tracks, but it was impossible to learn their identity.

The Great Northern pump man, near the saw mill, heard three bullets whiz by in quick succession. One struck the Larson house, and another struck the boy.

His condition is critical, and the latest has aroused the whole community as there has been previous complaint since the opening of the hunting season, of boys practicing shooting within the city limits.—Crookston Times, Aug. 29.

Since the shooting the boy has been getting along nicely and it is reported that he will recover.

SEASON OPENS SEPTEMBER SEVEN

BUT THE LID DOES NOT COME OFF EN-TIRELY.

The hunting season opens September 7 and local sportsmen are wiping off their guns in anticipation. However it will be well to remember that the lid does not come off entirely on the opening day of the season.

Turtle dove, snipe, prairie chicken, pinnated, white breasted or sharp tailed grouse, upland plover and golden plover may be hunted between September 7 and November 30, inclusive. Sage hen, ruffed grouse and pheasant between October 1 and December 1. Wild duck, geese and coots may be killed between September 7 and December 1. No license is required to hunt small game in the open fields or thickets.

Open season for moose and deer is from November 10 to December 1. Every big game hunter must have a big game license. Only one antlered male moose and one deer may be killed.

Fifteen birds is the limit for one days hunt, and no person is allowed to have in his possession 50 aquatic fowl and 45 other game birds.

No Wonder!

GENTILLY WINS AGAIN

Second at State Fair and Scores Same as at First in the Months Contest.

Yesterday the Gazette received the following note from Rev. Fr. Theilier of Gentilly in regard to the contest:

"Kindly accept my thanks for your constant assistance extended to our Gentilly Dairy Association.

"As you have seen already from my last letter from Minneapolis, the state cheese inspector, informing me that our cheese exhibited this week at the Minnesota State Fair scored 96% and was awarded the second prize. Our cheese exhibited this week at the Minnesota State Fair scored 96% and was awarded the second prize. Our cheese exhibited this week at the Minnesota State Fair scored 96% and was awarded the second prize. I am my most hearty congratulations to you and Association for the very excellent cheese you have on exhibition at the state fair.

"The score on cheese in the fair exhibit was 96 points which is the final average for the six educational contests conducted by dairy and food department.

"Gentilly scored 97 for May, 95 for June, 96 for July, 95% for August. I am certainly a good showing, giving the lead in the state to us by a good margin so far.

We are doing our best to push our cheese factory to the front, in order, of course, to get the value of a real advertisement for our "First Premium" cheese, but finally to show the people at large what our northern country is able to do in the dairy line, the real source, in my opinion, of the material prosperity of our farmers."

FOURTH PRIZE IN NORTHERN SECTION

AND ON BEAUTY OF EXHIBIT IS FOURTH AGAINST THE WHOLE STATE.

SCORING OF RED LAKE COUNTY'S EXHIBIT AT THE STATE FAIR.

The Gazette today received a telegram from E. G. Hise, who is in charge of Red Lake county's exhibit at the state fair, reading as follows:

"Fourth in score in northern division and fourth in beauty of exhibit against the whole state. Public sentiment is that we have the best exhibit on the grounds and we sure have."

Though the scoring is an excellent one considering the number of counties competing, it is somewhat disappointing. Red Lake county people who had visited the fair were so well pleased with the exhibit that they were confident that Red Lake county would score highest in the northern section.

Following is the way the counties scored:

Northern Minnesota.

Roseau 1,100, Beltrami 1,053, Clearwater 1,025, Red Lake 1,013, Cass 994, Becker 987, Hubbard 980, Aitkin 974, Norman 956, Mahnomen 951, Cook 928, Clay 846, Koochiching 824, Itasca 816.

SWEET CLOVER VALUE

So-Called Weed Plant Said to be Valuable as Food and Soil Renovator.

It has been suggested to the Gazette that the farmers might find profit in following the article from the Wisconsin Farmer, on "sweet clover."

With a "weed" record of almost 100 years on American soil it is rather surprising that men have witnessed no more of the evidence that have been passed in recent years on the value of the plant as a forage. A roadside plant of remarkable persistency, and adapted to any locality to produce seed, it has been fought as a most unwelcome invader. Its promotion from the weed to the honorable class has been the result of the efforts of a few enthusiasts during the last decade and one-half and as yet the doubting Thomases are in a consumber the true believers.

After wading through field after field of sweet clover along with 500 fellow farmers at the farm of Mr. Dr. Frank Coverdale, of Clinton county Iowa, we are convinced that there is a place for this legume on the farms of the corn belt. Mr. Coverdale has been growing it fifteen years and during that time has harvested some of the knotty problems connected with sweet-clover production. He has found that a stand of sweet clover can usually be obtained by seeding it with an early-maturing spring cereal. This implies that it is not necessary to give up the use of the field for a year, which in some cases is a distinct drawing. In the case of Coverdale's fields has been the case in alfalfa growing. In the Coverdale situation it is also credited to the fact that sweet clover will stand more harshly on account of dry weather after the removal of the crop than will red clover, alsike clover or dollars have been lost by farmers of the corn belt during the last few years on account of the loss of a two or three weeks' period of dry harvest weather. This has, in thousands of instances, completely destroyed the value of alfalfa and red clover will stand that rough, and apparently it will, then the crop is one that cannot be be-litted with impunity.

Sweet clover is a biennial. This implies that it must be allowed to reseed the ground if it is used as a permanent crop. One of Mr. Coverdale's fields has been in clover for a period of fifteen years and there is a perfect stand in that field today.

How about sweet clover as a pasture and forage crop? That is a matter that has been thoroughly tested by Mr. Coverdale, who finds that it makes exceedingly valuable pasture for cattle and hogs, that it never produces bloat, that it makes a hay equivalent in value to red clover or alfalfa, and, furthermore, under anything like favorable conditions,

Home Bowler's Creed.

Under the above caption the implement dealers' bulletin publishes the creed of a non-existent bowler. Some of the good reasons why one should support the home merchants. The Bulletin suggests that all readers of the creed should ask their local papers to publish it:

"I buy at home because:

"Because my interests are here.

"Because the community that is good enough for me to live in is good enough for me to buy in.

"Because I believe in transacting business with my friends.

"Because I want to see the goods.

"Because I want to get what I buy when I pay for it.

"Because my home dealer 'carries' me when I run short.

"Because every dollar I spend at home stays at home and works for the welfare of my town.

"Because the time I buy from friends back of the goods.

"Because I sell what I produce here at home.

"Because the mail I buy from pays the part of the town, county and state taxes.

"Because the man I buy from gives me a square deal always.

"Because the man I buy from helps support my church, school, lodges, my home.

"Because I subject myself to luck, misfortune or bereavement comes the man I buy from. He will be there with a hand-greeting, his words of cheer and his pocketbook, if needed.

"Here I live and here I buy."

THE RIGHT BEGINNING

All Children of School Age Should Enroll at Once—Law Requires It.

At the beginning of the school year it is well to call the attention of the parent to the necessity of children going to school. A child entering late is at a great disadvantage for a period of fifteen days and then the extra time at her disposal. The child becomes discouraged because he cannot keep up with the class and soon becomes a truant and the pupil eventually drops out of school. If you have a child that is not in school, see to it that this opportunity is provided.

Every child between the ages of eight and sixteen is required by law to be in school during the entire time the schools are in session unless excused from attendance by the parent to the City Treasurer of the license fee of $500.00, license issue to them.

The public schools opened Tuesday with enrollment as follows which probably will be considerably increased during the next few days:

SEES BREAK IN SULZER FORCES

HERRICK DENIES GOUNSEL IS IMPLICATED IN ALLEGED PROCEEDINGS.

Others in Governor's Confidence Reiterate Declaration of Indictment Procedure.

Albany, N. Y., Aug. 27.—A possible breach in the ranks of Governor Sulzer's supporters was indicated by a statement of former Judge D. Cady Herrick, who leads the conservative legal forces in the impeachment matter, that counsel for Governor Sulzer have nothing to do with any alleged criminal proceedings against Charles F. Murphy, Senator Frank O. Sullivan or Assemblyman Levy and are not pursuing any investigation of a criminal character against anyone.

On the other hand, Judge Lyon L. Arnold, in New York, and others in Albany, in the confidence of Governor Sulzer, reiterated the declaration that steps to procure indictments here already been taken, both in New York and Albany counties.

Color is lent to the claim that Governor Sulzer is not only cognizant of this move, but in accord with it by a statement given out at the executive chamber by a man who has frequently acted as his spokesman. This statement asserts unequivocally that "Governor Sulzer himself will go before the grand jury in New York county if it requires his presence."

It also declares that District Attorney Whitman of New York is familiar with the facts upon which the indictments are sought.

Governor Sulzer declined to comment on the situation and Acting Governor Glynn was equally reticent.

KEOKUK DAM IS FORMALLY OPENED

GOVERNORS ARE ESCORTED THROUGH POWER HOUSE AND DAM.

THE WEATHER IS IDEAL

Largest Dam in World Dedicated by Representatives of Twenty-one States—Largest Crowd in History at Keokuk.

Keokuk, Iowa, Aug. 28.—Governor Edward F. Dunne of Illinois was among the first of the visiting state executives to arrive for "Governors' Day" program in connection with the dedication of the immense mississippi waterpower dam across the Mississippi river here.

The celebration formally opened and the chief executives or their personal representatives from several states were present. The governors were met by a committee of citizens upon the powerhouse end out on the big dam.

Clear skies and ideal weather marked the opening day. Keokuk was practically deserted and at an early hour the streets were crowded.

After meeting at the Elks club, the executives and their aides were escorted to the big power dam in automobiles and were taken on a trip through the powerhouse end out on the big dam.

The governors boarded a special observation train which carried them over the dam to the Illinois shore. Then they embarked on the trailing ship Illinois and made the trip through Lake Cooper to Fort Madison, where the train for Colorado Springs was made.

THAW'S ATTORNEYS WIN FIRST ROUND

HABEAS CORPUS WRIT WITH DRAWN AND JEROME IS PUZZLED.

MATTERS VERY COMPLICATED

Next Move In Case Due From Those Who Demand Deportation—Lawyers Are Fugitive Jubilant Over "First Victory."

Sherbrooke, Que., Aug. 28.—Attorneys of Harry Thaw won the first round in the contest to get Thaw back to Matteawan, Dr. Jelly has withdrew the writ of habeas corpus which was to have been heard and thus put the next move on the shoulders of those fighting for his extradition.

Rumors had been bandied about all day that the writ might be withdrawn, but it was not until evening that the action was taken with the clerk of the court. At the same time a telegram was sent to Judge Osborne, at Montreal, who granted the writ, that such action was counsel's desire. He was due here today for arguments on the application.

Next Move Due from Jerome.

The next move in the case is now distinctly up to those desiring his deportation. Under the present commitment his night remain in Sherbrooke jail indefinitely. He will have a hearing before a district magistrate, or demanding a jury trial before the king's bench, criminal side, which does not sit until October. Briefly, Thaw's lawyers have decided to let him pace his cell, meanwhile perfecting plans to defeat attempts to put him across the Canadian border.

"It is beyond me," said William Travers Jerome, "that the court of Canada; law involved are such that I would not feel justified in even guessing at the time it would take to get him in the end, but this tangle will keep him in Canada for a long time."

District Attorney Conger of Dutchess county, New York, was equally puzzled and declared that he could can't solve the muddle, certainly I can't," he said.

Further to complicate matters, representatives of Governor Dix of New York are not sure that the commitment, under which Thaw has been held in Canada, applies to a charge of violating any of the Dominion's laws. It is that of being a "fugitive from the Matawan asylum, where he was confined on a criminal charge, for life."

Opinion of New York Attorney.

Mr. F. Bowers, K. C., representing New York state, said that he regarded the writ as "good in form." Thaw's behalf se'ect admission by his lawyers that the commitment was legal and that Thaw had escaped from custody, he thought would be brought into court.

Mr. Jarome and District Attorney Conger have been here with others drawn here by duty, that today would see a sweeping away of some of the legal cobwebs which have served to befog the case, protecting a hearing before the Canadian courts, and Thaw's probable deportation to New York.

Thaw Lawyers Are Jubilant.

Thaw's lawyers, headed by J. N. Greenshields, K. C., Montreal, are jubilant. They had conferred all afternoon before reaching a decision and were still closeted at the apparent opinion they have created for the conference.

Thaw could not be seen, in view of a new rule of the Canadian courts, to interviewers except when accompanied by some one of counsel; but the writ was withdrawn after Thaw had been taken was attested by the fact that his weight was heavier by 25 cents a day, of record, W. L. Shurtleff, was signed.

Questions of treaty violations, and future contingencies suggested should Thaw be discharged, are in the background when the news went about that Thaw's lawyers had called off. However, no matter when the case, does come into court, the presidents will be on hand to watch the proceedings authorities depart Thaw, Verdict to be, the state, and Nurse Mills the point at which he will be transferred to the New York authorities then remain to be fought out the question of extradition from Vermont to New York.

It was then that young Bedell who is not considered a good swimmer, risked his own life to save his friend.

SENATE WORKING ON INCOME TAX

DEMOCRATS REFUSE TO CHANGE RATES ON $100,000 A YEAR OR MORE INCOMES.

TAX HELD DISCRIMINATORY

Senator Borah Declares That Proposed Duty Is Discriminatory.

Washington, Aug. 28.—Attempts to increase the limit of the proposed income tax, of the large incomes, failed in the senate when Senators Borah, Brisdow and Cummins led an effort to amend the income tax section of the Democratic tariff bill.

Senator Borah offered an amendment increasing the graduated tax on larger incomes until it would have reached 5 per cent, on those above $100,000 a year. The Democrats, aided by 10 Republicans, defeated the amendment, 47 to 17.

A most radical provision, with a maximum tax of 10 per cent on incomes of $100,000 or more, will be submitted by Senator Bristow when the debate is resumed.

In the pending bill the rates on larger incomes are: 1 per cent on incomes from $20,000 to $50,000; 2 per cent from $50,000 to $100,000, and 3 per cent above $100,000.

Tax Held Discriminatory.

The demand for the increase of the tax on big incomes was accompanied by the declaration that men with large incomes would escape their just share of the taxes under the new bill.

"The man with the small income always pays his tax in more complete-ly," said Senator Borah, "than does the men with the larger income. It is much easier to find all of the $5,000 incomes than to find all of the $50,000 incomes. A 6 or 8 per cent tax on the man with $100,000 will not inconvenience him more than the 1 per cent tax will inconvenience the man with $5,000."

WANT VOCATIONAL EDUCATION

SPEAKERS AT BANKERS' MEET-ING ADVISE AGAINST SHORT CUTS.

Former Governor Bailey Says Farm Opportunities Are at Zenith.

Kansas City, Aug. 28.—Vocational education should be a part of the public school system of this country. The successful farmer must have as keen an intellect and as thorough a preparatory training for his business as the successful banker. The farmer and the consumer should adopt a comprehensive plan of co-operation for reducing the cost of producing and the cost of marketing, the products of the farm.

These were some of the points dwelt on by speakers at the conference of the committee on agricultural development and education of the American Bankers' association.

"For bankers, in attempting to improve conditions in rural communities, should concentrate their efforts on those subjects relating to farm life which you can best comprehend," said Prof. Eugene Davenport, head of the Illinois Agricultural college.

"You should lend your support to the movement to make vocation education a part of the public school system. We don't overestimate this vocational training to be the work of a lot of technical institutions separate from our public schools.

"One of the outrages perpetrated upon the unwary investors of the country is the exploitation of worthless land by unscrupulous promoters. The bankers should make an organized effort to aid in preventing the attempted development of such lands. You should also study the subject of fertilization and aid the farmers in obtaining fertilizers which contain real fertilizing elements."

J. W. Belisy, former governor of Kansas, said the farmers of this country now face greater opportunities than ever before. He have learned: he said, what every acre under cultivation in the United States should produce to make a living and how much se it is now producing."

Carson Lake, Mich., Franklin, Neb., said it was only through the county farm expert that the bankers can hope to make progress in agricultural efficiency to the farmer.

FRANCES FOLSOM, WHITE HOUSE BRIDE

WHAT bride of the White House brides? There have been queens of them, Miss Jessie Woodrow Wilson will be No. 13. But she feels no superstitious alarm on that score, 13 being the luckiest of numbers in the Wilson family.

It is interesting to consider the fact that three of the round dozen of White House brides, including the first one, Lucy Payne, and the last one, Alice Roosevelt, married congressmen. Also that two, Della Lewis and Nellie Grant, became the wives of foreigners. Only one president, Mr. Cleveland, was married in the White House, although mother, Mr. Tyler, took to himself a spouse during his term of office.

In earlier days White House weddings were always celebrated in the circular room, the state department, oval in shape, which is now called the blue room. But of late years Washington society has expanded to such an extent, numerically speaking, that, with perhaps 1,000 guests to be invited, the east room is none too large for the staging of so important a spectacle as a marriage in the White House.

At the wedding of Miss Roosevelt, which occurred Feb. 17, 1906, the east room was almost uncomfortably crowded.

The bridal pair were united in a sea of flowers before an extemporized altar. The ceremony was performed by the Rt. Rev. Henry Y. Satterlee, bishop of Washington, and breakfast for sixty persons was served in the state dining room. The buffet lunch for the other guests being furnished in the green room.

Nick Longworth, at that time a member of congress from Cincinnati, is exceedingly popular. He can do amusing things with the piano, is a first-class baseball player and has other accomplishments. At the date of his marriage he was nearly forty. Though not rich, he will eventually inherit a considerable fortune from his mother. His wife has spent most of her time since her marriage in Washington, where she is a leader of the young married women's set. She has no children.

There was a cup of nearly twenty years between the Roosevelt wedding and that of Frances Folsom, who was married in the White House June 7, 1886, to President Cleveland. She was only twenty years old at the time and was the daughter of Mr. Cleveland's former law partner. On this occasion the ceremony was semi-private and the blue room was plenty big enough for the bridal party and a small number of invited guests.

When her husband died, five years ago, Mrs. Cleveland was left very well off. In addition, congress voted her the customary $5,000 a year as the pension of a president's widow. A few months ago she was married to Thomas J. Preston.

When Rutherford B. Hayes was colonel of the Third Ohio Volunteers the lieutenant-colonel of the regiment was Russell Hastings. Whence it came about that Colonel Hastings, in later years, made the acquaintance of Emily Platt, a niece of President Hayes. Miss Platt was a member of the White House family through the Hayes administration, being regarded almost as a daughter. When she became engaged to Colonel Hastings it was arranged that she should be married in the White House, and the ceremony was performed there on June 19, 1878, at 7 o'clock in the evening. It was strictly a family affair.

Four years earlier took place the wedding of Nellie Grant, the third daughter of a president to be married in the White House. On this occasion the spectacle was staged in the east room, then used for the purpose for the first time. The date was May 21, 1874, and the bridegroom was Algernon Charles Frederick Sartoris, an Englishman.

Ellen Wrenshall Grant was a handsome girl of eighteen, with brown hair and eyes, rosy cheeks and a plump figure. Algernon Sartoris, who was the son of a member of parliament and was said to have an income of $40,000 a year, met her for the first time on a steamer coming back from Europe. The wooing was rapid, but General Grant disapproved of the match and did not give his consent for more than a year.

There are plenty of people living today who will remember the popular excitement caused by this international marriage. It was estimated that the wedding presents represented a value of more than $100,000.

Certainly no marriage ever started out with a fairer outlook. But unfortunately the prospect was not realized. Sartoris, who was an idle, lazy Englishman of his class, did not make a satisfactory husband, and Mrs. Sartoris was eventually compelled to divorce him. Her son, named Algernon after his father, recently married a French girl, Cecile Mortimer, and is now residing in France. Two daughters are married.

A little over a year ago Mr. Sartoris having meanwhile died—Mrs. Sartoris took a second husband, Frank Hatch Jones, being married to him on July 4, 1912, at Cobourg, Canada.

On the evening of Jan. 31, 1842, Elizabeth Tyler, third daughter of President Tyler, then a girl of eighteen, was married in the blue room of the White House to William Waller, a member of congress from Williamsburg, Va.

It is not possible in all instances to trace the subsequent history of the White House brides, some of whom, indeed, such as those of the Jackson administration, were persons of no prominence apart from the fact that they were married in the White House.

Soon after this marriage Mrs. Tyler died, and within a short time the widowed president took to himself a second wife, whose name was Julia Gardiner. She was a New York girl.

Returning from abroad with her father, Miss Gardiner visited Washington and met President Tyler.

Soon afterward President Tyler became engaged to Miss Gardiner, and they were married in New York. The bride's party, traveling immediately to the White House, where the wedding reception was held.

Mr. Tyler was fifty-six and his bride only twenty. John Quincy Adams, then a congressman and a bitter enemy of the president, spoke of the marriage as a "union of January and May."

Young Mrs. Tyler did the honors of the White House for eight months, until the close of the administration. Then she and her husband went to their Virginia home, where they lived seven years. When Mr. Tyler died his widow took her children to her mother's home at Carleton Hill, Staten Island, and there spent the rest of her life.

When Van Buren was president Dolly Madison was still the leader of Washington society, and it was she who introduced to him the beautiful Angelica Singleton, daughter of a distinguished South Carolina family. Miss Singleton became a frequent guest at the White House, and the president's son, Major Abram Van Buren, fell in love with her. He married her in November, 1839, at her home in South Carolina, but the wedding reception was held at the White House, where young Mrs. Van Buren immediately took charge of affairs as mistress of the establishment, the president being a widower.

Andrew Jackson was remarkably devoid of relatives. Perhaps it was on this account and because he was fond of young people that he made so much of his wife's relations. Two of the latter were married in the White House at his request during his administration. A third young woman who enjoyed the same distinction was Della Lewis of Nashville, the daughter of an intimate friend of the president.

The second marriage at the White House during the Jackson regime was that of Mary Easten, another Tennessee girl, who was a niece of Mrs. Jackson. In this instance the bridegroom was Lucien B. Polk, Hermitage of Tennessee. The pair went to live at Columbia, Tenn., where they spent the rest of their lives very happily.

Elizabeth Martin was a relative of Mrs. Jackson's. She was married in the White House to a young clerk, Lewis Randolph, a son of Martha Jefferson Randolph, who was the eldest daughter of Thomas Jefferson.

This takes us back as far as the administration of John Quincy Adams, who had three sons. The handsomest of the three brothers was John Adams, a graduate of Harvard, noted for his polished manners and fascinating conversation. He died in 1834, after whom he was named.

At that time a young man named Hellen, from Philadelphia, was employed in the White House in a secretarial capacity. He had a very pretty sister named Mary, and John Adams felt so love with her, finally obtaining the consent of his parents to their marriage, notwithstanding their youth.

The ceremony was performed in the circular room, and there was dancing afterward, the president and his wife taking part in the Virginia reel.

It has been said of the Monroes that they made fewer friends in Washington than any president that family before or since. They were very exclusive and so formal that Mr. Monroe once refused to see a near relative who called at the White House because the visitor was not attired in the small clothes appropriate to full dress. Mrs. Hay, the eldest daughter, would not visit the wives of the diplomats because they did not call first upon her. Then it came about that when the youngest daughter, Maria Hester Monroe, married her cousin, Samuel Lawrence Gouverneur, their secretary to the president, nobody was at the wedding except members of the family, which is hard to credit. It took place in the circular room at noon on March 9, 1820, and the clergyman, the Rev. Dr. Hawley of St. John's church, wore knee breeches with silver buckles on his low shoes.

The couple spent their summers at Oak Hill, Loudon county, Va. They lived in New York in winter. Ex-President Monroe died in the New York house while on a visit to his daughter. They had three children, two of them boys.

Maria Hester Gouverneur died at Oak Hill at the age of forty-two and was buried there.

Anna Todd of Philadelphia was married at the White House in 1813 to John Coalter Cabell, a member of congress from Virginia and a grandnephew of Thomas Jefferson.

History is unfortunately silent in regard to subsequent events in the life of Anna Todd, but it is known that she went to Virginia with her husband and there died in the year 1815.

Dolly Madison had two sisters. One of them, Anna, became the wife of Congressman Coles of Virginia. The other sister, Lucy Payne, was first married at fifteen years of age to George Steptoe Washington, a nephew of the father of his country. He died and she went to live with the Madisons. Then came the marriage.

All of which merely leads up to the fact that on the evening of March 11, 1811, Lucy, the widow aforesaid, was married in the White House to a Kentucky widower named Todd, who was an associate justice of the Supreme court. This was the first White House wedding and was celebrated with all the color possible in those comparatively simple days.

It will be noticed that only four of the twelve White House brides have been daughters of presidents. The first of these was Maria Monroe, the second Elizabeth Tyler, the third Nellie Grant and the fourth Alice Roosevelt. Jessie Woodrow Wilson will be the fifth.

HOME FOR SNAKES

Venom Institute of San Paulo, Brazil, Very Unique.

Poisonous Reptiles After They Are Rendered Harmless Are Allowed to Roam at Will in a Wonderful Garden.

New York.—One board daily of charitable individuals with plenty of time and money inaugurating homes for various unfortunates, types of humanity, but the most unique establishment of its kind is certainly the Venom institution of San Paulo, in Brazil, where a permanent and comfortable home is provided for poisonous snakes.

The institute is a part of Brazil proper for its accommodation of venomous reptiles, where the lives of life from snake bites became so serious that something had to be done by the government to cope with the situation.

Large bands of men, wearing thick boots, leggings and gloves for protection against grassed districts round about the institute, armed with long thin tubes, terminating in two semi-circular claws, which are controlled at the end nearest the body and can be opened or closed at will.

By this means they are able to grasp the snake by the tail without any danger to themselves.

The snake is made to caught in this manner it is unceremoniously thrust into a basket, where, together with a writhing, coiling mass of its brethren, it is conveyed to the house.

A large conservatory containing long rows of glass covered boxes, similar to the glass cases used by greenhouses for growing cactuses, is used as a sorting place for the large quantities of reptiles which are brought into the house every day.

Each case is labeled with the particular species of snake it contains, so that when the day's "bag" is brought in it is a comparatively simple matter for the expert naturalist to grip each with the above described instrument, and, recognizing its species, put it in the proper receptacle.

The next stage in the queer place is what is called the operating table. Here, under the personal supervision of a fully qualified doctor, garbed exactly as the surgeons in the operating room of a hospital, with the long white overall, the rubber gloves and so on, the snake is robbed of its poison—termed "serum"—and rendered harmless.

One man grips the snake firmly by the tail; which is no easy task, for it will wriggle and twist and turn in a manner that would put to shame the strongest wrist; whilst the doctor forces the jaws open with a surgical instrument until he gets hold of the big protruding poison fangs—every small glass dish is held directly beneath the bag, and the doctor presses the gland which contains the snake yields something like 20 centigrammes of serum, which, in appearance, greatly resembles ordinary milk. When the operation is over the snake is taken away and placed in a large garden, from which escape is a matter of impossibility.

Of course, it would be more cruel than merciful to shut defenseless snakes adrift into the woods again, for he would be entirely at the mercy of his enemies and soon succumb. So this garden, which contains almost every kind of snake native to Brazil, its natural elements, trees, shrubs, and so forth, is specially arranged, where he may disport himself on warm days, is provided by the institute.

BABY IN VICE-PRESIDENT'S CHAIR

For the first time in history, the presiding officer of the United States senate the other day shared his seat with another person. That person was Master Thomas Marshall Buttenfield, three and a half years old, son of Rev. A. D. Buttenfield of Berkley Springs, Va., who was once Mr. Marshall's pastor at Columbia City, Ind. The child was named for Mr. Marshall and is a great favorite with the Vice-President.

TO ROOF OF WORLD

Leading Scientists Ready to Attack Himalayan Peaks.

Notable Array of Eminent Men Selected for Dr. de Filippi's Expedition — Collected at Genoa Preparatory to Departing.

Rome.—Dr. de Filippi's expedition to the mountains of Himalaya and Karakorum is now completely organized. The equipment and provisions have been procured in London, and will be shipped to India within the next few days. The scientific apparatus is being collected at Genoa and will leave for Bombay with the expedition as the Italian liner.

The following members will take part in the expedition:

Dr. F. de Filippi, organizer and expedition leader; Commander A. Alessio, royal Italian navy, lecturer on General Geodesy in the University of Padua, second in command of the expedition, in charge of the geodetic-astronomical work and of pendulum and magnetic observations; Signor G. Alessio, lecturer on astrophysics in the University of Rome, assistant astronomer at the observatory of the Collegio Romano, who is to assist Commander Alessio in his work, and who is to make special researches; Signor O. Marinelli, professor of geography in the University of Florence, and G. Dainelli, lecturer on geology and professor of geography in the institute of the same university, will undertake the geological survey of the district traversed by the expedition.

Signor A. Amerio, professor of physics in the Technical Institute of Padua, lecturer on physics in the university and in the school of Practical Engineering, who will undertake observations in solar radiations and atmospheric electricity; Marchese N. Venturi Ginori, who will assist in the above researches and will undertake studies in photometry, and with Professor Amerio will also take charge of the meteorological station; Lieut. C. Ardito of the military photographic department, who will take charge of the photographical and telephotographical work; J. A. Scherer, B. A. Trinity college, Cambridge, who will act as assistant topographer.

The government of India will appoint an officer of the Indian trigonometrical survey to accompany the expedition and take part in the survey work. The Royal Geographical society has assured the services of Joseph Petavel, the well-known Alpine guide of Courmayeur, who accompanied the duke of the Abruzzi on his polar expedition. Professors Marinelli and Amerio and Mr. Spranger will only remain with Italy till March, 1914, and will meet the rest of the party in the spring at Leh (Ladakh).

The Italian government has given every possible assistance to the enterprise by officially appointing the greater number of its members and by providing the necessary scientific researches. The government of India is giving all its support to the expedition. Besides a handsome subsidy and the loan of a survey officer, it has promised certain customs privileges for the scientific equipment.

MAYBE THEY'RE WILD PIGEONS

Flock of 500 Thought to Resemble Those Supposedly Extinct Species Reported.

Pittsburgh.—A flock of supposedly wild pigeons has been located by Mr. M. Garland, surveyor of the city of Pittsburgh, near his home in Edgewood. The birds have gone to nest in a nearby woods and the surveyor will be made to secure several of them alive.

According to Mr. Garland he has been very close to them on three different occasions, and is sure that they are perfect specimens of the supposedly extinct species.

Mr. Garland discovered the birds by hearing their "coo-ings" at a distance. He investigated and discovered the flock. He says he had first begun hunting their nests.

CUT HAIR OFF OF 94 WOMEN

Paris Police Arrest Man Suffering From Strange Form of Insane Mania.

Paris.—In searching the flat of a certain Paris lunatic, by name Lavaux, the police found in the room of the less than 94 women, the whole estimated by a scientific to be worth $500 of tresses and postiches.

Lavaux was arrested on the charge of "disturbing the peace" in the Madeleine church that he was discovered in the act of cutting off their hair. His very striking beauty brought on what has been described as "the only hair attachment of a female sex."

CALLED 'DIPLOMACY TO AID

Officer's Imitations of Purse Overcome and Generous Hospitality Returned in Fitting Manner.

A veteran in the United States army recently told of the shrewdness displayed by a sailor in the old days. He had been appointed to the command of an army post on an island not a great way from San Francisco.

Soon after his arrival there a French fleet dropped anchor in the harbor. The commander-in-chief the major aboard the flagship and entertained him royally.

The idea struck the worthy major the next day that he was in honor bound to return the compliment; but he was staggered by the expense involved.

To give a banquet befitting his dignity as a United States officer entertaining distinguished representatives of a foreign nation would mean bankruptcy, as the government had not authorized him to draw on its treasury for such a purpose, and the cost of the affair would have to come out of his own pocket. A bright idea struck him.

He invited the naval visitors to be his guests the third day thereafter at an "American picnic." Then he sent invitations to the best people of the neighborhood to join him in a basket picnic at a grove near at hand on the day mentioned. Everybody was to bring friends and to put in a liberal supply of provisions.

The people came in their carriages, and the feast was spread in the grove, and the picnic was long remembered as one of the most notable social occasions of its time.—The Sunday Magazine.

It is reported that war is responsible for certain trouser effects in women's wearing apparel, and again we are reminded of General Sherman's definition of war.

Harvey E. Mussey and his son, Homer H. Mussey, former owners of the Thief River Falls Times, have started the Deerwood Times, the first issue being published last week.

Harry Thaw thinks the Canadian authorities ought to let him sit out of the country because they let Jack Johnson out. Here's hoping he's right and that he goes on far as the colored one has.

If the winning of state fair prizes does not evidence the skeptical that this corn can be grown in Red Lake county they are invited to attend the Red Lake County fair this month and see us fine a display of corn as was ever grown or shown anywhere.

There is the satisfactory report that many certificates farmers will hold their grain for some time in the hopes of getting better prices. Of course, that is a good time to market if there ever was a man who knew when it was wise to hold grain he has been dead for a long time, but it doesn't live in this day and generation. It is no doubt true that those farmers have benefited more who have sold their grain just as soon as they had it to sell and prices were anywhere near what they should be.

WHAT IT COSTS TO CELEBRATE

Three little boys died of lockjaw this year as the result of Fourth of July celebrations. Twenty-nine persons were killed by other accidents, eight by gunshot wounds, thirteen by fire works, six by powder and torpedoes, one by explosion of a cannon and one by blood poisoning following a burn. In addition to these thirty-two lives lost, there were 1,321 non-fatal injuries. Ten persons were totally blinded, twenty-two lost one eye each, ten lost legs, arms or hands, and forty-six lost one or more fingers.

This report which is taken from the 11th annual summary of Fourth of July injuries made by the Journal of the American Medical Association shows a marked improvement over conditions in the National Jubilee year when the Journal made its first report on this subject, 406 lives were lost from lockjaw due to Fourth of July injuries, while the total number of deaths was 461 and the total number of injuries 3,283. In the eleven years during which these reports have been compiled, Fourth of July celebrations have cost 1732 lives and have caused 39,388 non-fatal injuries, or a total of 41,120 injuries in eleven years. Nearly forty-two regiments of people have been injured, nearly one-half as many as the entire standing army of the United States.

The hopeful feature about the situation, however, is that conditions instead of the states show a marked improvement. In seventeen states on the other hand, the number of injuries is increasing; in these are four states—Pennsylvania, New York, Missouri and Connecticut—furnishing 67 per cent. The Pennsylvania statistics look particularly bad with the largest number, having 491 Fourth of July accidents, of which 240 occurred in Philadelphia.

is will outyield the other legumes. The United States Department of Agriculture says that hogs pastured upon sweet clover will make gains that compare very favorably with those obtained from alfalfa or red clover, though, of course, its feeding value depends upon the stage of cutting and how it is cured.

Also all legumes sweet clover stands where they are, so it is considerable time in the soil. On a rotation followed in the Southern States an application of two and one-half tons of ground limestone every four years doubled the crop the first year. It matters not how stiff and hard a soil may be, if it is sweet. Professor Hopkins considers inoculation unnecessary, though in most cases the best carries with it its own inoculation. Some claim that it is better the first year instead to use unhulled seed, on the dust in the hull inoculates the soil.

Sweet clover, if seeded with a nurse crop in the spring, seldom produces a cutting the first year, if conditions are favorable the first cutting will not usually be moved in June of the following year. It matters not how tall and heavy the bossoms make their appearance and how they seem demanding the last few years as to justify the practice of letting the second crop go to seed. If there is a good stand and the soil is reasonably productive a yield ranging from six to twelve bushels of seed per acre may be expected. The crop is not hard to thresh, but may be cut with a binder or threshed with a clover huller. Mr. Coverdale has learned from experience that sweet clover should be cut close to the ground, but as he says, "Cut just where the hay is and the cutting of the plant." When this is done the following crop makes good growth, whereas if it is cut down to the ground by close cutting it is variably killed down and there.

The seed weevil, the curse of this plant are shown by its adaptability to the little varying conditions. It is found in semi-arid regions where timothy and red clover will not succeed, and it produces satisfactory crops in some of the coulees states in both acid and alkali lands. According to the National Bureau of Agriculture, "It will grow on soils too sandy to support ordinary field crops, and appears to be even better adapted to raw clay and some alkali soils, where scarcely any other vegetation will be able to establish a foothold. It also makes excellent growth in gravel pits and stone quarries, but for such purposes it does not seem to do well on unsettled, cultivated soil. It makes its best growth where the soil is compact and not crowded with other vegetation."

In the chimney for sweet-clover seed some farmers have been duped. They have been furnished seed of the yellow variety, which while properly classified as sweet clover is a low-growing, early-maturing type that is in reality more of a weed than an economic plant. The kind of sweet clover that makes good pasture forms a white blossom, grows tall, branches profusely and matures seed uniformly. While it is in reality the common road-side clover, yet cultivation is improving it so that now like Mr. Coverdale are beginning to recognize "varieties" within the species. There is surely a great opportunity here for our experiment stations to select and fix a type of clover that is superior to the common road-side plant.

The result of this "sweet clover" picnic held on the Coverdale farm was to convince every one of the 600 hand-headed farmers that there is something to all the talk about sweet clover. In carrying on the work as a crop expert in Clinton county, Mr. R. J. Hosher had observed farmers of that county that more attention must be paid to legume growing in the future then has been the case in the past. Mr. Hosher had induced these farmers to spend a day on the Coverdale farm in order that through their own observations they might be convinced that legumes ecteedly beneficial land. They found here corn-stalks growing every prospect for a good yield of corn, following a crop of sweet clover. Careful handling their stock on these farms viewed many that they could greatly produce an income of $100 per acre from seed alone, and here in mind that these fields have previously yielded a crop of corn of from 40 to one-half tons per acre. With these concluding lessons before them it is not surprising that the great majority were convinced more than ever their will, that this so-called weed after all has an economic value that gives it an important place as a legume crop in the rotation of the producer among the crops of the state.

NEW SILO BULLETIN

How Solid Clay Block and Solid Concrete Silos were Made at Experiment Farms.

Most Minnesota farmers who keep stock and grow corn should have a silo. If they wish, to build these silos themselves from hollow clay blocks or concrete, they should be sure copies of "Two Types of Silos at Northwest Experiment Farms" in which Superintendent C. G. Selvetta how silos were built of these two materials at Crookston. A brief article by Superintendent A. J. McGuire of the North Central Experiment Farm tells how a hollow clay block silo was built at Grand Rapids, while photographs showing an other in the stages of construction and later being filled at the University Farm Dairy Barn.

Although this laudable undertaken only to tell how certain silos were built and not to recommend particular methods of using these materials or to present full information on silos, brief suggestions are given for the location of the silo, the cost with which to fill it, the concrete floor is necessary, the roof and cost of the silo. Copies of this bulletin may be had by writing to the Director of the Minnesota Experiment Stations, University Farm, St. Paul.

IMPORTANCE OF CARE

To Insure Good Crop Corn Seed Should be Selected Early.

If the farmers of Minnesota are to have a good corn crop in 1913, it is time to lay plans for it now. Every corn crop starts with the gathering of seed. The difference in yield of next year's corn crop resulting from seed gathered at the proper time in the proper way, and the seed as ordinarily handled, may mean many bushels per acre.

The best time to gather seed corn is before the first killing frost, which in Minnesota usually comes between September 10 and 20. In a normal season if the corn is acclimated it should be far enough along toward maturity so that good seed can be gathered at this time. Most farmers know that to get best results from seed corn, it should be gathered before the corn is ready for husking.

When a large proportion of the earlier ears show the dent beginning to harden, the seed-corn day has arrived. The best part of the field should be picked first, examining every hill with the eye, at least. Whenever a desirable seed ear is found it should be gathered, providing it is produced on a hill that has a full stand of corn. No seed ear should be gathered from hills of corn with less than three well developed stalks. It will be noticed that the larger and more fully developed ears are produced on the hills that have from one to two stalks. It is undesirable to use these ears for seed as their size can be accounted for from the fact that they had less competition in life, rather than inherent tendency to produce heavily.

Seed-corn gathering should be regarded as a specific duty that must be performed on a certain day, and as soon as that day comes all turned into the cornfield to gather seed. In no other way can the best results be secured. Seed corn is the basis of intensive number of acres of corn required to fill silos of various sizes and helps to determine how large a silo to build in order to feed a given number of cattle 180 or 240 days.

Other methods of constructing silos of these materials are stated in bulletins distributed by the Experiment Station at Ames, Iowa. Over 40,000 copies of the Minnesota Bulletin have just been distributed and about 20,000 are still available for later inquirers who may address the Office of Publications, University Farm, St. Paul.—J. O. Rankin.

ROSEAU COUNTY IS HIT BY TORNADO

LATE REPORTS SHOW THAT DAMAGE IS FAR GREATER THAN SUPPOSED.

TWO DEAD AND TWO DYING

Four Others Seriously Hurt and Property Loss May Be More Than $100,000 When All Is Known.

Thief River Falls—Late reports from the section of Roseau county visited by a tornado and severe wind storm increase the list of dead to two, with two persons lying at the point of death and four seriously injured, besides a score of persons who received cuts and bruises and other minor injuries.

The storm, it has been learned, traveled a path two miles wide and twenty miles long. Originating a few miles north of the village of Greenbush, in Roseau county, it swept to a northwesterly direction, visiting the villages of Lee, Hoag, Melong and Roseau.

The storm-swept district is remote from telegraph and telephone service and inland from the railroad, and it will be several days before a complete list of dead and injured is available and the extent of the property damage may be determined.

The Property Damage.

The known property damage is $25,000. This will be increased as later returns come in, and the estimated damage to property of the farmers whose crops and killed live stock is estimated at more than $100,000.

The dead are: Eleven-year-old son of A. F. Anderson, farmer, near Lee killed by lightning; twelve-year-old daughter of John Zaliasik, at Melong, killed by lightning in the presence of mother and young brother.

The fatally injured are: Theodore Zaliasik, farmer, near Lee, hurled against pile of wood by tornado and internally injured; recovery doubtful. Joseph Setzegro, laborer on Zaliasik farm near Lee, internally injured; may die.

The seriously injured are: Three-year-old son of A. F. Anderson, near Lee, leg crushed by falling timbers; Mrs. John Zolinski, of Melong, seriously ill from lightning bolt; sufferer from shock of seeing daughter killed; Thomas Monkman, Roseau, three ribs fractured, internal injuries; expected to recover. Mrs. Thomas Monkman, Roseau, cut and bruised when house was demolished.

Doctors in the towns and villages of the stricken district declare they are fully able to handle the situation, although aid was offered from many of the neighboring cities."

Several detachments of men have proffered their services in the hope doctors who suffered the greatest losses to aid them to clear away the debris and rebuild their dwellings.

SUE FOR $174,000 DAMAGES

Deadwife Claims Railway Company Should Pay for Fire Losses of 1910—Motion for Defense.

tlemlJl—Sarah E. Orr, a Beaudette storekeeper, demands $174,000 for herself and eighteen others from the Canadian Northern Railway company for damages alleged to have been caused by the fire which destroyed Beaudette and Spooner in October, 1910.

All of the persons associated with Mrs. Orr in her demand for damages had property in Beaudette at the time of the conflagration and it is to this that is involved in the present proceedings.

It is alleged by Mrs. Orr that the railroad company was responsible for the fire and therefore should pay for property consumed.

The first move on the part of the defense was to request Judge C. W. Stanton of the district court here to issue an order instructing the sheriff of Lake of the Woods county to serve the request was denied. The defense now has made its second move which is despite the action of Judge Stanton, a plea to Judge Wilbur of the district court in Minneapolis that the case be given jurisdiction in the United States court.

Body Was Not Stolen.

Grand Rapids.—The parents of 12-year-old Ruby Campbell, who was found dead in bed at Cohasset a short time ago, this week received the casket containing the remains to be exhumed, declaring the body were informed the body had been stolen and sent to a medical college. They wanted Coroner Hirsh to have the coffin dug up to satisfy them, but the coroner refused, saying, however, he had no objection to their doing the work. This was done with the result that the body was found as it was placed.

Dairy Barn is Destroyed.

Middle River.—During a heavy thunder storm that passed over this village Thursday the dairy barn of August Anderson, a farmer living four miles west, was struck by lightning and was destroyed by fire.

New Dock is Completed.

Brainerd.—The first ore loaded into the pockets of the new N. P. railway dock at Superior, came from the Cuyuna-Mille Lacs iron north of Ironton. The first ore shipment was made Saturday.

STATE ELKS CLOSE SESSION

Elect Officers, Chose Little Falls for 1914 Convention and Adjourn.

Willmar.—At the business session of the Minnesota State Elks association. J. J. Hilbe, of St. Cloud, was elected president; R. F. Eldridge, St. Paul (re-elected) and Henry M. Lawrence, Minneapolis, treasurer. Little Falls was chosen for the 1914 meeting, as to be held in June instead of August, at a date to be determined by the president and the convention city lodge.

It was resolved in full a two-days' convention next year instead of three. A committee, consisting of J. C. Nalbandy, Stillwater, W. W. Koons, St. Paul and R. J. Aspin, Fergus Falls, was appointed to revise the by-laws and constitution and report to next convention.

The sum of $100 was appropriated as a contingent fund to be used by the officers in endeavoring to get all state lodges into the association. A proposition to select a permanent place for the state convention was presented and will be considered at the next session.

The retiring president, Dr. H. P. Rawson, of Minneapolis, suggested several changes in the method of dress, recommending a more uniform per capita tax on all lodges and an earlier date for the state convention. His recommendations were referred to a committee.

TO DROP RECALL PETITION

International Falls Alderman Reverses Attitude and Will Be Left Undisturbed.

International Falls.—The petition of R. H. Richaud for the vacating of the First street from Second avenue to the river was turned down by unanimous vote of the council at a special session held this week. Originating a few days ago, the petition to vacate was presented to the council in July and was stopped. The wind is now at rest. The citizens of the street was favored by the Boise-Rainy Lumber company and were being needed.

Besides the council's action the voters of the fourth ward circulated a petition for this recall on the ground that if the street were vacated half of the International Falls' river frontage would be given over to corporate interests. The necessary number of signers was secured, but the recall petition was not filed with the city clerk, as it was understood this would move to reconsider.

Duluth.—Work has begun on the model town which will be constructed by the United States Steel corporation for the use of the men who will be employed in the new steel plant.

The contract for 170 new buildings has been let to a Duluth contractor for $600,000. These buildings will be completed before the end of the year, it is said, and will be the first unit of the model town that will be built at Gary. Fifty of these will be ready for occupancy this fall, and the remainder in the spring.

POSSE SHOOTS TWO MEN

Pitched Battle on Highway Follows Alleged Attack on Marshal.

Waconia—A posse, summoned by Marshal Edward Radde of this place, fought a battle with two men two miles east of Waconia. The encounter was the sequel of an attempt to shoot the officer. Both strangers were wounded. They were taken to the village lockup and later to the county jail of Carver county at Chaska. They gave their names as Albert end George Johnson.

Albert Johnson was the man who shot at Marshal Radde. The marshal unarmed, was running to cover behind a building in the village street when he tripped and fell just as the men fired a shotgun, the charge, said to have been slugs, passing harmlessly over his body.

The Johnsons, it is said, travel in gypsy fashion, with a wagon and tent, pitching a camp wherever they desire. About a month ago they stopped at Waconia and made themselves obnoxious in the village. The marshal ordered them away and told them not to come back. At that time it is said, the men made threats against Radde. When the marshal saw the same man in Waconia yesterday he again ordered them from the village.

The men went to their wagon and each returned with a shotgun. The marshal started for cover when one man fired. The fall of Radde startled life. Louis Zeman, clerk in the Wacoda drug store, witnessed the affair. After the shot had been fired at Radde, Zeman thought he could assist and pulled the man who fired it but when he started toward him he found himself covered by a shotgun in the hands of the other man. Four of the residents of Waconia were in the village hearing the shooting.

The strangers made tracks for their wagon, whipped up their horses and drove away. Marshal Radde obtained a fellow deputy, Fred Frank, Frank Fred, Frank Hervey, Peter Weinsteer and Walter Kunsarow, all of them armed, and started after the fugitives in an automobile.

The fleeing men were overtaken two miles out. A dozen or fifteen shots were exchanged and both men were wounded.

The man styling himself George Johnson was shot in the left leg. The other man was wounded in the arm. Neither is thought to be fatally injured.

PROGRESSIVES ARE TO MEET

Will Discuss Plans for Next Year's Political Battle in Minnesota for Different Offices.

St. Paul.—A conference of Progressives from all parts of the state will probably be held in St. Paul some time during State Fair week. H. T. Halbert, state chairman, has suggested Wednesday, September 3, as a tentative date, and has written to each of the state central committee regarding the matter.

Practically all of those heard from so far favor the meeting, saying they would be in St. Paul next week anyway. One or two were opposed to Mr. Halbert's plan of having a brewfest conference." Some favored an evening meeting.

Plans for organizing the state for next year's campaign will be discussed.

Found Dying on Tracks.

St. Paul.—Found lying on the tracks of the Minneapolis & St. Louis railroad on Green isle, Minn., thirty-five miles from Minneapolis, John Fisher and Lake Orawna, Wis., was picked up by the engineer of a train due in Minneapolis at 9:15 p. m. He was taken before the train reached the city. The train was run at full speed for Minneapolis and the injured man was at once placed in a physician but his injuries proved too serious for the long ride.

Teachers' Institute at Litchfield.

Litchfield.—Dr. J. S. Vesse of the State university has charge of the teachers' institute which opened here for a week. He will be assisted by Miss Plepp and Miss Anna Ousdorf, county superintendent of schools. Much interest is being taken in a revival at the Christian church, conducted by Rev. C. B. Osgood of Minneapolis. He is assisted in the work by Miss Myrtle Hanson, a member of the faculty of the St. Cloud normal school.

Kellogg to Receive Degree.

New York, Aug. 28.—Among those who will receive degrees from McGill university Tuesday are Frank B. Kellogg of St. Paul. Former President Taft and other eminent men will also be given degrees.

TEXT OF PRESIDENT WILSON'S MESSAGE

OUTLINES DETAILS OF NATION'S EFFORT TO RESTORE PEACE IN MEXICO.

WHOLE WORLD INTERESTED

Executive Asserts Proposals Are Friendly Mediation, Not to Give Government One Opportunity to Resume Action Any Time.

Washington, Aug. 28.—Before a joint session of the house and senate President Wilson read the following message in regards to the Mexican situation:

"It is clearly my duty to lay before you very fully and without reservation the facts concerning present conditions with the republic of Mexico. The gravity of the situation there as it affects our neighbor's need not describe, but I deem it my duty to point very plainly to what this government has done and should do in the discharge of its obligation to Mexico herself as a friend and neighbor and to American citizens whose lives and vital interests are seriously affected by the unsettled conditions which now obtain throughout the territory.

"Those conditions touch us very nearly. Not only because many live at our very doors. That, of course, makes us more acutely aware of constantly conscious of them, and every instinct of humanity is touched and every sympathy is aroused and quickened by them; but that is only one element in the determination of our duty. We are glad to offer our friendly counsel and aid to our neighbors in any way in which they may welcome it, and we are ready as well as to these days of trouble and confusion to show them our friendship by every act of helpful intimacy and sacrifice and every generous manifestation.

Sympathize With Mexico.

"But we are not the only friends of Mexico. The whole world stands in that relation to her, and the whole world is interested in the solution which these distressing circumstances may work. Mexico has a great history. She has had a great literature—American north and south and upon both continents—and has made the development of Mexico; and that development must be of the most solid and intimate character, if it be a development of a genuine and lasting kind, upon the basis of government, founded upon law. Only so can it be peaceful. And we believe that the fate of peace Mexico has a great and intimate future before her if only she should and attain the paths of peace and constitutional order.

Regrets Present Conditions.

"The present circumstances of the republic, I deeply regret to say, do not seem to promise early or confident hope of such a peace. We have waited long and patiently to see what time and the operation of affairs would bring forth in the way of settlement, but conditions do not improve. They grow worse rather. The territory in the north constantly falls into the possession of revolutionary leaders who have no conception of the task of government except the capture of arbitrary power. Their progress is marked by every act of violence which can mark the character of men who take their pleasure where they find it. Lawless aggression is their only conception of government and personal liberty.

"The prospect of the pacification of the country even in the remote future seems to grow more and more remote and the confusion of counsel and disorder in the capital is evidently impossible by any other means than by the slow process of long and weary attempt to organize opinion and sentiment and to purify and steady the suffrage. The actual situation of the authorities at the capital is not presently to be revealed.

Counsels Patience.

"Meanwhile, what is it our duty to do? Clearly, everything that we do must be rooted in patience and must square with calm and disinterested deliberation. Impatience on our part would be childish and would be fraught with the greatest danger to Mexico herself. We can afford to exercise the self-restraint which really characterizes a people who realizes its own strength and scorns to be boastful.

"It was our duty to offer our active friendship at the very outset because what true neutrality will do to-day it may not be possible to do to-morrow. We cannot alter our attitude and our influence in the midst of a crisis, when action is necessary in order to prevent it altogether. We cannot thereafter alter it with regard to the circumstances in the spirit of most earnest and disinterested friendship. It is our purpose in whatever we do or propose the full recognition of the principle that neither our government nor the people associated with it in the United States have any intention or desire to take any part in the affairs of Mexico or to impair in any degree the sovereignty of her territory. It is acting on its friendship for Mexico now if at all, that we intend to act.

Cry Out for Settlement.

"The circumstances are these:

"(A)—An immediate cessation of hostilities throughout Mexico, a definite armistice solemnly entered into and scrupulously observed.

"(B)—Security given for an early election in which all the people may express in take part;

"(C)—The consent of General Huerta to bind himself not to be a candidate for election as president of the republic at this election; and

"(D)—The consent of all parties to abide by the results at the election and co-operate with the utmost energy in organizing and supporting the administration chosen.

The government of the United States will be glad to play any part in this settlement or in its carrying out which any one party honorably and constantly with it may be asked to play. It pledges itself to recognize and in every way possible assist and support in fact the administration chosen and set up in Mexico if the conditions are such as we have suggested.

Makes Two Suggestions.

"Taking all the existing conditions into consideration, the government of the United States can conceive of no other solution than the one we propose. We are now attempting to sharpen the policy of watchful waiting to the point of deciding the affairs of friendship. We cannot alter the facts of Mexico nor the character of the people of Mexico nor the inevitable course of her life in the future. We must deal with these facts as they are and not as we might wish them to be. We are the friends of constitutional government in America, are glad to be the friends of every government in America which is supported by the consent of its people. But we can discern no circumstances in which we could take counsel with those who have destroyed constitutional government in Mexico except in the way we have indicated.

Mexico Misinformed.

"I am led to believe that they were misinformed partly because the authorities at Mexico City had been systematically misled by their agents at the other end of the line as to the real circumstances and the actual facts. We cannot think that the people of the United States believe that the present administration in Mexico City has back of it the people of the United States.

"The apparent singularly unfortunate misunderstanding on their part is to leave the government isolated and without friends who can effectually aid them. Such a situation is unintelligible to us. Its circumstances we can only await the time of its own choosing to be explained by the actual facts. We cannot think that it will be long necessary. In any circumstances are now. The rejection of the friendly counsel makes their case all the more perplexing and must certainly involve them in great embarrassment.

HOMESTEADS FOR TEACHERS

CONGRESSMAN PROPOSES THAT THEY HAVE SAME PRIVILEGE AS SOLDIERS.

All teachers in the public schools will be given the same privileges as the soldiers, under the homestead laws, if an amendment recently offered becomes law, and it is said to be reasonably certain that it will. The only restriction is that the teaching must be done in the schools of the state or territory in which the homestead is located.

Mr. Stemerson's argument is that the teachers are entitled to special consideration on account of their services to the nation, and because their time spent in teaching is of greater economic value for the nation than the same amount of time spent on a homestead.

The bill will give practically every teacher a chance to become the owner of a piece of land if there is any government land in the state.

The Ninth district congressman also proposes that the expenditure of $2.50 per acre in clearing, improving or draining timber or swamp land shall be sufficient to prove up, regardless of the area under cultivation. This fits the requirements more nearly to the needs of the timber country.—Warroad Pioneer.

LAMBERT (OKLEE)

The crop is all cut and a number of farms are threshed out. The yield is good and the grade of every grain is also good but the late sorts have not turned out as well owing to the drouth.

Rains and heavy electric storms are passing us on all sides but we are still as "dry as a bone."

The Oklee Commercial club's automobile tour was a complete success. Quite a few of the farmers brought in some grain samples on exhibit nor any chance to show their hospitality—for they were right welcome.

Miss Ruth Whitely of Ruckton, has returned from the Soo where she spent a few months with friends. She is a milliner, for the fall season.

Mr. Blanchard Davis is building an addition to the R. Davis residence to be used as living rooms and apartments, which is an ornament to the farm and is to be a model of completeness as well. Some fine places and pretty floors with a wide veranda are some of the beauties of the new house. It speaks well for southern Minnesota to have Mr. Blanchard preparing to spend a share of his leisure time here as he is a gentleman who has traveled extensively.

Mr. Dumphy is helping Mr. Langlois out in the hardware store during the rush season. Both are popular young men of this city.

"Governor" Paquin injured.

Abraham Paquin had the misfortune to fall on the handle of a pitch fork in such a way that it entered his body, thereby causing a severe hemorrhage. Dr. Hamel of Mentoon was called by phone and took the injured man to the Red Lake Falls hospital where he is recovering slowly. Mr. Paquin has been shipping baled hay and was hustling in the last two cars when the accident happened.

Dr. Spofford will be in Red Lake Falls Sept. 9. At the Grand View Hotel. —Adv.

THE SPICE OF LIFE.

Rare Cleverness.

Artful Dodger.

Past mid-night after stall went the rich merchant, followed by a footman in smart livery. It was the annual village bazaar.

"Ah, Mr. Pitsbrendon," said a really sweet and charming lady at one of the stalls, "and what are you going to buy? Dear old auntie and I are running this table, and we have home-made cakes, aprons, pewipers, and——"

"Yes," said Mr. P., "and I'll buy just one of each. But do you sell kisses at your stall?"

"Oh, certainly!" was the ready reply. "Once guinea each!"

"Right," replied the customer. "Then I'll take a couple—and good measure, please!"

"Aunt," remarked the fair and dainty damsel, "forward, please! Two kisses for the gentleman!"

But a moment the man of means was nonplussed, but only for a moment. Then he turned to his secretary.

"James," he said coolly, "just take this letter down."—London Pictorial Weekly.

NORTHERN PACIFIC BUYS GREAT NORTHERN IS THE RUMOR

LINE AFFECTED IS THAT FORM RED LAKE FALLS TO WARROAD.

MEANS THROUGH TRAINS—POSSIBLY TWIN CITIES TO WINNIPEG SERVICE.

This week there is another railroad rumor that seems to be well founded. There is little doubt that the matter of improved service on the Northern Pacific line has been under consideration for some time and it was quite generally believed that an up-town depot was to be built in Red Lake Falls and through passenger trains, twin cities to Grand Forks, and a daily freight put on.

Now it is reported that the Northern Pacific has purchased from the Great Northern the line from this junction, just south of town, to Warroad. This will give the Northern Pacific an almost direct line from the twin cities to the border.

If the report is correct the Red Lake Falls-Grand Forks line will probably be abandoned and Red Lake Falls will be on the main line of the Northern Pacific instead of branch lines of the Northern Pacific and Great Northern, with through passenger trains from the twin cities.

There is a possibility that it is planned to make this line a part of a twin cities to Winnipeg line. By the construction of a line from Warroad to Winnipeg or by a trackage arrangement with the Canadian Northern this line could be made one of the shortest to the Canadian city.

PFAENDER MAY ENTER CONTEST

NEW GAME HAS BEEN MENTIONED AS CANDIDATE FOR GOVERNOR.

St. Paul, Sept. 9.—(Special)—With 1913 as off year, as far as the satisfying of political hopes and ambitions is concerned, the state Democracy is practically doing nothing beyond keeping its weather eye open and the listing of possible breaks in the ranks of the enemy. However, those who know profess to see in German day, which was celebrated in the Capital City Sunday a week ago and the selection of Representative Pfaender of New Ulm as the principal speaker, the earmarks of a gubernatorial frameup that may cause the enemy to set up and take notice in due time. The opinion of the wise ones is that Mr. Pfaender, who was one of the most popular young members of the last house, may head the ticket of the unwashed a year hence. "Al," as the boys down here know him best, is a German, a lawyer by profession, lives at New Ulm, was the recognized leader of the Democratic minority in the last house and is regarded by those who know him as safe and sane. To the so called irreconcilable Progressive this last characterization, safe and sane, probably spells reactionary, but Mr. Pfaender is easily free from that infliction. None were more strongly identified with good and progressive legislation at the last session than the man from New Ulm. With Governor Eberhart picked by many, and especially the organization, to head the Republican hosts next year, Pfaender chances as a Democratic rival have been discussed by quite a few and the opinions have been various. That he could get away with the nomination is pretty near certain and that he would poll a heavy German vote in the election which would follow is practically sure, but whether his popularity would be sufficient to break a Scandinavian cleavage on the Republican side of the house is the question. Wise ones in the Democratic ranks say he would, but there are others who are not so sanguine. However, if he does get in the doubting Thomasses say he will give his Republican rival the run of his political career.

In the days of the convention nationality in the selection of candidates was something that was never overlooked. Until the advent of John Lind, of Scandinavian extraction, the governorship went to the men best calculated to command votes, but when it came to the other state offices they were parceled out on lines calculated to reach the various nationalities. Out of this grew the custom of giving the office of state treasurer to the Germans and that of secretary of state to the Scandinavians. These two were the principal voting nationalities of the state and due recognition was given them. According to the state census and the federal census for that matter the Germans are the largest single voting nationality in Minnesota, but they are offset by those of Scandinavian parentage or birth. These take in the Norwegians, those acknowledging Sweden as the mother country and the dependencies of the two nations. It is this large German vote in Minnesota that is encouraging the friends of Mr. Pfaender who went him for gubernatorial honors. While so do the Scandinavian and of the state's voting population has stood by those of its own nationality Mr. Pfaender's friends say this claimishness is fast passing. While Mr. Pfaender is certain of the German vote they hold he would be sure to get the opposition to Governor Eberhart in his own nationality. All these deductions, however, sound nice, but no one yet has heard Mr. Pfaender say he would like to make the race or could even be induced to enter the lists. But there is plenty of time, so why worry. Lots of strange things can happen in a year.

Talk and gossip to the contrary it is pretty certain that W. R. Lee will make another try at the Republican gubernatorial nomination next year. A letter bearing this information was now being sent to friends over the state removes all doubt. It reads:

"I assume that you are still anxious to see the Eberhart-Smith political machine defeated in Minnesota, and the experience of last year indicates that this can only be accomplished by having an one candidate.

"I have not at all been to get into the race, but the pressure is considerable and I shall not flinch from what may appear to be my duty.

"In case I decide to run, I wish to say as I can have Great Northern co-operation and support.

"With kind personal regards, I remain,

"Yours very truly,

"W. R. LEE."

Mr. Lee gained considerable support as a result of his race with Lind, when he was one of a field of five to cross swords with A. O. Eberhart. While it is shown in his letter, in which he makes the point that next year's organization must be conducted on one man if those who are not satisfied with the present regime want to win, "Bill" is certainly showing some good horse sense.

The Hans Hanson Co. Here Sept. 16.

The Hans Hanson Company, which will be the offering at the Opera House Tuesday, Sept. 16, has been on the road continuously for fifteen years and for the past six years two companies have been presenting the five popular plays. It has been seen in every state and territory in the Union with possibly two exceptions, and last season one company toured Canada, where the play met with the same remarkable reception that has characterized its tours of the United States. The popularity of the play is not limited to any particular section. Wherever it goes it is the same story—crowded houses and delighted audiences. Other plays that have been before the public for determined, and frequently augers fote interior companies on the basis with low salaried actors in the principle roles. Mr. McAlpine has always kept his companies up to standard and that is probably the reason for his remarkable success with this sterling company. Year after year the companies under the various cities fortunate enough to be on their routes and invariably the companies are equal to the best previous years, and from time to time improvements are being made that strengthen the organization. This season the vaudeville portion of the show has received the best Alpine's careful attention. Five first class vaudville members add great strength to the performance. Adv.

THE HOMESTEAD LAWS

And Some Changes That Have Been Proposed by Congressman Steenerson.

There seems to be a great deal of uncertainty about the requirements of the land settlers on the public lands under the new homestead law, for I have received hundreds of letters requesting information, and I believe the following general abstract will throw some light upon the subject which will be of general interest:

In the case of entries made prior to June 6, 1913, proof may be made under the old five year law which requires residence for a period of five years and an amount of cultivation and improvements sufficient to demonstrate the settlement's good faith. It is not necessary that the entryman shall have filed his election to complete his entry under the old law, as required by the Act of June 6, 1912, for by subsequent settlement the requirement to file an election of choice under which law he desires to prove up was repealed. And, as to those entries made before June 6, 1912, commutation proof may be made upon a showing of 14 months actual continuous residence upon the land, the same to be established by proof or filing of notice of intention to submit final proof, which notification and improvements as above indicated must exist at the time of such proof. Such entrymen may take advantage of the three years homestead law by showing residence for a period of three years (with permissible absence of five consecutive months during each year after the establishment of residence) and the cultivation of not less than one-sixteenth of the area of the entry (or one year, followed by one-eighth the next year and each succeeding year until final proof.

If the entry is made after June 6, 1913 the period for residence is three years with the privilege of five months absence in each year, but the cultivation required, which is one-sixteenth of the area entered must be effected beginning the second year of the entry, followed by one-eighth beginning the third year and each succeeding year until final proof. And, as to these entries, a commutation proof may be made upon a showing of 14 months actual continuous residence upon the land acquired, as a rule of administration, that at least one-fifth of the area entered shall be under cultivation.

Now, in addition to residence there are lands where it is impracticable, and in many localities impossible to meet these requirements of residence and cultivation, and with a view to affording relief in these cases the recently introduced bill will authorize the Secretary of the Interior to hold the question of an amount in lieu equal to $2.50 an acre for the area of residence or its equivalent to cultivation. In the case of lands to be irrigated the application this shall be effected by ditching and making the first year's use of timbered or cut-over lands it shall be required to pay $1.25 an amount in lieu equal to $1.50 an acre for the whole are entered has been expended in clearing, breaking and preparing the land for cultivation. Although the act provides that under cultivation may be less than that required by law, yet that this bill also provides that the time which may be required to prepare for during the homestead period as a whole besides the public lands of the same state or territory shall be deducted. Five per cent, entry fee will be required to perfit title, the same as now although honorably discharged soldiers and sailors for actual war service, the same will not be required of such settler that he live on the land one year after he shall have commenced his improvements in order to obtain title.

It should be borne in mind, however, that title to the land will not be considered during this extra session of Congress, but will be taken up when Congress convenes in regular session the first Monday in December.

VERY SUCCESSFUL AUTOMOBILE RUN

TWENTY CARS IN ADVERTISING TOUR TO ST. HILAIRE AND THIEF RIVER.

The second county fair advertising tour, Friday evening, was participated in by twenty cars and about a hundred people and was a very successful "stunt" in every way and Red Lake county was generally and cordially received. At Thief River Falls and St. Hilaire, the places scheduled.

The start was made between six and seven o'clock in the evening, the band playing and the cars and band paraded the streets. Big crowds of people were out to enjoy the fun and there is no doubt but every one of Thief River's several thousand inhabitants knows that there is to be a big Red Lake county fair. Red Lake Falls Sept. 24, 25 and 26.

Only one serious setback to the merry storms were encountered. It was a slippery, sloppy drive and it was impossible to keep the machines from out of the ditch. However, every body was happy, for nothing short of a cloudburst could dampen the enthusiasm of the hoosiers.

The Crookston College.

Has had over 100 positions that it could not fill for lack of students. That is the place for you. Bonds and loan furnished to private pupils by 13 to $2.50 per week. 4 Weeks to J. C. Selbre, Crookston, Minn.—Adv.

NINETY CARS COMING

A Big Bunch of Crookston People Will be Here For County Fair.

Word has been received here that ninety automobiles will bring the Crookston people who are to be here for the Red Lake county fair. The Crookston people will bring their band and will surely make a showing that would put a circus train to shame.

THE GOVERNOR'S PROCLAMATION SEED CORN WEEK

DESIGNATING WEEK OF SEPTEMBER 15-20 AS SEED CORN WEEK.

Minnesota is now producing over two million acres of corn annually, representing a product worth more than $30,000,000. Yields of corn secured by Minnesota farmers during the past five years have been equal to the yields in many of the best corn-growing regions. Minnesota is made in the Corn Belt, and can compete successfully with any of the other states.

Good seed corn is important in every state, but it is especially important in Minnesota because varieties of corn must be planted that will mature in from a hundred to a hundred and twenty days. Minnesota cannot successfully depend upon importing good corn. The best seed corn for Minnesota farmers is carefully selected seed corn that has been produced on their own farms. Good seed corn in Minnesota may be easily mean in increased yield of five bushels per acre. This with be worth to the state at least $5,000,000 annually, or more than $40 per farm.

I therefore heartily endorse the campaign made by the University College of Agriculture for the careful selection of seed corn, and hereby appoint the week of September 15-20 as Seed Corn Week. I earnestly join with Governors of other corn growar in Minnesota in calling on at least one day of the week designated to give the name of Hugo Wilson, better known as "Scotty de Pump," Scotty de Pump, who is alleged to have been placed under a heavy bastile to await the action of the grand jury, but said bastile being of rather flimsy construction was not able to withstand the onslaughts of the wily Virginian and he broke loose shortly and it is presumed has hied himself to pastures green.—Thief River News-Press.

ENTER THE BIG CORN CONTEST

STILL AN OPPORTUNITY FOR THOSE WHO HAVE NOT FILED BLANKS.

If you are a Red Lake county farmer and planted fifteen acres to corn this year you will have a chance at one. If you have not entered the contest commitmate with the secretary of the fair association, A. Rubedeau at once. He will supply the necessary blanks. Entries must be in by October 1st at noon the first day of the fair.

This offer, made to increase the acreage of corn in the county and to demonstrate its value as a Red Lake county crops, is independent of the regular premium list and if you have corn,no matter how small an amount, nor no matter how small an amount you may compete for all other corn prizes except the special offer referred to.

Weather Note.

A heavy bunch of clouds passed over Hogwallow yesterday bound for a Sunday school picnic in the town near Rye River.—Paducah Hogwallow Enquirer.

A BIG WHEAT YIELD

Sam Miller Reports the Bumper Yield—40 Bushels to Acre.

Sam Miller reports a big yield of wheat on two pieces on his farm east of town. A twenty-acre piece yielded 25½ bushels to the acre and a ten acre piece went 40 bushels to the acre. The larger field was old land in one condition, while the 40-bushel yield was second on new land.

Veilleux officiating, Mr. Emery G. Lasha was united in marriage to Miss Josephine A. North. The contracting parties are among the most popular young people of Argyle. The bride is the second daughter of Councilman and Mrs. C. N. North of this city and is a young lady of winsome personality and splendid examplary character. She is a graduate of the Argyle high school. The groom is a product of Red Lake Falls where he received his schooling and start in life and he came to Argyle with a reputation that placed him to the front in social circles. He was appointed last spring as rural mail carrier on Route No. 3 out of Argyle and his genial manners and courteous treatment of the patrons of the route have won for him much popularity.

The wedding was a quiet affair, only the relatives of the young people and immediate friends being present. The bride was supported at the altar by the Misses Cora Lasha, sister of the groom, nd her sister, Miss Nora and Hallie Lasha, cousins, as bridesmaids, while the groom was supported by Mr. Omer Morin, brother-in-law of the bride, Mr. Wilfred Lapelle and Mr. Cir Shiller. The young people departed on the evening train for Red Lake Falls where they will spend their honeymoon at the home of the groom's parents for a week or more, after which they will return to Argyle to make their home.

Came to "Get" Him.

Last Thursday afternoon, L. E. Brye, a banker employed in the tonsorial parlors of P. L. Mayhew, met Mr. Rye was somewhat "rattled" for the time being, and denied any previous acquaintance with the person of Will Weeks, of Bemidji, but managed to recover shortly, however and made a "getaway" after which he had the cold-pig artist arrested.

The tramp, for such he was, was lodged into Judge Tarrant's court, where he gave the name of Hugo Wilson, better known as "Scotty de Pump." Scotty de Pump, who is alleged to have been placed under a heavy bastile to await the action of the grand jury, but said bastile being of rather flimsy construction was not able to withstand the onslaughts of the wily Virginian and he broke loose shortly and it is presumed has hied himself to pastures green.—Thief River News-Press.

DEAD MAN FOUND AND MURDER IS SUSPECTED

FOUND ON SOO RIGHT OF WAY THREE MILES SOUTH OF PLUMMER.

IT IS BELIEVED THAT MAN WAS KILLED AND BODY LEFT THERE.

Red Lake county has a murder mystery that will probably always remain a mystery, for there is little evidence that may be used to connect any one with the killing of the man whose dead body was found on the Soo line railroad right of way three miles south of Plummer by the crew of freight No. 954 Monday.

However, there is little doubt that the man was murdered. County Attorney Boughton and Sheriff Fellman have been to the place when advised of the finding of the body, believe that the man was murdered. The body was found in a ditch, the body was found and the surroundings indicate that the man didn't fall from a train but that his body was thrown there and left, presumably by people who desired to get it out of the way and deposited the body there to create the impression that the man had been killed by a train. There were two holes in the face, one in front of the right ear and one at the point of the chin, that might have caused wounds, but this could not be determined definitely because of the decomposed condition of the body. The body was found at the bottom of a twenty foot embankment.

There was little or about the body that might be used to assist in identification. There was no money and no watch or jewelry. A hat contained a mark indicating that it had been sold by an Alexandria merchant. It is expected when found, the want ad page of the Minneapolis Journal of Aug. 15, 1913, and a some with the title "I Will Show You When There are Silver Threads Among the Gold." There were also two boxes of matter and a whiskey bottle partly full, or partly empty, labeled "frail plat." There was not a scrap of paper to throw a clue as to who the dead man might be.

The body was evidently that of a laboring man about forty years old and weighing about 170 pounds. The remains were buried yesterday at the expense of the county and County Attorney Boughton is now in communication with the authorities at Alexandria in the hope that they can give him any information as to who the dead man may be.

Course for Nurses.

The University of Minnesota will enter a new field of endeavor on September 17th, 1913. The preliminary courses of instruction for a period of four months, which is followed by hospital residence and training for two years and eight months.

BOOMING THE FAIR

Thief River Falls Report of Friday Evening Auto Tour.

The following news story was sent from Thief River Falls to the Duluth Herald:

Last night the Red Lake Falls Auto club sprang a surprise on the people of this city. About 8:30 in the evening automobiles, loading their home, commenced coming into town, and inside of about fifteen minutes nearly the whole Falls cars were flying around the main business streets. The cars displayed large banners advertising the dates of the Red Lake county fair. The cars made a run on main hill on Labree avenue and their occupants alighted and formed a procession 100 strong and marched up and down the streets. The procession was headed by the Red Lake Falls Concert band of thirty pieces, which played some lively music during the march. The band also played several pieces in front of the Evelyn and Brunsdale hotels. While the band was playing a number of enthusiastic Red Lake Falls citizens distributed handbills among the crowd announcing the dates of the county fair, which will be Sept. 24, 25 and 26.

FAST TRAINS CRASH; 26 KILLED; 50 HURT

LOCOMOTIVE PLUNGES THROUGH PULLMANS, CRUSHING SLEEPING PASSENGERS.

FAILED TO SEE BLOCK SIGNAL

Only About One-half of the Dead Have Been Identified—Shock of Collision Terrific.

New Haven, Conn., Sept. 4.—Two flyers persons lost their lives and 36 were injured when the White Mountain express, bound for New York, crashed into the rear end of the second section of the Bar Harbor limited, bearing sojourners from Maine summer resorts. The wreck occurred on the New Haven railroad, just outside the city limits, shortly before 4 a. m., Tuesday.

The number of dead up to a late hour, according to Coroner Mix, including those who died in hospitals, was twenty-six.

The injured number about 50. All the dead and injured were in the three rear sleeping cars of the Bar Harbor train. No one was seriously injured on the White Mountain express.

Identification Difficult.

Only about one-half of the dead have been identified. All the passengers were in their night clothes when the collision came, making identification difficult.

Coroner Mix directed that the bodies be collected at a local streetcar barn in a temporary morgue and began an inquest to determine the identity of the dead.

Several of the bodies are those of boys who were members of a company of forty returning from Monmouth, Me.

Failed to See Block Signal.

Failed to see a block signal veiled in a thick fog is given as the cause of the accident by Engineer A. B. Silliter, who says that as soon as he realized the danger he did all he could to stop the train. The brakes would not hold on the wet track and the train, running down grade, plowed its way through two wooden Pullman cars, splintered them and killed or crushed all most of the sleeping passengers in their berths. The accident recalled the recent wreck on the New Haven at Stamford, Conn., when a second section train failed to take the block and overran a block, dealing death to passengers of the first section.

The bodies of most of the victims were mangled.

The shock of the collision was so terrific there was red hot cinders from the berths in the sleepers was swept out of the broken windows and carried to the telegraph wires and poles near by, where it still hung when the wrecking trains arrived.

The White Mountain express was scarcely stretched by the collision. It proceeded on its way after a few hours' delay, arriving at the station here at 8:40 a. m. and proceeding at once to New York.

The dead were all taken to New Haven. The injured received first aid from physicians on the two trains, later being removed to hospitals.

Engineer Sticks to Post.

The engineer of the White Mountain express stuck to his post and was only slightly hurt. The two sleepers which were crushed by the impact of engine No. 1317, were reduced to splinters. The locomotive ran on top of the wreckage and remained almost upright for a long distance.

Is Third Wreck of Year.

It was the third serious wreck which the New Haven has suffered within a year and inaugurated the first day of the reign of Howard Elliott, the newly elected head of the road. Mr. Elliott, returning from his summer home in New Hampshire to assume his duties, passed over the scene of the wreck on an earlier train, less than an hour before.

Four Persons Killed in Iowa Wreck.

Oelwein, Iowa, Sept. 4.—Four persons were killed and fifteen injured, most of them severely, when a Rock Island passenger train on the Dubuque branch left the rails and plunged fifteen feet down a steep embankment near Maynard, Iowa. The train, southbound, was late and trying to make up time. Two miles south of Maynard the engine left the rails, pulling three coaches with it into the ditch. Lengths before the train crashed over the embankment and rolled over on its side.

Two Killed, Two Hurt, in Wreck.

Salt Lake City, Utah, Sept. 3. Fireman Herbert Hall and Brakeman Scott were killed, and Conductor Moffatt and Brakeman Miller were injured when a runaway engine left the track at the Idaho Northern crossing at the Oregon Short Line, and overturned.

15 Dead in English Wreck.

Kirkby-Stephen, County of Westmoreland, England, Sept. 3.—Fifteen persons were killed and 20 persons injured in a collision of two sections of the Scotch London-Scotch express today.

The wreck occurred on the Midland railway near Hawes Junction, the two sections being northbound. The second section dashed into the rear of the first, telescoping several coaches, which burst into flames. Many persons were trapped, and if not killed outright they were burned to death.

Municipal Ownership Urged.

Washington, Sept. 3.—P. S. McCall, postmaster at Pierpont, S. D., was probably fatally burned in the fire that destroyed his home. How the fire started has not been learned. Odell was burned on the right leg and both legs. He was brought to a hospital here.

Garrison in St. Louis.

St. Louis, Mo., Sept. 3.—Secretary of War Garrison inspected Jefferson barracks today and left in the afternoon for Indianapolis.

ARTHUR REGINALD DYER

Mr. Dyer, who is deputy chief of the London fire brigade, is now in this country studying American methods of fire fighting.

LIND WILL STAY IN MEXICO

IS WAITING FOR A CHANGE IN THE SITUATION.

Special Envoy Awaiting for Huerta to Make the Next Move in the Situation.

Washington, Sept. 3.—Secretary Bryan remained at the state department news from Mexico until a few minutes before his train left for the Maryland shore, where he is to spend the evening. He declared that nothing had been received to accept message relating to the movement of American citizens in the southern republic.

Earlier in the day the secretary had conferred with Senator Bacon, chairman of the foreign relations committee, and both stated no further suggestion had been made by Special Envoy Lind to the Huerta government since the Stubbs case and that no move can side had been made.

The case of American citizen refugees from Mexico was the subject of routine messages between the department and American officials in Mexico and along the border. Red Cross authorities at New Orleans were notified during the day that Americans from Mexico arriving at that port in need of assistance should be helped to reach their homes in this country.

It was said that John Lind, the American special envoy to Mexico, would remain in Vera Cruz indefinitely; that he was not contemplating any immediate move and merely was awaiting the course of the situation which it was calculated would not be instigated him him our by any move from Washington.

GOING 60 MILES AN HOUR

Five Thousand Spectators at State Fair Grounds See Appalling Wreck of the Cars.

Nashville, Tenn., Sept. 2.—Death claimed a heavy toll in the Labor day automobile speed races at the state fair grounds when four of the ten high powered machines entered in the 25-mile free-for-all event were wrecked and twisted into a mass of steel on the far side of the mile track, opposite the big grand stand, hooting 5,000 people.

Four of the racers were killed, two received minor injuries, while four escaped without injury. Two of the dead with their drivers and mechanicians flashed through the tangled wreckage at a speed of 60 miles an hour, escaping injury.

List of the Killed and Injured.

The dead: John W. Sherrill, driver of Buick car No 3; Thomas N. Bridges, mechanician of Buick car No. 3; William Sherrod, driver of Stutz car No. 10; "Goober" Brown, mechanician of Stutz car No. 10.

On the fifth lap, Clyde Donovan, driving the "Whitehroom," feeling his car swerve, tried to give way, after swerving to avoid striking a negro boy, turned into the outside fence to avoid blocking the track. The wreck at the fence fell back across the track, in the path of the succeeding cars. Mercer No. 2 flashed by in an instant. The Stutz, running third, drove into the wreckage and turned a somersault, turning both its drivers clear. The Buick followed and struck with a terrific crash, turning over several times.

LAST CANAL BAR IS RAISED

SEA'S WATERS NOW FLOWING BETWEEN GAMBOA AND MIRAFLORES.

Big Delegation of Globe Trotters See Last Barrier Blown Away—Intensely Interesting Spectacle —Shutters Present.

Panama, Sept. 2.—The last remaining barrier at the Pacific end of the Panama canal was blown away at precisely yesterday morning. It was an extremely interesting spectacle. At exactly 9:30 o'clock an electric switch was turned on and the 1,500 spectators, including the Shriners who were from the United States and the British cruiser New Zealand, were rewarded by a wonderful sight. Hundreds of tons of mud and stones were thrown high in the air. Then came a huge body, apparently suspended, and then fell back, as the thunderous roar of the explosions re-echoed in the nearby hills.

Tons of Dynamite Used.

About 20 long tons, equivalent to 44,800 pounds, of 60 per cent dynamite constituted the blast, which was one of the largest ever set off in the canal.

The charge, which was planted in 141 holes at an average depth of 30 feet, was a big gap in the dike, but not a sufficient depth to permit water to flow through, as the east level channel was at low tide.

Equally as interesting as the explosion was the work of banking up the barrier, the tide creeping steadily up until at 1:26 o'clock it was level with the top of the gap. A dredge soiled a shovel and made a small trench through which a trickle of water trickled. Gradually it widened, until, an hour later, a raging torrent, 100 to 35-foot fall, poured through an opening 400 feet wide into the part of the canal between Gamboa and Miraflores locks, which had previously been excavated by steam shovels.

BANKERS FAVOR CURRENCY BILL

RECOMMENDATIONS WERE PROPOSED TO MAKE IT "MORE FLEXIBLE."

COMMITTEE HEARS ARGUMENT

Senator Crawford, Republican Member of Committee, Indorses General Purposes of Administration's Plan.

Washington, Sept. 4.—Members of the senate committee on banking and currency, who are holding hearings on the currency measure, drew from members of a delegation of bankers the fact that they are in favor of many principles in the administration's measure.

Representative of the recent bankers' conference in Chicago, who appeared to present recommendations for amendments to the bill, emphasized the fact that they did not come in a spirit of antagonism to the bill, but in the hope that it could be enacted so as to make the new system "more attractive" and "more flexible."

The strongest indorsement of the general purposes of the administration currency reform plan came when Senator Crawford, a Republican member of the committee, declared the country banks of a state like South Dakota had nothing to gain and would suffer greatly, by being compelled to withdraw part of their capital from active business within the state and send it outside to a reginal reserve bank.

"I think the senator has drawn the picture too dark and gloomy," said Sol Wexler of New Orleans. "I don't think banks should be compelled to enter the new system. It should be made attractive enough to induce them to come in. Under the plan of the national banks, even for a state that has no law, they can do only a regional reserve bank.

"Under that will stabilize financial conditions will help all state, even new states with no large financial or industrial centers. Now there is no stabilizing influence; we are always on the edge of a crisis."

Two Witnesses Heard.

James B. Forgan, president of the First National bank of Chicago and chairman of the Chicago conference, and Mr. Wexler testified and covered part of the ground embraced in the series of suggestions for amendments to the bill which the bankers there recently.

Suggestion upon which they dwelt with chief emphasis yesterday were: That the banks, rather than the federal treasury, issue currency.

That a central bank or "big note" than five regional banks, would be preferable to the proposed 12 regional reserve banks.

That membership of national banks in the new federal system should be optional, not compulsory as the bill now stands.

That the amount of regional reserve bank capital for which each national bank must subscribe, should be reduced from 20 per cent, to 10 per cent. The subscribing bank's capital stock.

That the regional reserve bank shall not be compelled to keep on account the commercial paper held by member banks.

The Reserve Board.

The suggestions made by the bankers' committee, that representation be given to the banking interests on the federal reserve board, were met with a counter suggestion by Senator Works, Republican, that it should be increased, will be advanced as a possible amendment when the senate committee begins its consideration of the bill.

This was, that the bankers of the country should be allowed to submit to the president a list of 10 men from which he should nominate members of any bank," said Mr. Forgan. "Our contention is that banking is a profession that can be learned only by experience and not by mere theory as bankers should have a voice in the administration of the national banking system."

THAW'S FATE WILL SOON BE KNOWN

MERITS OF HABEAS CORPUS WRIT LIKELY TO BE DECIDED.

IS UP TO JUDGE HUTCHINSON

Prisoner's Counsel Make Ineffectual Pleas for Delay—Coatlcook Police Chief Secured.

BULLETIN.

Sherbrooke, Sept. 4.—Harry Thaw lost his fight to defy deportation by remaining in the Sherbrooke jail.

Judge Hutchinson sustained a writ of habeas corpus calling for his release.

The prisoner was in the court room when the decision was announced and pated visibly as he heard it.

As he crossed the threshhold, E. Blake Robertson, assistant superintendent of immigration, tapped him on the shoulder and placed him under arrest, and arrest as an undesirable alien.

The crowd swept around from the building and it was announced that Thaw would be taken immediately to Castlecak for a hearing.

Sherbrooke, Que., Sept. 4.—Whether Harry Kendall Thaw shall remain in jail here until the regular term of the king's bench in October or be immediately turned over to the detention of Superior Judge Hutchinson who will decide whether a writ of habeas corpus, secured by William Travers Jerome, providing that Thaw be produced in court, shall be sustained or thrown out.

It was a case of alternate joy and depression for Thaw. At the opening of the hearing he was taken downstairs to the consultation room from the attorney general and premier of the province, Sir Lomed Gouin; and from his lips, Thaw heard that the attorney general was insistent that there be no delay in the case and that the habeas corpus writ issued by Judge Hutchinson be taken to insure Thaw's release and seizure by the immigration authorities. This would mean the start of his return trip to the asylum on the Hudson.

Thaw's Hearing.

From the counsel Thaw heard sbie arguments against sustaining the writ, from them he also heard the effectual pleas for delay, from the crowd that packed the courtroom and streamed over the lawn he heard cheers and shouts and words of encouragement.

So was nervous throughout the ordeal, and returned to his cell tired and with excitement.

Counsel for the state of New York argued briefly that the writ should be sustained and Clarence Jerome arbitrarily opposed it. Shortlief, White, Travers and Jerome spoke briefly, all characterizing the proceedings by which John Bondreau, chief of police of Coaticook, made his release in man he arrested two weeks ago in Derry, Bondreau, the prisoner, Mr. McKeown spoke last.

"Absurd," Says Counsel for Thaw's Pleads.

"The case," he said, "by reason of wide publicity, has assumed a position of international importance. The eyes of the world are centered here. The case has created interest throughout the world.

"Absurd" was the searched every record we have failed to find an instance where the writ was resorted to in case like this. It is to be hoped it will revolutionize the whole basin of habeas corpus writs.

Here he emphasized that the use of the writ is "to secure the liberty of a man," without Thaw's consent, and, in his opinion, a fraud and subterfuge. He then referred to Thaw's raising his voice, "to hand Thaw from one jurisdiction to another, the hypocrisy of Bondreau's action is apparent.

"As an alien under the British flag, Thaw has his rights and is entitled to his full measure of time to prepare for trial. We shall carry the case to the limit of the laws of Canada and England."

Mr. Geoffrion left Sherbrooke for Quebec and did not announce whether he would return.

"I do not know," he said, "whether Thaw will be deported. I do not care. But our provincial jails cannot be used as a boarding house or a place to escape the immigration laws."

The law prevailed in Sherbrooke that if the writ is thrown out the attorney general will take immediate steps to have the prisoner deported quashed. Thaw will be free, that is, for a brief interval before he is taken in charge by the immigration authorities.

A PYRENEAN PROVINCE

By FREDERICK PICKAIRING

TWO sentiments, says the "little history of the province, which e wise educational committee has provided for the children's use in old French Catalonia, two sentiments are native to the heart of every good Catalan—love of his country and the love of liberty. An ardent independence, as the sense authority explains, and a distinguishing capacity for pursuing secretly their self-appointed way have always marked this hardy people. Hence it is that to this day the Catalan retains his racial characteristics, cherishes his old traditions and—Catalan to Catalan—speaks in the ancient tongue.

Again and again his country has changed hands. The seaboard plains and the lofty highlands upon the eastern Spanish frontier known to the mediaeval world as Catalonia, have shared the usual fate of border territories. Peoples from the north and peoples from the south—Romans, Visigoths, Moors, Franks, counts of Roussillon, kings of Arragon and of Majorca, rulers of France, rulers of Spain—to turn have conquered or possessed the land. But the Catalan has never ceased to feel himself a Catalan or loathe mastering sense of race.

The name Catalonia is usually taken to imply merely the Spanish province, and to mention the Catalans is to call up disturbing visions of industrial strikes, evoking memories of anarchist activity and desperate Barcelona riots. The picture, it may, par parenthese, be said, is perhaps hardly fair to the mee whose scorgy has created the largest, most flourishing seaport of Spain, who, all said and done are certainly the most progressive, most intelligent, most resourceful of King Alfonso's subjects. to any case, the Catalans on the French side of the border are unknown to newspaper fame, nor does the traveling public know very much as yet of the beautiful and varied land which they are so prond to inhabit.

It is the Frenchman's boast that samples of the world's best scenery and the range of all its desirable climates are found within the boundaries of his native country. In these respects French Catalonia—which (with a portion of old Languedoc) is defined upon the modern map as the department Pyrenees Orientales—may be described as France in miniature. Mont Canigou, admittedly one of the most majestic, most impressive of the Pyrenean peaks, is 9,000 feet high; Puig Mal, a less conspicuous neighbor, stands a trifle higher; and, clustered about are other splendid heights. The scenery among these chains is of the kind we usually term "Alpine," but from the snow-slopes of the Canigou you may look down upon the sun-burnt shores of Spain and the blue, gleaming floor of the far-stretched Mediterranean. Or, deserting the heights, and starting, say, from Mont Louis, loftiest of the fortified towns of France, and a new center for winter sports, you descend the winding valley of the Tet, and in an hour or so you find yourself among the olive orchards. Soon magnolias, the orchard aloe, even, palms, are seen rising from the vineyards and in the roadside gardens, while if to be spiritless, sunnless faint their feathery plumes, and near and far under the sunny sky stretch fields of pink peach blossom.

"In this favored land," said "Dagonet," writing in the Referee, "Nature has been more than kind; she has been effusive." But a cool, bracing, exhilarating air and the striking contrasts of the natural scene do not the only charms of Catalonia. For the historian, the antiquarian or the archaeologist the country abounds in interest. Its successive conquerors failed appreciably to mold the tongue or to obliterate the habits and customs inevitably they left behind them concrete vestiges of occupation. Local tradition makes much of the Arabs and of the curious tall towers upon the mountain spurs, of which the Tour de Goa, near Vernet-les-Bains, is a conspicuous example, are popularly ascribed to the influence of the Saracen rulers. Others, however, insist that these towers are of far later construction, and, like many other so-called Moorish remains, date from the Aragono dominion, when probably began the tenancy of the Majorcan kings. It was the kings of Majorca who made Perpignan, now the chief town of the department, a royal capital. The architecture of Perpignan cathedral—as, indeed, of most Catalan churches —shows marked trace of Spanish influence.

CHURCH AND CHATEAU OLD VERNET VILLARS

A little below Perpignan is the scrull town of Elne with the ruins of an abbaye and some beautiful, richly-ornamented cloisters. The Visigothe made Elne the seat of an important bishopric. In Roman times the little town, which then stood actually upon the coast, was known as Helene, so called in comliment to the mother of the "good" Emperor Constantine. Collioure, tiny but extremely picturesque, also was known to the Romans. Port Vendres, another fishing port, still nearer the frontier, was built upon the site of a temple dedicated to the goddess Venus, and was originally "Portus Veneris."

The Romans were 100 years in Catalonia, and besides the building of numerous roads, they naturally found time to exploit some of the many mineral springs. The neighborhood of Amelie-les-Bains, a trim, Spanish-looking town close on the frontier, whose warm climate attracts the French cosmopolites. Not far from Amelie is the pass across which Hannibal led his legions on the historic march to Italy. The Romans had previously sent ambassadors to beg the Carthaginian not to disturb the Catalans, who were friends and the soldiers were allowed free passage. The Col de Portbulie—Hannibal's route—and another Catalonian exit are the only two passes across the Pyrenees which are practicable throughout the year; they offered a convenient means of egress or retreat to Moorish and Spanish invaders. Had there been no good passage through the great chain the history of the Catalans must have been less chequered and the Catalonian seaboard might not have formed a fairway for the restless warfor peoples of mediaeval Europe.

SHIPS WHICH WILL NOT SINK

Once more we hear talk of an unsinkable ship, remarks the New York Commercial. An English inventor claims to have solved the problem, but his experiments have been confined to a model not only four feet in length and nine inches wide, so the problem of applying his system to a vessel 200 or 1,000 feet in length is by no means solved.

Few people outside of practical shipbuilders and navigators understand the difference between a large vessel and a small one in point of structural strength. The strongest vessel that floats in the water is a common rowboat. One can take an ordinary rowboat and carry it by the ends or it can rest on clasts under each end without breaking in the middle, but the strongest man-of-war or ocean liner that floats today would break in two if subjected to a similar strain. The largest a vessel the weaker it becomes in this respect, and for this reason many apparently good ideas which work out well in theory on small forms have failed utterly when applied to large vessels.

It is doubtful if any real progress in building ships has been made since the days of the Great Eastern, as far as the use of water-tight compartments and bulkheads is concerned. The designers of this great steamer decided that vessel into regular compartments, and no improvement on this plan has as yet been made, although it is not used extensively because it requires too many hatches for the loading and unloading of cargo.

The invention to which reference has been made consists of surrounding the vessel with a water-tight belt divided into cells for the purpose of giving the vessel greater buoyancy as it sinks in the water. There is really nothing new in this idea and it has been applied successfully in building lifeboats and other small vessels. It adds to the width of the vessel above the water line and the inventor is wrong in claiming that it would not interfere with its navigating capacity.

Modern steamships are safe enough when at sea, so far as the storms and leaking of the waves are concerned. The dangers that threaten them are collisions with other vessels, with derelicts or with icebergs, and, of course, running ashore on a rock in a dense fog. Take two vessels of equal size crossing each other's paths, let one strike the other amidships and the lower deck would be cut in two if the other were going at full speed. The tremendous force of the blow is of most beyond calculation. In the case of a vessel the size of the new Imperator it would probably be equal to a striking force of 8,000,000 foot tons. No cellular belt or any other conceivable construction would be proof against such collisions. The thing to do is to avoid all such risks as far as possible. The Titanic was lost because its captain had too much confidence in its unsinkable construction.

THEN TROUBLE BEGAN.

"Those who are unlucky in love are said to be lucky at cards," remarked Mrs. Gragg.

"If that's the case," responded Mr. Gragg, "I'll bet I could break the bank at Monte Carlo."

Rather Hard to Awaken.

"Sir, you have called me a crook and a fool," said the man who talked politics. "You have broken my spectacles, you have punched me twice. I hope you will not refuse the satisfaction I demand of you." "Sir," replied the other, "I am not fair what may be the

New York.—Princess Olga Gollitsine, wife of Prince Andre Gollitsine, an officer of the czar's own imperial cavalry, who has been missing for three months, was found in New York by the Russian secret service in a "white-wash" search. The princess was gone home. She had, while here, been in the care of Pierre de Routsky, acting Russian consul general.

The princess, who is practically princess, having severed her jewels in a mad flight to various cities of the east, was located in the Holland apartments, 68 West Forty-sixth street.

Born a princess of the house of Tcherkassila, a family reputed to be as old as the Romanoff dynasty, and married at sixteen into the house of Gollitsine, the vivacious Olga left the gossip and ceremony of the Russian court for a career on the stage in New York city. She wanted to be an actress, but in the last month her dreams have been shattered. After a flight across Europe, which proved the plaintiff that fact is always robbing fiction, she must, as she confessed, "return across the Atlantic at the urgent demand of the Russian governments."

Reports that the companion of the princess on her hurried flight from Russia was a would-to-do American led to rumors that she had eloped. He joined them in New York on the ship-board and at the New Willard hotel during her stay in Washington, whether she first journeyed after landing, it was said. The noblewoman insisted, however, that her only companion had been an English woman, who had assisted her in leaving her native land and after being told of the princess' desires for freedom and a career on the stage in America.

Continental society, already astonished by her appearance early last winter on the stage of the imperial theater, in St. Petersburg, was shocked when it was learned that she had disappeared. Her career, many believed, as her theatrical debut, had ostracized her from court, but when she disappeared the secret system which covers Europe like a net, the Russian secret service, was set at work.

For weeks the efforts of the secret police were of no avail. Prince Andre, who she says stood so violently when she appeared on the stage that he forced a separation, has been broken, and Petersburg, the New Willard hotel in Washington. After all came an attache of the Russian embassy there who "fled" to New York, and stopped for several days at the Holland apartments. Again she was discovered, she said, and took an apartment at the West Forty-sixth street address. But her flight availed her nothing, and, precisely without funds, she agreed to go home.

Acting Russian Consul de Routsky says that the father of the princess was an officer in the imperial guards and one of the proudest and oldest families in Russia. The Gollitsine family is one of the most prominent in Russia and best known in Europe, he said.

The 1912 edition of the Almanach of the Gotha contains the name Prince Gollitsine to be the fifth son of Prince Alexandre Borisovitch Gollitsine, equerry to the court of the czar, ecuyer of Moscow and marshal to the governor of Waldimir. Prince Andre was born in October, 1889. Princess Olga Alexandrovna is the daughter of Prince Dimitri Tcherkassky, marshal in the Odessa district of Russia.

KISSING IN THE PARK IS O. K.

Small Boys Who Interrupt Are Extremely Mean, Says Philadelphia Magistrate.

Philadelphia, Pa.—The annoying of sweethearts will be stopped, and Philadelphia will lose its distinction as the greatest spooning ground in the world, if Magistrate Pole has his way. To mount Park on the map of paradise, Cupid's chief aid in the park service will have the co-operation of the city magistrates, as an incident showed, Wednesday. "Any child of this park who boys were arraigned on charges of disturbing the peace in Fairmount Park took the same view as Capt. Duncan. "Any child who is found annoying lovers or abused. The shady nooks and places for love making, and as long as young persons do not overstep the bounds of propriety I am going to encourage making the park the world's best spooning place. The business of frightening sweethearts just when they are engaged in kissing is the meanest trick I know of."

BALKS AT SIGHT OF FIANCE

Girl, Arriving on Steamer, Refuses to Wed Man—Not Up to Specifications.

Philadelphia.—More than 1,000 steerage passengers were landed at the municipal pier from the Italian liner Napoli, from the Mediterranean ports. Nearly all came from Naples, Genoa and Palermo. There were only twenty persons in the 1,000 aliens, including women and steerage passengers, that could speak a word of English. Eight girls were married on the pier. It was expected that also weddings would be celebrated, but one girl, Miss Josephine Carcotta, refused to marry Joseph Digiorgio, who represented himself to be a banker and wholesale agent. When she walked down the gangplank the intended husband met her at the foot of the steamer. He introduced himself as the man with whom her parents had been in correspondence and who had sent her the money to pay the ocean passage. She looked at him and turned away. The agent followed her and tried to persuade her to change her mind. She refused to do so. Then he went to the immigration officials and asked that the girl be detained. He declared that he had spent much money in bringing her to this country and that he would not be satisfied to lose it. The girl was detained.

MAD STEER ATTACKS WOMAN

Red Petticoat Inflames Animal to the Point of Making Vigorous Protest.

Niagara Falls, Ont.—A cows of steers, a washerwoman, an angry husband and a drover comprised the cast of characters in as lively a one act drama as was ever witnessed in real life anywhere. The pity is that the act was not immortalized by the camera man.

The drover came along the road into Table View with the cattle. In the bunch was one cheapcoque fellow that had been acting up bad all afternoon. Whenever he came to a cross road he decided to take it whether it was right or wrong.

Away over in a field was a small shack domicile, in which live an inoffensive Austro-Hungarian couple. The woman was busily engaged with her washing while the husband was sitting in the doorway smoking his pipe, thinking of the war over on the borders of his home land.

The woman also wore a red petticoat, and the fence was down between her and the cattle. The frolicsome bull spied the red petticoat and made four leaps toward it. In the middle of the fifth he lowered his head and struck the woman and tossed her lightly in the air. She came down with a dull splash in the tub of water.

The angry husband was on his feet in a minute. In another he had his shotgun in hand and he gave chase after the herd of cattle and their drover—The latter took refuge behind a friendly barn some distance down the road. Then he saw a cloud of dust behind his flying herd and the angry husband giving chase with his gun. He just leaned up against the friendly old barn and said to the neighbors between his sobs: "Please excuse the steers."

CRIME TRUST RICH

Fences That Split Truck and Loft Thieves' Loot.

Operations of Bandits Are Revealed—Six Men Comprise the "Receiving" Trust—Estimated $5,000,000 Stolen Annually.

New York.—Crime is syndicated in New York. There is the pickpockets' trust and the automobiles' trust and the arson trust, but the biggest of all is the receivers' trust.

"Sir man," said Morris H. Moskowits, assistant district attorney, "comprise the 'receivers' trust' it has been estimated by the Merchants' association that goods to the value of $5,000,000 are stolen annually from the piers and lofts of New York city. A great volume of the stolen stuff passes through the hands of the receivers' trust. They make more money than any other group of crime operators in New York."

That means that they make more money than any other group of crime operators in the world, for New York is admittedly the richest Reid. Mr. Moskowits did not attempt to compart the total graft in the tenderloin with the illicit gains of the six little fences, who handle the goods stolen from store and warehouse.

"But it is safe to say that by comparison the takings of any other group in the city are less an mountain beaon," he said. "The bear a great deal about the wire mob. The wire mob only works once in a while—and then its members scatter for safety.

"The receivers' trust works all the time. It is as regular in the conduct of its business as if licensed by the state. You can order stolen goods by telephone or order goods stolen by telephone."

Not did Mr. Moskowitz try to estimate their net profits. Evidently they must share their loot liberally with some one of the privileges of doing business. Isidor Hader, now under conviction in the Tombs, was one of the principal independent operators before the trust. Hader has since died about his business.

"I was at once for fifteen years almost without interference," said he. "But I didn't make much money, although i had 150 thieves working for me at one time. It took too much to keep the organization up.

"I had to turn over three of my best hauls to one copper. He split with them fifty-fifty, and I didn't get anything out of them at all. And there was a guy who didn't trust any one. He made 'em work where he could watch 'em. And he got all the loot and anything coming off on bet he got his share."

Mr. Moskowitz thinks fully $2,000,000 of the loot from the truck and truck and plars' pass through the hands of the "six little fences." His investigations of the trust since his chief business is well systematized. They have their buyers and their bondsmen, and their witnesses ready to swear that the defendant had the a bunch of amateur firemen.

"I was a little bit in doubt about one man we had under arrest," said Mr. Moskowitz. "But when his case was called for trial I knew he was guilty. There was the trust lawyer, who called to see me about the case, and the trust detective, who scares away or buys off the state's witnesses. And the professionally weeping mother and the professional alibi. And the professional bake, appear in court. As soon as I saw that squad I knew I had my man."

Judge Edward Swann of the criminal court has long been an interested watcher of the crime syndicates here.

"It is not to be denied that every form of predatory crime is somewhat compactly organized. I have referred to the pickpockets' syndicate, for example. I think the use of that term is justified. There are no boards of directors, of course, and no books and bolders. But there is a workable organization that is in constant play."

WITH THE PHARISEE'S PRIDE

Man Conscious of Culture Grows to Look Upon Those Without It as Far Beneath Him in Class.

That comparatively few are elected by Providence to enjoy the refinements of culture while the mass of humanity must remain far below the heights and never drink at the fountains of art or music or literature or science is the cosmic tragedy of our world. The pathos of it is as touchable as human. The pity of it is that it teaches every human heart that is itself cultured and rat not filled with the conceit of culture.

But this conceit of culture, this pride of refinement, which sees in a human brother of low development and unpleasant manner an object of contempt, a standing opportunity for jesting ridicule, a thing to be used as one's purposes and then cast by, how widely and subtly it steals into the hearts of the cultured and selects their attitude toward the inferior brother! The Pharisee thanked God that he was not as other men, instead of praying with a full sense that other men might be as fortunate as himself.

Every day the observant student of men's ways may see this attitude of disdain for the low-browed, the simple untaught folk, whose yearning for beauty reaches no further than the chromo-print, whose appreciation for music can compass nothing higher than ragtime songs or the 5c organ.

WHY THE HURRY!

In the discussion of Governor Eberhart's "plan" to convene the legislature in special session to pass a public utilities bill there is room for the opinion that if his excellency would "wedge" a little he would be doing a real public service. His announced purpose to make his plan the subject for the deliberation of a special session has induced much public discussion of an important question, but to require that the question be definitely decided at a special session seems like forcing the issue, since members of the legislature cannot in so brief a time give the "plan" the serious study demanded if wise legislation is to be enacted. The governor would be serving the people of the state better if he would announce that his utilities bill is the important legislation he will urge for consideration by the next regular session of elected to serve another term. The would give the members and their constituents an opportunity to study the plan, to know what they want and to act intelligently.

There is no doubt that the state should exercise greater control over certain of the public utility enterprises, but, even so, the governor's slide rule based plan may be too far-reaching in its effect to be practical. The control of the telephone systems, long-distance if not local, should be in the hands of a state commission. There can be no doubt of that. But there is much room for doubt if it would be wise to have the authority of the commission extended to the control of locally operated light, heat, water, power and similar utility enterprises where the operation is limited to a single municipality.

Much progress has been made during the past few years toward the development of just business relations between the operators of public utility enterprises and the people served by them. Many of the towns and cities of the state have adopted new charters providing for the commission form of government. The commissioners representing the whole city have superseded the ward aldermen and have been dealing with the utility operators as would the representatives of a big business enterprise, with gratifying results generally. Now there is the suspicion in some quarters that certain interests of people have contributed their efforts toward the creation of a seeming public sentiment and necessity for the creation of a state commission that would take all authority from city commissioners. This suspicion may or may not be well founded.

But since we have been progressing so satisfactorily why change so suddenly? Why "progress" so rapidly? Give us time to think. Why the hurry?

Of course, most everybody would be delighted if Sulzer, one of the governors, should "get" Tammany.

Sympathy is extended to the people of Stearns county who have a county seat removal fight on their hands.

"Why should the people of a state be proud of a state prison?" inquires the Browns Valley Tribune. Though one may regret the necessity for prisons, there are many reasons why the people may be proud of their state prison and excused if they "exploit" it a little. One of the most efficient problems is the one dealt with people who must be punished for offenses against the laws of the commonwealth. Another problem is those who assist him have progressed marvelously toward the solution of the problem and have made in the treatment of the derelicts of society and there should be no fear that the name of the state prison will be "smeared up" if non-residents visiting the state make it a point to inspect the prison. The prison is in every way a credit to the state. It is worth seeing and worth "showing off."

HANGING AND STORING THE SEED CORN

Several Simple Methods Prove Very Successful.

FREE CIRCULATION OF AIR

(By L. B. BASSETT, University Farm, St. Paul.)

The setting apart of a seed corn day for the gathering of seed is important, but all time and labor is of no value unless the seed is properly cared for after gathering. Seed gathered early in the season in the proper way contains a very large percentage of moisture, therefore requires much care in curing or it will mold and spoil. The day corn is gathered it should be husked and put where there is free circulation of air. The ears should be so placed that no two are touching. This method of curing can be accomplished in several ways. The old fashioned way of storing was to bind the ears in long strings and hang them in the attic. This method is very satisfactory. Another method that is sometimes used is to strip the ears entirely of their husks and tie them through the middle with binding twine, placing from ten to twenty ears to a string. The strings of ears are then hung in some place out of the sun and rain and where there is free circulation of air. Still another method that is sometimes employed is to hang poultry netting on the wall and place the ears one in a mesh. This gives free circulation of air around each ear and is a very satisfactory method of drying. Sometimes nails are driven in the wall and one ear placed on each nail. Where wall space is plentiful this method is conducive of good results.

After handling in any of the above described methods for two months the ears should be dry enough for storing. At this time they may be taken down, good shelled in bin, barrel or sliding tray are not piled over two or three ears deep, as they may be in danger of heating. Another method of storing is to tie the ears in bunches of four or five by the husks and hang them over a pole in the attic or other dry place. Still another method is to braid the husks of the ears in strings of four or five ears and hang them over a pole in the attic or other dry place. HOW TO SELECT GOOD SEED EARS

Pick From Strong, Vigorous Plants of Best Variety.

AVOID LATE MATURING EARS

(By A. C. ARNY, Assistant Agriculturist, University Farm, St. Paul.)

Ears that are just mature, ripened and of good size for the locality and for the variety of corn grown, borne on strong vigorous plants, are the ones to select during Seed Corn week. Avoid the large, late maturing ears. Also avoid selecting the small, very early maturing ears, for the reason that they mature earlier then is necessary and give a low yield per acre. Details such as filling of tips and butts, and exact shape of kernel, may be left until winter. The aim during Seed Corn week should be to get a large number of mature, fairly typical ears under cover so that they may dry out properly before freezing weather arrives. A shelled advantage that comes with early selection from the standing stalks is that the plant that bears the ear may be given some attention. An ear good in itself, but either too low or too high on the stalk, is undesirable. An ear with a long, slender, weak shank or with a short, very thick shank is not desirable. A good ear in a hill of three plants is to be preferred to one equally desirable, but in a hill of only one plant.

SYNOPSIS.

George Anderson and wife are a romantic looking couple registered at Clermont hotel, look around carefully, when his hands to the room clerk and ask directions to the Goldthwaite place. While in the room Anderson describes the man he saw wash his hands in the sink. The hotel manager declares the man is Orlando Brotherson, Pittsburgh financier, and that Anderson's description of him will cause a sensation among Brotherson's friends. Orgon, an old friend of Brotherson's, calls and is refused, tells up the case. Later Brotherson's daughter, Sylvia, arrives and Mrs. Challoner entertains her at dinner. Mrs. Challoner's daughter, Sylvia, attend "Dr. Ali Ben" and Orlando Brotherson. And Sylvia, Challoner, with a note to address a meeting of anarchists. The place is raided by the police and Brotherson escapes, but is arrested. Brotherson is found lying in the street, apparently dead, and Dr. Dixon, in an interview, tells the coroner of his acquaintance with Brotherson. Dixon is called to attend Brotherson's daughter, Sylvia, and recalls the meeting of a certain gentleman in which Brotherson figured. Sylvia tells Dixon of her father's financial troubles and of the Goldthwaite family. Dixon is called to the Brotherson home. Brotherson gives the police a description of Anderson. Dixon refuses to disclose himself as a surgeon and is arrested on a charge of boarding with Brotherson.

CHAPTER XVI—Continued.

And so it came to pass that at an hour when all the other hard-working people in the building were asleep or at least striving to sleep, these two men still sat at their work, one in the light, the other in the darkness, facing each other, consciously to the one, unconsciously to the other, across the yellow welt of the one silent court. Eleven o'clock! Twelve! No change on Brotherson's part or in Brotherson's room, but a decided one in the place where Sweetwater sat. Objects which had been totally indistinguishable even to his penetrating eye could now be seen in ever brightening outline. The moon had reached the open square above the court, and he was getting the full benefit of it. But it was a benefit he would have been glad to dispense with. Darkness was like a shield to him. He did not feel quite sure that he wanted that shield removed. With no curtain to the window and no shade, and all this brilliance pouring into the room, he feared the disclosure of his presence there, or, if not that, some effect on his own mind of those memories he was more zealous to see mirrored in another's discomfiture than in his own.

Was it to escape any lack of concentration which these same memories might bring, that he rose and stepped to the window? Or was it under one of those involuntary impulses which move us in spite of ourselves to do the very thing our judgment disapproves?

No sooner had he approached the slit than Mr. Brotherson's shade flew way up and he, too, looked out. Their glances met, and for an instant the hardy detective experienced that involuntary stagnation of the blood which follows an inner shock. He felt that he had been recognized. The moonlight lay full upon his face, and the other had seen and known him. Else, why the concentrated attitude and sudden rigidity observable in that confronting figure, with its partially lifted hand? A man like Brotherson makes no pause in any action however trivial, without a reason. Should he be hood-winked by this glimpse of his canary on watch, or—fleeting thought! had seen enough of sepulchral suggestion in the man face looking forth from that fatal window to shake him from his composure and let none the grinning devil of remorse from its prim prison-house? If so, the movement was a tremendous one, and the hazard quite worth while. He had acted—at least he had gained nothing. He had been the fool of his own wishes. No one, let alone Brotherson, could have mistaken his face for that of a woman. He had forgotten his newly-grown beard. None other cause must be found for the other's attitude. It savored of shock, if not fear. If it were fear, then had he roused an emotion which might rebound upon himself in deep mystery. Death had been known to strike people standing between two equally mysterious death of a species quite inconceivable. What warranty had he that it would not strike him, and now? Noon.

Yet was Brotherson who moved first. With a shrug of the shoulder plainly visible to the man opposite, he turned away from the window and, without lowering the shade, began gathering up his papers for the night, and later banking up his stove with ashes.

Sweetwater, with a breath of decided relief, stepped back and threw himself on the bed. It had really been a relief for him to stand there under the other's scrutiny. Though he had refused to formulate his fear, or to give him any satisfaction when he asked himself what there was in the situation suggestive of death to the woman or harm to himself.

Nor did morning light bring consolation, as is usual in similar cases. He felt the mystery more in the hubbub and restless turmoil of the day than in the night's silence and inactivity. He was glad when the hour arrived to give him an excuse to leave the room.

At last sat he found the janitor. He was, to all appearance, in a state of great excitement and he spoke very fast.

"I won't stay another night in that room," he loudly declared, breaking in where the family were eating breakfast by lamplight. "I don't want to make any trouble and I don't want to give my reasons; but that room don't suit me. I'd rather be the dark one pee talked about yesterday. There's the money. Have my things moved today, will ye?"

Dixon looked surprised, but after a night's stay will give that room a bad name," exclaimed the janitor, rising awkwardly. "There'll be talk and I won't be able to let that room all winter."

"Nonsense! Every man hasn't the nerves I have. Shall I tell you why?" But let or or no let, I'm going front into the little room. I'll get the boys to let me off at half past four. So that's settled."

He waited for no reply and got none; but when he appeared promptly at 4 o'clock to fix, he found his few belongings moved into a middle room on the fourth floor of the front building, which, odder perhaps, chanced to be next door to the one he had left—I just couldn't stay in that room."

"You the coffee is made and it isn't bad either. You'll better get on your coat; the cold's dreadful." And settling till Sweetwater did so, he led the way back to his own room in Brotherson's manner expressed perfect ease, but Sweetwater, who knew himself changed in looks, in bearing, in feeling, was not to be changed enough to deceive this man on the very spot where they had confronted each other a few days before in a keen, silent struggle."

"I'm going out myself today, so we'll have to hurry a bit," was Brotherson's first remark as they seated themselves at table. "Do you like your coffee plain or with milk in it?"

"Plain. Goin' where, if I'm pertinent? Where do you get 'em? You must have a lot of coin." Sweetwater was starving at the row of photographs, mostly of a very high order, tacked around the wall separating the two rooms. They were unframed, but they were neatly copies of great pictures, and the effect was rather imposing in contrast to the shabby furniture and the otherwise homely things.

"Yes, I've enough for that kind of thing," was his hearty reply. But the tone was reserved, and Sweetwater, not quite sure of himself after the shock he had sustained, he looked well at the books piled upon the shelves under these photographs, and wondered aloud at their number and at the sum he could waste such a lot of time in reading them. But he made no more direct comment.

Yet there was one cheerful moment. It was when he noticed the unusual way in which those books were arranged and saw that Brotherson's An idea had come to him. He hid his relief in his cup, as he drained the last drop of the coffee which was really tasted better than he expected.

When he returned from work that afternoon it was with an anger under his calm and a satisfaction which led him to empty out the contents of a small phial which he took down from a shelf. He had told Mr. Orgon that he was eager for the business because of his difficulties, but that was when he was feeling fine and up to any task that might come his way. Now he felt weak and vastly discouraged. This would not do. He must regain his nerve. All hazards, so he put more out the mixture which had given him such a sickly air. This done and Dorinda supper eaten, he took up his paper. He had heard Mr. Brotherson's step up by. But next minute he laid it down again in great haste and drew a newspaper over it. Mr. Brotherson was coming back, had stopped at his door, had knocked and must be let in.

"You better this evening," he heard in those kindly tones which so confused and irritated him.

"Yes, I'm all right, I'm satisfied."

Then Mr. Brotherson passed on, and Sweetwater listened till he was sure that his too attentive neighbor had safely gone down the three flights between him and the street. Then he took up his anger again and shut himself in his room.

There was nothing peculiar about this room. It was just an ordinary one with drawers and shelves on one side, and an open space on the other for the hanging up of clothes. A few clothes hung there at present; but it was this portion of the closet that he stopped and began to try the wall of Brotherson's room, with the butt end of the tool he carried.

The sound seemed to satisfy him, for very soon he was boring a hole at a point exactly level with his ear. "Next as well as useful," was the gay comment with which Sweetwater carried his work, then laid his ear to the hole. Whereupon previously he could barely hear the rattling of dishes from the next room, he was now able to catch the sound of an ash falling into the ash-pit.

His next move was to test the depth of the partition by inserting his finger in the hole he made. He found it stopped by some chipped matter. It had reached half its length, and measuring the remainder of the nature of the obstacle, he gently moved the tip of his finger to and fro over what was certainly the edge of a board.

This proved that his calculations had been correct and that the opening so accessible on his side, was completely filled on the other by the books he had seen packed on the shelves. He had even been careful to assure himself that the volumes at this exact point stood far enough back in the closet room behind them for the chips and plaster he must necessarily deposit through with his auger, add also—important consideration—for the free passage of the "auger-dust" which he must bore out.

But it was days before he could make sufficient use of Brotherson's acquaintance ripened, though with so little satisfaction to himself that detective found himself led into telling stories of his early home-life to keep pace with the other's interest in something of moment and solid interest to figure. Very unsatisfactory, for instead of calling out a corresponding confidence, Mr. Brotherson, so it only seemed to make his conversation more coldly impersonal.

Sweetwater's disappointment early found himself quite well and one evening, when he was out of the neighbor was at home, he slid softly up to the closet door and set to work opening he had made there. The result was unexpected. Mr. Brotherson was not lower still it reached his boots. His inscrutable and ever disappointing neighbor was not indulging in self-communion at that hour. He was reciting poetry, and what was worse, appeared to be doing it from memory, and was trying to recall—the highest literary effort of a mind weighted with criminal secret.

Sweetwater was disgusted, and was withdrawing his head in disappointment his ramage-point when something occurred of a startling character to hold him where he was in almost breathless attention.

The hole which in the darkness of the closet was always faintly visible, even when the light was on the strong in the adjoining room, had suddenly disappeared. It was not a pin-hole, with a suggestion of movement in the room beyond. The hole which had hid the thin end of the man's side had been taken down—the non-hole left a full inch square for the removal threatened Sweetwater's schemes, if not himself.

For an instant the thwarted detective listened in triumphant expectation the smothered oath which would naturally follow the discovery by Brotherson of this new interference with his privacy.

But all was still on his side of the wall. A rustling of leaves could be heard, as if the latter were turning the poem he wanted, but nothing more. In withdrawing the book, he had left a hollow in the back of the plaster back of it. But he could hardly fail to see that, and to feel it with the book back. Meantime, suspense for Sweetwater.

It was several minutes before he heard Mr. Brotherson's voice again. Then it was in triumphant repetition of the lines which had escaped his memory. They were great verses, surely and Sweetwater never forgot them, but the impression which they made upon him was, in consequence so forcible that he was able to repeat his part and listened with a thrill that did not prevent him from noting the tone in which the reader spoke, nor the tind which followed as the book was thrown down upon the floor.

"Well!" was the comment in bitter irony from his irate neighbor's lips. "What have I been wasting on Wanzani. Let him court a rich one and see—but that's all over and done with. He has listened to my last poem and no more reading of poetry. I'll be fair to him, though. I'll give him the book back. Meantime, suspense for Sweetwater.

Shifting his position, he placed his eye where his ear had been. He could see very little. The space before him limited as it was to the width of the one, volume withdrawn, precluded his seeing much; but what he viewed before him. Happily, it was in this narrow line of vision that the closet was the shielding down of a window, a loud sneeze, or the rattling of coals in the grate. Very good signs. And these possessed no significance. Then he wanted was to catch the secret sigh, the muttered word, the involuntary movement. He was too far removed for such things.

There was nothing peculiar about the room. It was just an ordinary one with drawers and shelves on one side, and an open space on the other for the hanging up of clothes. upon his model and was so placed that while his face was not visible, his canvas was, and as Sweetwater watched it grow broader and assume the delicacy of their manipulation, he was conscious of a workman in reality that work to-fine called for an undivided attention. He need not fear the gaze shifting, while those hands moved so warily as they did now.

Relieved for the moment, he left his post and, sitting down on the edge of his cot, gave himself up to thought.

Suddenly he started upright. He would go meet his fate—be present at the scene itself when the discovery was made which threatened to upset all his plans. He was not ashamed of his calling, and Brotherson would think twice before attacking him when once convinced that he was a competent hack of him.

"Excuse me, sonnie," were the words with which he addressed to Brotherson's door. "My lamp smells and I've made such a mess of my hands to-day that I've just stopped to for a chat. If I'm not mistaken, you're a man of the same like this, and a lot of books, and—and pictures."

"Come in, then. I like to see a man interested in books. I never thought if you know how to handle 'em." The voice was mild and kind, with the kindness of one to whom the character is a had assumed. He calmly refused the present as he had done that.

Unhappily he was not rewarded by seeing the despised volume restored to the shelf. It still lay where its owner had pushed it, when, with coma awkwardly muttered thanks, the disappointed detective withdrew to his own room.

Uses of Papyrus.

The papyrus plant, which once flourished in large quantities in Egypt, is now in a few scattered localities still abounds in the Jordan Valley, as well as in the Nile country and in Sicily and Sidon. It grows best in a marshy soil, usually in water from three to seven feet deep. The stems of the plant, which are hollow, like bamboo, are leafless, and the head is found only at the lower part, tapering away to a tuft. This tuft says a writer in the Wide World Magazine, is used today in the east for a variety of purposes, both ornamental and useful. It is also sometimes cut into sandals, boxes, various articles of furniture, and even into boats. In ancient times, the papyrus was largely used by the Egyptians for paper, and many specimens can boast of specimens of these ancient papyri manuscripts.

row bridge giving access to Tower Ward and the Thames, and on the North side a drawbridge at the northeast angle of the inner wall.

The Outer Ward, likewise perplexing, and the embedded fists embellished pavement. On the upper part of the Postern Gate tower a fish facing was hanging out from the main surface of the wall, and placed in many places of four inches, and was this strength and solidity that after the plaster was removed it became necessary to cut the stones effectively.

In the course of centuries the walls have been worked over and over again with old and new materials, some of which was indifferent, while the remainder was composed of rubble and of mere rubish. On the North wall, where the fish facing is found, the completed, one such mass of half-dressed irregular rubble had to be covered with a chain to hold it fast while the mortar between the joints had to be repointed to a depth of four inches owing to the decay of the mortar: Many of the stones had been contaminated by liquid concrete injected by the engineering officers, and the most consoled quoins were reinforced at the top by new ones securely bonded to the wall there.

The improvement in the appearance of the Martin Tower is great. One guiding principle is to use stone which is not only durable but harmonious in texture and color, and another is to use the plain joints subordinate to the outlines of the stones, that is to say, using a special grit mortar which is brushed away before it sets, so as to leave the grit standing out and avoid the flat and soapy appearance which is so obvious in itself and mars the characteristic lines of ancient masonry.

The work still proceeding on the Byward tower affords interesting details of problems. Here, too, there was much rubbish masonry, but it was largely caused by the decay of the mortar, and securing the ashlar and the inner grilles guarding the windows. The iron had expanded so much in rusting that it had fractured stone after stone, splitting off a rough segment of a circle from each angle where the ends of the grilles were set. The loosened ashlar face, which in places was found to be four inches thick, had fallen away from the masonry behind it, and was merely secured by the string-courses, having an inner

Possibly the First Music

Sapphos Have Been Known Since 7 Years Ago—Record Written in History.

Sapphos are the Bulgarian national instrument. Until lately the peasants who waited on the Turkish grand vizier in Constantinople were mutes, because the Koran forbids music, unless specially mutilated, but children of Bulgarian parents have a language of signs, with a special gesture to denote each of the instruments in each nation. To indicate the Bulgarian agent they imitate a man playing on the sapphos. But the Bulgarians who invented the pipes, however, are not the first to make use of musical instruments. An ancient gem in Florence shows that the first instruments in the book of Daniel are believed to have been still in existence. This was the Sardinian "launeda," which had three pipes, all of equal length, and was played by rubbing strips of wax up and down the pipes.

The work was so exhausting that nearly all the pipers died young. In 1846 George Burdett came across one who had survived to the age of 80. But he was the last of the launeda players, and when he died, the instrument was played no more.

TOWER OF LONDON

British Restoring Walls to Their Original Shape.

Government Making Effort to Undo Mischief by Ignorant Efforts of "Restorers" of Past to Put Structure in Condition.

London.—In his collection of essays entitled "A Tragedy in Stone," Lord Rosedale gives an account of the work that was done in the late seventies in connection with the preservation and restoration of part of the Tower of London, in the course of which work the bones of Queen Anne Boleyn were laid bare.

The work, then begun under the supervision of the late Taylor, has been continued with more or less energy since, but now the office of works, which is responsible for the fabric of the tower, is making a great effort to undo the mischief wrought by ignorant "restorers" of the past and to put what is left of the great structure—a historic relic almost unrivaled in the world—into something like the condition in which it was in the days of the glory—and its shame.

A writer in the Times describes in some detail the work that is being done. Partly, perhaps, owing to the damage done by chemical fumes, but to a depth which is greater than any previous excavations, experiments have taken place in various parts of the tower to ascertain the depth at which ancient surface texture would be developed in the Beauchamp tower, in Wakefield chapel (now a store for powder), and elsewhere. These are kept constantly under observation, and the decayed face of various parts of the walls and towers has necessitated immediate attention, and in parts the most seriously dilapidated sections have been carried back to sound stone.

Here, as elsewhere, it is the constant aim of the men in charge of the works not merely to safeguard the ancient buildings from further decay, but to save every bit of genuine old character and to harmonize necessary modern construction with that of original work.

Within the last century many of the finest parts of the tower were defaced with a coating of cement interspersed with flints. This work has recently been done in order to keep out wind and weather from the decayed walls at little expense, but the eventual result has been to hasten the insecurity of the buildings, while giving them a singularly shabby appearance. The work of removing this flint plaster and refacing the walls with secure and suitable masonry has so far chiefly been carried out on the Byward tower, on the inner Curtain wall which forms part of it, and guards the nar-

Secretary of War Garrison Inspects Fort Snelling

STAFF OFFICERS BELIEVE MINNESOTA'S MILITARY POST WILL BE ENLARGED

MAY ALSO BE ENLARGED

Distinguished Visitor Is Reticent About Affairs—Is Entertained by Committee at Luncheon and Ball Game.

St. Paul.—Lindley M. Garrison, secretary of war, spent Friday in the Twin Cities to inspect Fort Snelling and on his recommendations depends the future of the fort. Whether it will be abandoned Mr. Garrison would not disclose, but it was said that it would be surprising if anything detrimental to the fort were decided upon by the war department.

Moreover, it is the current gossip that the fort, instead of being abandoned, will be enlarged, absorbing the activities of some of the smaller forts in the Northwest which are due to be dismantled.

Before boarding the train for Chicago, Secretary Garrison said: "I cannot say what my observations on the fort are. I am not going to say anything until it is taken up officially at Washington. At some of the points that I have visited have I made any public statements about war department affairs.

"However, I will say this much about the Twin Cities. I like them so well that I would like to live here the rest of my life."

Mr. Garrison's mission, however, was to inspect the fort and decide on the course of action to pursue regarding its future. His studied reticence about his impressions was extended even towards his official staff, some of whom were advised as to the secretary's findings, but it is the general impression that the outposts at Sturgis, S. D., and Bismarck, N. D., are to be abandoned with a corrective enlargement of Fort Snelling.

SUGGEST DYNAMITE FACTORY

Minnesota Farmers Seek Cut Rates on Explosive Used to Clear Land.

Bemidji — At a meeting here of farmers, called to perfect plans for the co-operative clearing of land in northern Minnesota, a scheme was launched which seeks to have the state establish at the penitentiary or elsewhere, a factory to manufacture dynamite.

Farmers have found that the most effective means of clearing land is with dynamite, but so far the powder asked for this explosive here has been such that they could not profitably make large investments.

The plan is to circulate a petition in an effort to have every farmer in this part of the state sign it, asking that the state make its own dynamite and sell it at a reduced rate to the farmers.

TEAM PLUNGES INTO RIVER

Man Is Probably Fatally Injured and Team of Horses Are Drowned.

Crookston. — Tearing through the heart of the city and dashing across the Northern Pacific tracks just on the edge of Central park, a farm team hitched to a load of lumber plunged over a forty-foot bank into Red Lake river, both horses drowning. The driver was nearly free from the rig after swimming nearly across the river the team swung around, the load of lumber floating behind them, and attempted to swim back, but sank in the center of the river. Joseph Gaerbe, a carpenter, who was building the team, was buried from the wagon and probably fatally injured.

Auto Hits Buggy; Horse Killed.

Winona, Minn., Sept. 3.—Under the glare of an electric arc light on a downtown avenue, a five-passenger auto driven by Frank B. Alward last night shattered a buggy in which were Leo Towner and a women companion, killed the horse and carried the top of the carriage, still containing the driver, 100 yards on the run to the hood. None of the occupants were seriously injured, although Towner was bruised. The women in the buggy was thrown to the cement but escaped with slight injuries.

County Fair at Willmar.

Willmar.—The Kandiyohi County Fair association has incorporated and is acquiring ground for a permanent fair grounds adjoining the Park cemetery grounds. A hot-air plant will be built and an athletic field arranged. This will give Willmar one of the first fair grounds in the state. Preparations are being made for the county fair to be held Sept. 17 to 20. Hosing week is a new feature this year and $2,000 will be paid out in agricultural premiums.

Pinned Down In Ditch.

Lakefield.—Newton Arrowsmith, a farmer, was killed while driving a water tank into a big ditch for water. As he was entering the ditch the wagon overturned and he was pinned under it in about two feet of water.

Woman Saves Big Trestle.

Hastings.—Three ladies while driving to Point Douglas discovered the trestle of the Burlington road on fire. With the assistance of a boy they formed a bucket brigade and saved the structure.

WESTON TO TURN FARMER.

Veteran Pedestrian Says Northern Part of State Is Ideal for a Home.

Minneapolis.—Edward Payson Weston, the world's champion walker, has decided to become a Minnesota farmer. Captivated by the beauty of the scenery and the wonderful agricultural possibilities of the Gopher state, Mr. Weston expresses the belief that nowhere in the country can more profitable farming operations be carried on than in northern Minnesota. It has long been his dream to secure an ideal farm and, after walking across the continent twice, all over England, France and other foreign countries, it proved to the Minnesota that comes nearest to making the dream a reality and offers a farm that "just suits" the pedestrian.

While on the Minneapolis to Waconia excursion Mr. Weston drove over a large tract of land in Rosedn county, inspecting the farm buildings and crops. When the party returned to Waconia, Monday, he decided that he would purchase a tract of land within five miles of that city. The deeds was to act. He paid the cash, obtained the deed, and barely was the ink dry before he had planned what sort of buildings he would erect and what crops he would raise.

"I shall tell the young men of New York, New Jersey and other Eastern states of my investment and advise them to come to Minnesota and get farms while the land is cheap and yield trying to cultivate cobble stones," said Mr. Weston.

Not content with this purchase, Mr. Weston also bought a residence lot in Warroad, near the Lake of the Woods, for a "home in town." "If the friends I expect to entertain in the country get lonesome I will take them into town for a change," he said.

Farmer Run Down by a Train.

Minnesota Lake. — With almost every bone in his body broken, Frank M. Schenck, a farmer living two miles west of here, was found dead beside the Milwaukee railway track, a quarter of a mile west of here, having been run down while walking to his home from the village with some supplies. It is thought that freight train No. 163 was the train that killed him. Schenck leaves a wife and six small children. He was on a rented farm and in poor circumstances.

Graves of Indians Uncovered.

Thief River Falls.—Men employed in grading the approach to the new bridge that crosses the Thief river, eight miles from the center of the city, unearthed portions of two small human skulls and several thigh bones. The grading is being done on land that was formerly the old Indian reservation and the remains are supposed to be those of Indian children. A string of beads and a small chisel cap were found besides the bones.

Found Dying on Tracks.

St. Paul.—Found lying on the tracks of the Minneapolis & St. Louis railroad at Cleveland, Ia., Minn., by a farmer from Minneapolis, John Henry of Minneapolis, a boy of 15, was picked up by the engineer of a train due in Minneapolis at 7:45 p. m., and died before the train reached the city. The train was run at full speed for Minneapolis and the injured man at attended by a physician, but his injuries proved too serious for the long ride.

1912 CROP EXCEEDINLY GOOD

STATE IMMIGRATION BUREAU ESTIMATES FROM COUNTY REPORTS.

Wheat Yield Above Normal, Corn Crop Best Ever and Potato Prospect Good.

Minneapolis.—The state immigration bureau, basing its estimate on reports from twenty counties as to average yield, believes the 1913 crop in Minnesota will exceed that of a year ago in everything except hay.

Commissioner F. D. Sherman says that it is evident corn will go way above normal this year if nothing happens from now till cutting.

Fourteen counties have reported. These reports show an average wheat crop of about 19 bushels to the acre. Oats run from 25 to 67 bushels per acre, with an average of about 40.

Corn ranges from 35 to 60 bushels to the acre.

The potato crop also is good, the estimated yield in these fourteen counties being about 170 bushels an acre. Itasca county estimates 225 bushels; Dakota and Yellow Medicine report a promised yield of 200 bushels an acre.

Rye is running about 22 bushels, flax 18, with barley verying from 30 to 50.

Todd county reports the best yield of wheat, and also of oats. Mower county reports the heaviest corn yield. Hay is reported lighter than last year in almost every section.

Alfalfa is being splendidly in Yellow Medicine county.

Murray county reports a lower yield because eight square miles in the southeast corner were balled out.

Mower county reports: "The best general crop for many years."

Red Lake county report says: "The corn crop is the best in the county's history."

TO SOLICIT FOR COLLEGE

Gustavus Adolphus After Endowment Started by J. J. Hill and C. A. Smith.

St. Peter.—Directors of Gustavus Adolphus college have appointed six special solicitors to complete the task of raising an endowment fund of $250,000 for the institution. The appointees are Dr. K. A. Kilander, Dr. Conrad Lovenstam and Rev. Luther Member of this city, Rev. E. G. Chilulind, Red Wing; Rev. E. Swanson, Stillwater, and Professor H. F. Kjellgran, Minneapolis. They will work under the direction of Rev. Carl Solomonson of Minneapolis, who has general supervision of the field work.

The announcement was made last spring that James J. Hill of St. Paul and C. A. Smith of Minneapolis had pledged contributions of $50,000 each, provided the college would raise an additional $150,000. At that time the college had $50,000 in his endowment fund, and Mr. Solomonson was given charge of obtaining the help that would earn the desired amount.

They have met with great success and in three months here practically doubled the amount in the fund, the contributions reported to the board aggregating an additional $52,000 few. The campaign is to be carried on with energy, and it is hoped to finish the field work by Dec. 1.

POWER PLANT SOON READY

Will Supply Industries at Crookston and Will Supply Farms With Both Light and Power.

Crookston.—The work on the new power plant of the Red River Valley Farm & Improvement company is progressing rapidly, following the plans which delayed the work temporarily. The immense main framework of solid cement, upon which the two steel stacks will be swung to release the surplus steam, has been completed, and the cement foundation for the power plant is being laid. The three turbine wheels, to develop 3,500 horsepower each, will soon be in position. The work has been in progress for over a year. Power will be furnished for many industries here, and connections will be made with farms for both light and power.

Madelia Elevator Burns.

Madelia.—The John Bisbee elevator was burned. The fire is thought to have been started by sparks from a passing engine. Loss $10,000, with $5,000 insurance. This is the second elevator burned in Madelia this year, the last being the C. S. Christensen building.

Prairie Chickens Abundant.

Redwood Falls.—Redwood county farmers are enthusiastic over the fact that the prairie chicken season will soon open with a bountiful supply of game. Prairie chickens were never so plentiful in this particular region of the state since the early days, say those who have been recognized for signs of game. Farmers who have been busy in the harvest fields corroborate this report. They say they never saw more covies of young birds. The birds are all of good size and plump.

Herman. — Deputy Game Warden Paul B. Goodell of Grant county arrested A. C. Spilker when Charlie for hunting prairie chickens out of season and held him before Judge Peter O. Chokio, where he pleaded guilty and paid a fine of $10 and costs.

St. Paul.—The state highway commission approved a system of 77 miles of state roads and five bridges at a meeting of the commission held in Koochiching county, authorized by the last legislature. The work calls for an appropriation of $50,000.

"MANNISH" VESTS FOR FALL

These ultra-mannish vests are the very newest in French fashions for fall wear, but even the split skirt and the one-piece bathing suit have not prepared men to accept with equanimity this further usurpation of his costume.

DAINTY AND USEFUL DRESSES

Nothing Prettier for the Small Girl Has Been Evolved in the Season's Range of Fashion.

The model on the left shows a useful little dress in a soft shade of blue. The skirt is laid in flat plaits turning from the front. The bodice wraps over a little to left side. It is fastened by press studs and ornamented with fancy buttons and braid loops. The collar, cuffs and waistband are in blue and white checked cotton.

Materials required: 2¾ yards 40 inches wide, ¾ yard sheck 26 inches wide, 2 buttons.

Beside this is a dainty dress of white spotted muslin. The bodice has a square yoke of lace insertion to which the muslin is gathered. The sleeve is set into armhole with very slight fullness, the cuffs are of lace to match yoke, so are the waistband and the band that trims the skirt above the hem.

Materials required: 3½ yards muslin 36 inches wide, about 3½ yards wide insertion and rather more than 4 yards of narrow for waistband.

Ballroom Library.

One woman has converted a bedroom into the daintiest of tiny libraries. On one side is a set of shelves for books. The walls are covered with blue damask of very delicate shade. The ceiling is blue, with a conventional pattern of white trailing vines drooping gracefully down to half-length. The rug is delft blue, and the room contains one chair upholstered in delft-blue brocade. A small mahogany table holds a telephone and a blue shell frieze writing outfit. A small lamp hangs from the center of the ceiling, and it has a blue and rose glass shade with crystal pendants. When lighted, it throws a beautiful glow over the little reading room.

Bright Buttons.

Buttons come in all colors, in brilliant reds, blues, vivid greens and yellows, with novelty tones such as terra cotta, flame and reds of the Pompeiian order. The tones are sometimes softened by a touching of dull gold in Chinese or Japanese characters. This tracing is sometimes in black. The result is so good as to indicate a great vogue for these buttons.

Galalith copies of the striped china buttons which have been so fashionable this summer are being brought out for fall, and have already been heavily advertised.

A continuation of the vogue of the buttons in the color-matching circles is a bright shade, may be expected.

For Tight Shoes.

Summer is the season above all others when one's shoes seem to hurt, and this year one looks in horror at the rows of patent leather ones that are brought out in the vacatative shops, but true, these may be worn with comfort if one will shake a little powdered alum into the toe of her shoe before going out. Do not rub it inside the stocking, merely forget the shoe.

EYEBROWS NEED CARE

Add So Much to the General Charm That No Woman Can Afford to Neglect Them.

It is an acknowledged fact that pretty brows add much to the general charm, and it is odd that women except to enjoy this feature at its best when they do not take care of it. They would not expect either tooth, nails or hair to grow in perfection were they not taken care of, and the same applied to the eyebrows. They need massaging and shaping frequently. Failing in this, there will be scraggy lines or coarse, projecting hairs, the latter one of the most conspicuous disfigurements a woman can have.

I have often noticed women with apparently perfect teeth and complexion entirely unmindful of the fact that the eyebrows were sticking out in all directions. A woman is greatly neglectful for the few seconds she spends when dressing in brushing her brows into the eyebrows by the improvement in her general appearance.

The correct shape of a pretty eyebrow should be like a swallow's wing, and to give them the broad, curved effect, begin at the end nearest the nose, stroke as if the brows are inclined to be too broad, pinch together with the thumb and fingers in a straight line to the place where the natural curve starts. At that point there should be a downward stroke that will point the hairs in the right direction.

Some eyes are enhanced by a broad line, while others look better with a delicately pencilled effect of the eyebrow; this, of course, depends upon the shape and contour of the face. So that in getting the straight line over the eyes an effect of width must becoming to the face is given, while with the thumb and fingers in a straight line to the place where the natural curve starts. At that point there should be a downward stroke that will point the hairs in the right direction.

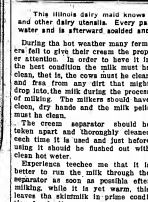
MAKING BUTTER DURING THE HOT SEASON



This Illinois dairy maid knows how to take care of a cream-separator and other dairy utensils. Every part is first washed in tepid (not hot) water and is afterward scalded and dried in the sun.

During the hot weather many farmers fail to give their cream the proper attention. In order to have it in the best condition the milk must be clean, that is, the cows must be clean and free from any dirt that might drop into the milk during the process of milking, the milkers should have clean, dry hands and the milk pails must be clean.

The cream separator should be taken apart and thoroughly cleaned each time it is used and just before using it should be flushed out with clean hot water.

Experience teaches me that it is better to run the milk through the separator as soon as possible after milking, while it is yet warm, this leaves the animals in prime condition for feeding calves and pigs and the cream should be cooled at once.

Those who have the dairy building with running water will have no trouble in cooling the cream and those who have not these facilities can cool it very readily in a can placed in a tank of water. For this purpose the ordinary shotgun can does very well, particularly if the cream is stirred, and for stirring I use a dish with a perpendicular rod from the center for a handle in very effective.

For farm butter-making the churning should be done not less than three times a week in the summer. Ripen the cream at 65 to 70 degrees and then cool it and keep it cool for a few hours before churning.

Usually it is a good plan to begin cooling the cream before it is quite sour enough to churn because it will sour some while cooling.

The proper temperature for churning varies with different localities, but in most cases from 60 to 64 degrees will be all right for the summer months.

In the early summer churn at 59 degrees.

SCALES ON FARM GOOD INVESTMENT

Average Farmer Does Not Realize How Much He Loses Each Year by Lack of Device.

(By R. B. RUSHING.)

I do not believe the average farmer realizes how much he loses each year because he has not a pair of good, reliable scales located on the farm. Nearly all of the farmer's produce is sold by weight, and it is not enough to stand by and see it weighed on the buyer's scales. You should have a set of your own in your yard so that you may be sure you are getting all you are entitled to. I do not mean to insinuate that buyers are dishonest, but mistakes are sometimes too easily made.

If you feed a number of hogs you should have a pair of platform scales to weigh them on when you come to feed them, and then by also weighing the grain that is fed them you should be able to tell whether you are feeding at a profit and how much. When you are ready to deliver the market it takes just a few minutes to weigh your wagon empty and again after the loads are loaded, and then you are able to tell where you are. Of course you must allow a little for shrinkage. From my own experience I would say fat hogs will shrink about two pounds per hundred, even in cool nights.

Here in southern Illinois many of the hogs and cattle are sold to the buyers, who come and buy them at the farm, and unless a pair of scales are at hand they are generally inspected by the eye, and guessed at by the tale. The buyers are buying all the time and are very apt to make a price that is more than safe for themselves. Besides there is not the satisfaction in selling to one who has never seen or see them weighed on your own scales.

When you go to the market to buy a piece of meat or to the grocery for sugar it is never stamped off, but carefully weighed, and I believe that it pays to be exact in all of our dealings. If I pays these people to have their scales right I can not see why you should not do the same.

If you are a farmer that does not feed stock, but sell your hay and grain to feeders, you certainly do need a pair of scales. You cannot afford to guess off a load of hay. What you would lose in this way in a year would usually buy a pair of good scales if you do much business. If you sell your corn to feeders you are liable to be cheated by guessing off a crib of corn or by measuring it. This, as you plainly see, is not a safe way to do business.

When you harvest your wheat, oats or rye to market and try to load about the same every time you may find that the loads vary 200 pounds or more. No use to kick, unless you kick yourself because you have not bought a pair of scales, for they are constantly being advertised in the best farm journals.

Last year I had my scales I got enough more money on my wheat to buy half pay for the scales. One was a load of oats that fell short 100 pounds, and the other was wood, and still some will say it does not pay to bother with weighing everything you sell. They are satisfied as long as they can see the weighing done, but yet this is not always safe.

I have in mind a pair of scales that can be thrown short 200 pounds right in front of your eyes and never seen out of every dozen would not notice it. When I first purchased my scales ten years ago my neighbor thought I was just sinking that much money in the ground, sometimes I think I have learned to consider them a good thing investment.

My custom weighing at tea cents a draft paid good interest on the investment the first year, and every year since. Perhaps there will be some that will be interested in the cost of good wagon scales. I bought an standard make of five tons capacity and the scales, timbers for platform and platform, irons and masons work was as much as my wife's $100 sewing a pigeound teet weight.

When you buy a set of scales be sure and get a test weight. Then if you begin to get loads that are over weight you are entitled to it. Usually when farmers are hoping and selling among themselves nearly everything is jumped off, but you cannot afford to do this, at least I think it is work too hard for my dollars to swap them off that way.

When you get ready to buy sweet of scales do not be a little dollars difference in price stand in the way and land you to buy an inferior article. If you are buying a set of wagon scales for a lifetime, which you are, get a set that will stand it, and one that you can stand behind and be sure that they will do good work.

When you set your scales put them where they will be handy to use; where they will be in some corner where no one can get to them. Have them ready to drive onto and collect some cents for all custom weighing. There are so many reasons why scales should be on every farm that it seems to me that every wide-awake farmer should see, if he has not one of them, enough to cause him to get in action.

LIMESTONE IS OF MUCH IMPORTANCE

Recent Experiment Conducted at Rhode Island Station With Poultry.

A recent experiment by the Rhode Island experiment station with poultry, feed emphasizes the great need which limestone has been in the practice of bone-forming material.

To compare the effect of the addition of bone and of the different amounts of ground limestone to the ration of poultry, two lots each of 14 two-weeks-old Cornish Game-White Wyandotte chicks were fed the same basal ration of corn meal, cracked corn, mixed feed and alfalfa, supplemented with beaten-seed meal, an equal protein basis with animal matter.

Lot 1 received no added ash concentrate, but enough bone and ash and ground limestone to supply phosphorus and calcium equal to the ash in animal matter. Lot 2 was fed in the same ration, but with three times as much limestone as lot 1.

The experiment was begun the latter part of October and by the first part of December all the chicks in lot 1 had died. The chicks in lot 2 began to show signs of leg weakness the middle of December and three afterwards died. None of lot 3 died.

Brewers' Grains.

The composition of wet brewers' grains varies. It is safe to state that 100 pounds of wet brewers' grains will contain about 18 pounds of digestible nutrients, corn silage about 17 pounds, dried brewers' grains about 55 pounds. Brewers' grains contain from 4½ to 7 per cent. of digestible protein, while silage contains about 1.6 per cent. On the whole, however, we should say that good silage is a better feed for dairy cows than wet brewers' grains, and considerably better for children's dairy classes.

LITTLE GIRL LOST FOUR DAYS, ALIVE

LITTLE GIRL SHOWS REMARKABLE ENDURANCE AND WILL LIVE.

Beulah, the two and a half year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Gauzhorn, residing near Erskine, who wandered from home, was found Sunday afternoon after hundreds of searchers had been looking for her for four days and had given up hope of ever finding her alive. Though she was in the open four days and nights she is alive and almost completely recovered from the ill effects of the most unusual experience.

The little girl was found between two and three miles from home sitting under some bushes on the edge of a slough. Hundreds of searchers had covered the territory for miles around for the four days and how they overlooked her is a mystery. Though emaciated and overcome by the exposure and lack of food and water, the little girl was still very much alive. The parents who had almost given up hope of ever seeing their baby alive were overjoyed at her recovery.

A blood hound from Mentnoto aided in the search. Several times he lead the searchers to the vicinity where the little girl was found and then seemed to be confused. It is believed that the dog lost the scent because of rank oders that came from the sloughs in the neighborhood.

It was decided to begin a systematic search from the point to which the dog had led them and cover every foot of the ground. This resulted in finding the child as noted above.

Roseau Fair Called Off.

The Roseau county fair billed for this month has been called off. The secretary of the fair association has made the following statement:

Owing to the fact that the storm destroyed all the buildings at the Fair grounds, the Fair Association does not deem itself financially able to hold a fair this year. It is planned, however, to hold the Fair in the middle of the summer next year, and those who have exhibits are urged to keep them till next year, wherever exhibits are such that can be kept, such as grain, etc. Greater efforts than ever will then be made to make up for the loss of a fair this year.

El Perco

--Quick--Economical

El Perco is different and better than all other coffee percolators because the heating element is a part of the pot. The result is a percolator with quicker and more complete action, at a much lower price.

Operation is very simple; put the cold water into the pot, the coffee into the basket, and turn on the current. Percolation commences in less than one minute and the coffee is made without boiling.

There are but two parts to El Perco and the absence of valves, traps or floats makes it very easy to keep clean.

Buick

The Tremendous Power and Dependable "Going" Quality of the Past Linked With the Engineering Refinements of 1914.

The same values that have sold Buicks in the past will sell Buicks this year. Then there is the added value of Electric Startings Lighting and Ignition, Left Side Drive, Center Control—Every "Advanced" Improvement.

But not one atom of Buick excellence has been sacrificed.

Buick popularity with owners is founded on the bed rock foundation of giving the owner uninterruped use of his investment at all times and under all conditions.

It's this ability to do what's required every time without flunking that has built the Buick reputation and will make it greater in the future.

To better Buick essentials is difficult—nearly impossible. But we can and have added and made part of the car, features that insure the greatest enjoyment of every mile of road covered.

Is it any wonder that Buick owners are satisfied? It sells fast on its merits as a car. With its marvelous construction—its guarantee on power, speed, economy—with its mileage records up to fifty, seventy-five and one hundred thousand, and finally with the last of the new features: the 1914 Buick is destined to greater popularity than ever.

The business men all surrounding points that "rope" numbers of "peoples" at the fair, so there can be no doubt that, the weather man approving, the second day of the Red Lake County fair will be a record-breaker.

WILL FIGHT FREIGHT REBATES

CLAIM SHIPMENT OF FREIGHT TO EAST GRAND FORKS INTERSTATE BUSINESS.

Claiming that they first shipped all East Grand Forks freight to the west side of the river and then brought it back to the east side the Great Northern railway will fight the refund on shipments which has been ordered by the supreme court of Minnesota. The company claims that the commerce was interstate and outside the Minnesota law.

The attorneys for the East Grand Forks consignees claim that the company simply employed this method of delivering shipments for their own convenience and that it was not necessary to do so.

"Our contention will be based," said one of the attorneys, "on the theory that the railroad cannot make what is properly interstate business into that of the state. Freight properly consigned to East Grand Forks is taken out of the state for their own convenience.

"It is simply a method for evading control by the railroad and commerce commission. If their contention is good they might just as well take freight consigned to Duluth over the Soo railway, while control by the proper authorities."

No definite steps have been taken, as yet, by either side to test the case, but papers in the test case will probably be filed in a few days.—Crookston Times.

Coming Soon.

Next attraction at the opera house is Eugene Perry's excellent comedy drama in four acts "Kidnapped for a million," featuring the famous Perry Sisters with a company of high grade players. The Four Perrys have starred in this play for six seasons and with their past reputation are sure to please every one. Miss Flora Perry as Dulie, the stolen child, has mastered the eyes of thousands, while Miss Pauline will keep you bubbling with laughter in the role of Tilsy. The Perry sisters in their buck and wing dancing and picturesque telephone song between acts will keep you awake. Elegant wardrobe is worn throughout the play. Special scenery and settings to correspond for each act. Remember, only one night, a dollar show for 75c reserved seats. Prof. Atherton, the great ventriloquist and trick player, is with this show. HEARTY APPROVAL OF SCHOOL PLANS

COMMISSIONER OF BUILDINGS SAYS NEW SCHOOL HOUSE WILL BE MODEL OF KIND.

The plans and specifications for the new high school and grade building of this city, have just been approved by Mr. S. A. Challman, State Commissioner of School Buildings. Mr. Challman states that the building is a model of its kind, pleasing in its exterior appearance and excellent in its interior arrangement. The basement plan shows two agricultural rooms with a combined area of 3014 square feet of floor space and two manual training rooms with 1246 square feet of floor space. This generous distribution will enable the school to maintain excellent courses in these practical subjects. The large recreation room on the first floor is well located, admirably lighted and properly ventilated. The auditorium room in connection with the cooking room is a splendid feature. The school rooms and laboratories are of the most generous dimensions, well lighted and ventilated. The assembly room on the second floor which is 62 feet by 38 feet is a particularly well-planned room.

DISCING BEFORE PLOWING.

Farm Practice That Will Result in Moisture Conservation.

Notwithstanding the fact that the importance of the disc harrow has been growing rapidly, it is not being put to as many uses as it should be.

Careful study of the following will show that there are enough profitable ways to use this implement which are not now being practiced, to double the value of the disc harrow.

Many practical experiments and a good deal of scientific study, both recently, has proven the advisability and in fact, the absolute necessity, from a scientific standpoint, of properly preparing the soil before plowing.

Nature stores moisture in the subsoil which is brought up to feed the plants by capillary attraction. Capillary is only perfect when the soil is well pulverized and compact—that is the kind many farmers from dumps and pulverized or rotted manure will put in large air spaces to retard the process of bringing the moisture from the subsoil to the seed bed proper.

Stubble, heavy layers of manure, corn stalks, rubbish turned under by the plow to a hindrance and the capillary water stops at the break made at the bottom of the furrow, consequently the plants suffer because they must depend entirely on the water in the seed bed proper—they cannot get the moisture from the lower subsoil.

This condition is overcome by disking before plowing. The disc not only pulverizes the ground thereby making a compact contact between the furrow slice and the bottom of the furrow, but all vegetation, manure and trash that was on the surface, is cut up and thoroughly worked into the seed bed.

During seasons of scant rainfall, disking immediately after cutting the grain forms a dust or fine mulch on top of the land. It will then absorb water as well as prevent the escaping of what moisture there is already in the soil.

After grain is cut, the ground is exposed to the direct rays of the sun. This dries the surface, draws the water from the subsoil and leaves the ground hard and dry. Disking puts the ground in condition for rapid absorption when rain falls or the snow melts, thereby preventing washing of the soil.

An intelligent and systematic use of the disc harrow year after year will greatly increase crop yields.This statement has been verified time after time by the most careful experiments.

There are great possibilities in the use of the disc harrow. Remember the disc harrow is one of the most important implements when properly used.

RACE TRACK IS IN FINE SHAPE

FAST HORSES ARE ENTERING AND RACE PROGRAM WILL BE FINE.

Unless the weather man objects there is no doubt that excellent race programs will be given at the Red Lake county fair next week. The track is in excellent shape. The recent rains have made it possible to do some very effective work in getting the surface of the track in the right condition. Men have been at work on the track several days rolling and floating it and working in all of the worst places. It is doubtful if there is a better half mile track in the northwest than that of the Red Lake county fair grounds at the present time.

J. D. Houston, clerk of the races, says that a fine string of fast horses have been entered and there is no doubt that all races will be filled. The good horsemen races with the other events and attractions arranged for will provide a diversity of entertainment for the county fair crowds. There is no doubt that everyone attending will find entertainment that will occupy his attention continuously.

WILL RIDE OUTLAWS

Bronco "Busting" Performance at the County Fair Will be Real Article.

There are at Hoff's barn in this city several untamed and apparently untamable broncbos. These broncbos are to put on a "busting" performance at the Red Lake county fair next week.

These horses are not trained to do a little "stunt." They are "outlaws." Broncbos that have never been ridden or driven and possessed of a determination to buck they shall do.

A Montana broncbo buster has been engaged to rope and ride these "outlaws" at the coming county fair. The county fair crowds. This man has the reputation of being able to keep on top of the worst "outlaw" ever corralled and he promises to put on a show that will be real with not be of the "canned" variety.

DOES IT SIGNIFY END OF PARTY?

PROGRESSIVES MADE A POOR SHOWING IN THE MAINE ELECTION.

St. Paul—(Special)—As the old saw runs, "One swallow does not make a summer," so also it might be said that the recent defeat suffered by the Progressive party does not mean the complete passing of the "Bull Moose" party, yet condor compels the statement that the loss in things political is slipping. That before another election has been reached it will be among those that some pass in the pendulum of music. Last week the "Bull Moose" state executive committee met in St. Paul to plan for next year's campaign and though the meeting was enthusiastic enough it had to be admitted that the cause was anything but on the boom. There were a possibilities note throughout and it was voiced by several in the conference that the effect that the voters were not thinking their necks to see what so frank a one member that he told of taking his local editor to the proverbial mountain and showing him the feast spread out below, but while he was willing he is skeptical. The party "had not delivered the goods," and that, said this unusually frank member, was the crux of the matter, where. We have got to deliver some goods if we hope to keep our present place in the estimation of parties." That the party's only hope lay in further individual sacrifices and contributions from their own pockets was admitted. Despite this pessimistic undercurrent it was decided to go ahead. How long it will take to "get there" "Bull Moose" take the discard remains to be seen, still, as I said, one swallow does not make a summer and the Progressives always presage the early arrival of the usual cold spell of earth. In fifty there is always hope.

"No chain is stronger than its weak est link," something the "Bull Moose" perhaps might profit from! Or a few of their self-constituted leaders would only sit up and take notice. The weak link in the case of the party

HIGH SCHOOL HORSES

Mr. McDonald and Five Horses Will be County Fair Feature.

One of the most enjoyable features of the Red Lake county fair next week will be the exhibition pat on each day by Mr. McDonald and his trained horses. One of the horses "Lady" is a high school graduate (those who have seen her perform say there is no doubt of it) and the other is a senior in the high school. "Lady" can do almost everything she is told to and together with the two horse put on their "stunt" at the recent North Dakota fair and those who saw them say their show was worth the price of admission.

RUMOR SEEMS TO BE WELL FOUNDED

GENERAL OPINION NORTHERN PACIFIC HAS ACQUIRED GREAT NORTHERN LINE.

The report published in the last issue of this Gazette that the Great Northern line of road from the junction just south of Red Lake Falls to Warroad had been purchased by the Northern Pacific is now being quite generally accepted as correct. While the report "is not supported by any "authorized statement" there are many rumors that seem to have enough support in fact to indicate that the deal has been made or is about to be made.

The Northern Pacific now has a direct line from the twin cities to the junction point and with this change through passenger service, twin cities to Warroad, will result. In fact it is more than probable that it would be a very short time before Winnipeg line.

It is also truthfully be said that "developments will be awaited with interest."—Bemidji Pioneer.

PROGRESS WITH NEW BUILDIOG

HEAVY FOUNDATION FOR NEW SCHOOL HOUSE IS ABOVE GROUND.

With favorable weather for work excellent progress has been made with the building of Red Lake Falls' excellent new public school building. The heavy concrete work for the basement is now above the surface of the ground and while the concrete has been going in the brick layers have been constructing the cross walls.

Contractor Brady and the sub-contractor, Mr. Johnson, who has the contract for the brick work, plan to have the work as much as it is possible to push it so that the building may be so nearly enclosed as possible before cold weather sets in. There is no doubt that Red Lake Falls is to have a public school building of which the people of the city will be proud.

JEROME ACQUITTED; APOLOGY TENDERED

MAGISTRATE SORRY FOR HUMILIATION DEFENDANT HAS UNDERGONE.

EVIDENCE IS INSUFFICIENT

Thaw Sees Some Hopes for Release on a Charge of Irregularity Which May be Lodged if First Contention Fails.

Cootlcock, Que., Sept. 10.—Apologizing for the humiliation to which he had been subjected, Magistrate Hutchison freed William Travers Jerome of the charge of having gambled on last Thursday on a railroad property while waiting for the immigration board to dispose of the case of Harry K. Thaw.

Hearing is Short.

The hearing lasted less than an hour, and at the end of that time the court said, "Sir, you are honorably discharged."

Jerome thanked the court and spoke falteringly of his reception in Canada. He declared that he did not attribute his arrest and imprisonment a week ago to the thinking people of Canada. Jerome later left Cootlcock for New York. He will prepare himself for arguments on the latest habeas corpus writ, to be held before the King's bench, Montreal, Sept. 16.

Crowd is Hostile.

Townspeople packed the court room when the hearing was opened. Every inch of standing room was occupied and the hold among the audience announced in a semicircle about the council table and perched at the sides of the bench upon which the magistrate sat. Jerome looked straight at the court and did not once glance at the throng, which in looks, grim faces and subdued remarks, was plainly hostile.

A. C. Hanson, joint crown prosecutor, opened the case with the reading of the complaint of Millford Allchin, a mill hand who swore he had seen the defendant playing cards for money at the railway station. Statutes were quoted to show that this was an indictable offense, punishable with a year's imprisonment.

Jerome is Acquitted.

"In rendering judgment," Magistrate Hutchens said, "I shall be very brief. I believe every right-minded man in Canada regrets and feels humiliation at the indignity which has been placed upon you. It was excusable neither in law nor in fact. The evidence adduced at this hearing gives no reasons for the charge which was laid against you, nor for the indignities which you have suffered.

"I believe, sir, in all the circumstances, you will not attribute the apparent offense offered you solely to the friendly country in the disobeying of your duty as a public officer of the real thinking people of this community. You are, sir, honorably discharged."

Irregularity Hope of Thaw.

Montreal—According to J. N. Greenshields, of Thaw's counsel, one of the main hopes of the defense, aside from the fight against the immigration officials itself, is on illegal irregularity in the proceedings taken by the immigration officers. It is contended that they did not have a formal order to take Thaw in charge, which the defense claims is necessary under the act when the office affected has been in the country ten days.

Thaw had been in the country more than 15 days when he was surrendered to the immigration officials and T. R. E. McInnes, K. C., has made no secret of the immigration men took him in charge without proper authority from the minister.

It states that before the board of inquiry he demanded that E. Blake Robertson, assistant superintendent of immigration, produce this document and that the latter declined to do so.

A Second Reason.

The second reason, cited to Judge Gervais and Cross in the informal application made by Thaw's counsel before the matter was brought into chambers Friday, was the unconstitutionality of the act.

This third point is the misuse of the act to supplement and add to the enforcement of the law and order in New York state.

"Thaw's chances of ultimate freedom are better now than they have been at any time since he was first arrested on a charge of murder," said Mr. Greenshields. "The magistrate's act a full of holes. It is a disgrace to Canada."

Children Drown at Peoria, Ill.

Peoria, Ill., Sept. 10.—Six children, aged 11 years, and Morris Breed, aged 9 years, were drowned when their boat capsized at the mouth of Farm creek to the Illinois river.

Maryland Holds Primary Election.

Baltimore, Md., Sept. 10.—The regular and Progressive wings of the Democratic party in Maryland battled for control of the party organization in the primary election Monday. In Baltimore the fractions were violent ones. Although they suffered a blow in the defeat of their state's city candidate and of two of their leaders for the state central committee which controls party affairs. Except in two cases, candidates of the regular Republican city organization were counted.

States Save Saving Boys.

Wichita, Kan., Sept. 9.—Mount St. Mary's orphanage burned here and more than a score of persons had narrow escapes. Catholic sisters carried out 12 boys and girls who were asleep when the fire started. The loss was $15,000, partly covered by insurance.

Conductor is Badly Hurt.

Malden Rock Wis., Sept. 9.—Six cars of an extra southbound freight train were derailed between Stockholm and Pepin. Conductor Lacey was badly crushed and may die.

John V. Lesher, the new congressman from Sunbury, Pa., is a lawyer and a farmer. In politics he is a Democrat.

UNITED STATES AND MEXICO MAY CONFER AGAIN.

Nelson O'Shaughnessy Advises Lind to Return Pre-Third Way to Mexico City.

Mexico City, Sept. 11.—The probability that negotiations between the United States and Mexico will be resumed at an early date is the opinion expressed at the American embassy, although Nelson O'Shaughnessy, charge d'affairs, is noncommittal as to what steps have been advised of a new proposal, or officially, of Washington's determination to make a further effort to settle matters.

It is significant, however, that he has advised John Lind, at Vera Cruz, to return as far as Orizaba, about one-third of the distance, Mr. Lind, seemingly not wishing to come to the capital until the preliminaries had reached a stage where he felt assured his services could be utilized. Whether Mr. Lind will act on this recommendation is not known.

The Mexican minister of foreign affairs, Pedro Lascurain, still denies knowledge of the reported official character of Senor de Bonnecorso who is to Washington. He pleaded ignorance of the American government's intention to make further overtures although he expressed the belief that the action on the part of the United States was not unlikely, as Mexico was without a minister to her second note.

Mexico, he said, was willing, as always, to take under consideration any proposition which might be forthcoming.

CANAL IS ABOUT COMPLETED

DRY EXCAVATION IS FINISHED IN PANAMA.

Believed Ditch Will Be Ready for Shipping by December of This Year.

Washington, Sept. 9.—Completion of dry excavation on the Panama canal, just 19 days ahead of schedule time, has advanced the work on the great waterway almost to the final stage. Much digging and cleaning out remains to be done to Culebra Cut and along its route, but this will be accomplished by mammoth dredges floating on the surface of the canal.

An army of men will be busy during the next four weeks removing steam shovels and other equipment and material, including 32 miles of railroad track from the sides of the channel in Culebra Cut between Gamboa and Pedro Miguel locks. This is preparatory to turning water in the channel from Gatun lake, on the Atlantic side, to the Pacific, five days in advance of the date set for dynamiting Gamboa dike. The water will be introduced through four 26-inch pipes extending underneath the dike, and although the five-day period hardly will suffice to fill the channel to sea-level the first time, enough will be let in to act as a cushion against the explosion when the dike is destroyed.

The destruction of Gamboa dike will leave only one such obstruction along the canal route, the dike over which the railroad crosses the Gatun locks and which can be removed at any time. The last barrier on the Pacific side, the Miraflores dike, was dynamited just a week ago, turning Pacific tidewater into a channel 5,000 feet long, 500 feet wide and 41 feet deep.

Dredges are now completing the channel, and on the Atlantic side a big suction dredge is cleaned on Gatun lake up to a point near Gamboa dike ten days ago.

Small vessels probably will be able to pass through the canal from end to end by Oct. 10, and the waterway should be ready for shipping proper by December.

The maximum temperature reported in Kansas was 88.

Cigars for Smuggling Pearls.

Washington, Sept. 10.—Declaring that pearls could be smuggled into this country by putting them in cigars, Senator Smoot of Utah displayed before the senate tax of these jewels, valued at $76,680, or nearly 8,000 gulden. The senator exhibited the pearls in connection with his plea for a lower tariff rate on the stones. The Democratic members, however, were obdurate and voted to keep the rate at 20 per cent. The sight of the pearls caused a commotion in the galleries and his colleagues became interested.

U. S. REGULATION OF ALL RAILROADS

THIS THE LIKELY RESULT OF THE NEW HAVEN WRECK INVESTIGATION.

SAFEGUARDS WILL RESULT

Recommendations Include an Efficient Signal System, Steel Cars and Determination of the Speed of Company's Trains.

Washington, Sept. 10.—Federal regulation of the physical operation of railroads will be advocated by the interstate commerce commission as a result of the investigation just concluded into the latest disastrous wreck on the New Haven railroad.

Thus another forward step in government control of the railroads transportation may be expected to the near future, for from what was said by members of the two interstate commerce committees of congress there exists a purpose on the part of the lawmakers to stop the waste of life consequent upon the present inefficient methods pursued in train rushing on steam railroads.

The Closing Safeguards.

The means essential to the provision of greater safety for the traveling public as the interstate commerce commission will point out will include the adoption of the most efficient type of automatic signal system, the introduction of washington of steel for wooden cars, the speed of trains, either when on or behind time, and other details of management.

The report of the commission will emphasize the evils of the reckless rounding of trains, particularly in the running up of lost time, either in fair weather or foul.

Secret to Report.

Commissioner McCord, who made the New Haven investigation and who will write the report, has had special charge of the investigation of rail accidents. He originated the slogan, "Safety first," when he became a member of the commission, and, assisted by his colleagues, has accomplished a great deal in the way of reducing the possibility of accidents, this in spite of the narrow powers of the commission.

Bad System Revealed.

New Haven, Conn., Sept. 9.—Associate Commissioner of Arbitration Eaton with defects of physical equipment, and executive supervision of both, were the causes which the interstate commerce commission, working in connection with the coroner's jury in the New Haven wreck at Bar Harbor express and the White Mountain express, which cost 21 lives.

Voting on Tariff Bill.

Washington, Sept. 10.—The senate by a party vote of democratic tariff bill this evening. This agreement was reached late last night at midnight. The senate was in session most of last night, getting rid of a multitude of committee amendments, and when adjournment was taken it was agreed that the vote on the bill should come. Democratic-lines stood solidly against the final onslaught of the fight against the anti-free wool and anti-free sugar forces and defeated all amendments as fast as they came to the vote.

Washington, D. C., Sept. 11.—The senate passed the tariff bill by a vote of 44 to 37. The Democrats, Thornton and Ransdell of Louisiana voted against the bill and two Republicans, La Follette of Wisconsin and Poindexter of Washington voted for it.

The bill goes to the conference committee, unless the house of representatives shall in the unexpected and unprecedented case refuse to agree to the senate changes without a conference, just as the Senate Democrats desire it to be.

May Go Through.

It is the opinion among the Democratic leaders that the bill will go through the conference and be agreed upon finally and signed by President Wilson within a week. That is the Democratic idea of the situation and the prospects.

The Democrats had the votes to pass it through and with the exception of Senators Gronna and McCumber of North Dakota, who made general speeches attacking the agricultural section of the bill, Senator Nelson making a like speech and agreed in opposition to the general terms of the measure, and Senator Clapp one speech mainly directed to an attack upon the manner in which the bill was framed, and Senator Works against certain specific provisions of the bill by the term of the South Dakota Republican senators, the representatives of the agricultural states of the North, went to the senate as well as the city to say about the measure during its passage.

Wilson Is Well Pleased.

President Wilson last night expressed gratification over the end of the long struggle in the senate. Senator Simmons, chairman of the democratic caucus, who has piloted the bill through the finance committee, the Democratic caucus and the senate predicted that its passage would bring immediate stimulus to the business of the country.

As it passed the senate the tariff bill represents an average reduction of more than four per cent from the rates of the original bill that passed the house and nearly 28 per cent from the rates of the existing law. In many important particulars the senate has changed the bill that passed the house and the conference committee upon its two houses, will begin work Wednesday or Thursday. Both houses of congresses. Leaders of both houses predict that the conference will consume less than two weeks' time.

Endeavor to Hasten Congress.

The senate endeavored to hasten the bill on by passing the bill with the house by naming its members of the conference committee. Senator Smith of Arizona, Democrat, and Payne of New York, Republican.

Each house will have an equal vote to the conference committee, over which Senator Smith will preside and the same number of conference

Protests Against Kidnapping When Authorities Take Him Across Border by Force—New York Officials Are Notified.

Colebrook, N. H., Sept. 11.—Harry Thaw, murderer and fugitive from the asylum for the criminal insane at Matteawan, was arrested here Wednesday after having been deported unexpectedly by the Canadian immigration authorities.

Dragged fighting from the detention office at Cootlcock, Quebec, Thaw was deported on American soil in Vermont, where, dazed by the suddenness of the action and without the counsel of his attorneys, he wandered aimlessly about in an automobile hired by newspaper reporters, crossed the border into this state and was arrested by Sheriff Drew of Coos county.

No Warrant For Arrest.

The sheriff had no warrant, but in holding Thaw as a "fugitive from justice" on telegraphic request from New York state.

That there will be further litigation before Thaw is returned to Matteawan goes without saying, but the course which will be pursued has not yet been decided. Thaw's attorneys will come to Colebrook as soon as possible, as will the New York state lawyers in the case.

Thaw made no resistance when arrested and was brought immediately to Colebrook.

In his wanderings he was accompanied only by newspapermen. He did not know where he was.

Wanders Aimlessly.

Leaving Cootlcock with his stepson for a few minutes at Averill, Vt., and leaving Jerome behind at the Canada, re-entered Vermont at Canaan. The crossed the Connecticut river at Stewartstown, but the customs men detain him.

Thaw was planning when arrested to strike a railroad and buy a through ticket to Detroit.

He tried vainly to get in connection with his lawyers at Montreal. Failing in this he returned his blind journey until detected by the sheriff. The sheriff had no warrant, but held him as a fugitive from justice.

Thaw, in an automobile with newspaper correspondents, was driving down the road and had reached a little village when a posse in an automobile containing the sheriff appeared. The sheriff, recognizing Thaw, held up his hand for the car to stop. Thaw ordered the chauffeur, a newspaperman, to bring the car to a standstill and then alighted and went into the sheriff's automobile. Instead, although the officer had no warrant for his arrest.

Retains Legal Aid.

Thaw and the newspaper correspondents then returned to Colebrook. Thaw was not locked up in jail, but remained in the office of Thomas Johnson, a local attorney, whom he retained as his legal advisor upon his arrival here.

Later in the day Thaw will be taken to Lancaster, the county seat, which is confined in the county jail.

The BATTLE of CHICKAMAUGA

AN UNPARALLELED SLAUGHTER OF AMERICANS

BY

J. G. RICE

FATE seems to have decreed that, in 1863, two great battles were to be fought on the American continent, one in the East and the other in the southeast.

Whether or not Fate decreed this chance, accident and necessity, three elements that are present in all great military operations, combined to produce the conflicts at Gettysburg and Chickamauga.

It is a part of the military history of the United States that neither Meade nor Lee intended that the battle that was to decide the issues between the opposing forces of the Union and the Confederacy in the east would be fought at Gettysburg; but chance and accident, otherwise Fate, decreed that it should be decided there, and Gettysburg is a glorious heritage to which all Americans are common heirs.

Seventy-five days after the flames of Gettysburg, two great armies of Americans threw themselves against each other like thunderbolts of death on the banks of Chickamauga creek, in the northwest corner of the state of Georgia, ten miles south of the city of Chattanooga, Tenn., and the battlefield of Chickamauga is a mournful but glorious testimonial to American valor for all time to come.

Like the conflict of Gettysburg, the slaughter of Chickamauga was due largely, if not wholly, to chance and accident. When General Rosecrans nor General Bragg, commanding the Union and Confederate forces, respectively, understood or expected that a battle would be fought on that wooded plain.

After the Tullahoma campaign of the Union army in middle Tennessee, which ended July 4, 1863, General Bragg moved the army of Tennessee to Chattanooga. General Rosecrans, about the first of August, began moving the army of the Cumberland to the western slopes of the Cumberland mountains with the intention of throwing his forces across the Lookout range into the Chattanooga territory.

General Rosecrans had established headquarters at Winchester, Tenn., for the purpose of directing these military movements against Chattanooga. His left corps, under Crittenden, was at McMinnville, about fifty miles south of Winchester, and his center, General Thomas' corps, the veteran force of the Cumberland. The center of his line was at Decherd, under Gen. George H. Thomas, who was destined to glorify his name at Snodgrass Hill. McCook, commanding the 20th corps, was at Winchester with Rosecrans. Minty's cavalry was to the left of Crittenden. R. M. McCook's division of Mitchell's cavalry corps was on the right of the 20th corps. General Sheridan's division early in the month of August was advanced to Bridgeport and Stevenson, Ala., on the Tennessee river.

Thomas and McCook were sent through the mountains many miles south of Chattanooga, striking the valley about forty miles south of that city. Crittenden was dispatched to the vicinity of Chattanooga, the purpose being to engage the attention of Bragg until Thomas and McCook could cross the mountains and place their corps between Chattanooga and the Confederate base of supplies to the south.

General Bragg, however, was not to be caught in such a trap. On the night of September 7 and morning of September 8 he quietly evacuated Chattanooga, marching south to intercept Thomas and McCook, as they came down from the mountains into the valley south of Chickamauga. The Confederate plan of campaign in clearly revealed in this movement. General Bragg saw an opportunity to engage the Union corps in detail and destroy them. Longstreet was coming over from Ringgold, Ga., with heavy reinforcements, having just reached that point from Gettysburg. It was the golden opportunity for the Confederates, but slipped through Bragg's hands by failure on the part of corps commanders to carry out his orders.

General Crittenden discovered that Bragg had evacuated Chattanooga on the morning of September 9, and immediately occupied the city. Through the most unreliable information, General Rosecrans believed that Bragg was in full retreat on Rome, Ga. Acting upon this information he ordered Crittenden and McCook to pursue mountains Crittenden's corps, with the exception of a garrison force, was sent over Bragg. They found him at Lee & Gordon's mill, on Chickamauga creek, preparing for battle, with the forces of Thomas and McCook.

There was no lingering doubt that a great battle was to be fought on the banks of the Chickamauga on the morrow. On September 18, which was Friday, General Braxton Bragg, realizing that his plan to engage his antagonists in detail had miscarried, ordered a movement of his army down the Chickamauga to effect crossings at a number of bridges and fords. Late on the evening of the 18th a sharp engagement occurred at Alexander's bridge.

The battlefield of Chickamauga was a densely wooded plain with an occasional elevation from which the thunderbolts of war could be hurled from heavy artillery.

The visitor today to the field of Chickamauga is wheeled along the Lafayette road, an old highway, now well improved by the government, that did service before the war for the country four miles south of Chattanooga. This road was the "dead line" in the battle of Chickamauga. If its dust, its rocks and its trees could be animated and endowed with the power of speech, the story they could tell would turn into sickly romances the best pages of heroic history. The struggle for possession of this one historic highway was so long heroic and deadly then the numerous assaults and repulses at Snodgrass Hill. The flame of battle swept the forest on each side of the road with a fury that no pen can describe.

Practically all of the first day of the battle of Chickamauga was a contest for the possession of Lafayette road. The sun went down and darkness ended the fighting, leaving the battle still undecided, for neither army had accomplished its purpose. Both armies had been driving west all day in an effort to break the Union lines and Lafayette road became the "bloody lane" of Chickamauga.

The blood of the two armies still flowed when night threw its mantle over the field. Neither had been victorious. No more indescribably oppressive spectacle can well be imagined than night brought to the two armies. They were so close together that the groans of the wounded and dying of both armies could be plainly heard. The cold was severe with the unburied dead.

By the close of the first day's fighting the Confederates had become the aggressors. Their purpose was plainly apparent, to break across Lafayette road and pierce the Union lines, cutting the army in two sections, hopelessly dividing it, and annihilating each section in detail.

Not until church bells in Chattanooga were calling the people to divine worship did the roar of battle again resounded throughout the plain. But it came with a more deadly roar than that which had swept through the forest on Saturday. The Union forces were steadily driven back from Lafayette road, but doggedly held their position in Dyer and Kelley fields against every assault, inflicting heavy damage on the Confederate columns. Through a bushling of field orders, the Kelley field line of the Union forces was weakened, and Longstreet drove three divisions against the weakened point. It was the opportunity that had been the hope of the Confederates all day. The Confederate and McCook were caught in the break, separated from Thomas' corps and retired to Chattanooga.

It is not surprising that the break in the lines and departure of Rosecrans for Chattanooga disheartened the Union forces and inspirited the Confederates. However, the Confederates had a great commander to contend with in the person of Geo. George H. Thomas, now the "Rock of Chickamauga." As the roar of battle swept through Kelley field, it seemed that the Union forces were crushed. Snodgrass Hill rises some three hundred feet high immediately west of Kelley field. Its eastern side is precipitous and in some places rocky.

General Thomas rallied his men on Snodgrass Hill, and here occurred the heaviest fighting of the entire engagement.

The best regiments of the southern armies were sent against Thomas at Snodgrass Hill, to be shot to pieces on the very breastworks of the Union line. Confederate regiment left as high as 70 per cent. of their men in their attempts to dislodge Thomas, while the Union regiments suffered almost as heavily. The shouts of the living mingled with the groans of the dying and wails of the wounded, made Snodgrass Hill a veritable inferno of death.

Not long ago I stood on Snodgrass summit, the crater of Snodgrass Hill. As far as the eye could reach along the crest of the ridge I saw handsome monuments of marble and bronze, tributes of a grateful people to the valor of their sons. But these memorials, emblazoned with the deeds of the living and the dead, carved into them by the chisel of an artist, did not impress me so profoundly as what I saw through the gray mists of fifty years. I allowed my mind to go back, and I saw as heroic a display of human courage as the world ever witnessed. The roar of battle swept through Kelley field. Then there came one of those mysterious and unexpected lulls in the storm, but it was merely gathering force for the climax of a hurricane that had raged in the forest since Chickamauga creek for two days. It was soon to break again, and its lightnings were next to flash around horseshoe summit, where I was standing. From the advancing Confederate legions sweeping all before them across the open plain in my front. Longstreet had driven his brigades through the Union lines and swept the right wing of Rosecrans' army from the field in wild disorder. Wheeling his forces he started for Thomas in command of his left wing. If Thomas could be routed, a victory for Confederate arms was assured that would shake the nation to its foundations. Next I beheld the brave General Brannan rallying the remnants of a half dozen brigades on Snodgrass Hill. General Thomas was marshalling his shattered forces for a resistance that placed his name high in the annals of fame.

Before I could grasp the meaning of the whirlwind of destruction that was sweeping down upon me, I saw Longstreet's Confederates scaling the ridge of the hill with majestic tread. Then I saw a sheet of flame burst from the Union lines on the crest of the hill, full in the faces of the advancing Confederates. No troops could stand in that storm of lead. They halted, dazed and deadened by the awful carnage. Their lines gave way, only to be re-formed at the foot of the ridge for another charge. I saw the flags of Mississippi, Alabama and Georgia, South Carolina and Virginia, and the lone star of Texas flashing defiance at the foe on the summit of the hill. Another charge into the jaws of death and hell were scorched and blackened by flame and smoke. At last, as the sun was sinking behind Lookout Mountain, throwing dark and spectral shadows across the plain upon which one of the greatest tragedies of the world's history was being enacted, General Thomas withdrew his forces under cover of darkness from Hill bearing the bloody field of Chickamauga in possession of the battered but exulting Confederates. Before the siege of Chattanooga followed, with which readers of war history are familiar.

Chickamauga was the bloodiest two-days battle of history. The forces were about equal in numbers. Rosecrans' army at the time of the battle numbered 60,000. The Confederate forces, according to the returns of each army was a little to the rise of 60,000 men, making the number actually engaged something more than 120,000. The casualties were about as follows:

Confederates: Killed, 2,363; wounded, 12,318; missing, 1,999; aggregate, 16,972.

Union: Killed, 1,858; wounded, 9,749; missing, 4,774; aggregate, 16,179.

These fearful figures show that the aggregate slaughter at Chickamauga was 33,150, including dead, wounded and missing in both armies.

"SWEAR," SAID THE BISHOP

Sin of Profanity Forgotten in Threatened Danger That Made Strong Language Necessary.

I remember an anecdote of a bishop of Cork who, voyaging across the channel in one of the sailing boats was much shocked by the oaths of the captain, and from reasoning and argument came to somewhat angry protest.

"Ye see, my lord," said the captain, "unless I swear my mec won't obey me."

"Try them," urged the bishop; "try them."

So the skipper at last agreed to do so; but, unknown to his lordship, he arranged a little comedy with the crew. Very soon it came to how sail.

"Tom," cried the captain, "coil that rope." Tom never moved, but stood chewing his quid.

"Jack, Bill, Harry," said the skipper, "just oblige me by taking in the foresail." Not a man stirred. The wind howled more and more loudly; the vessel plunged heavily through the waves. Then the skipper turned to the pale faced bishop, who was watching the result of the experiment.

"My lord, my lord," said he, in a terrified undertone; "what am I to do? If my men won't obey me, we must all go to the bottom."

"Well," said the bishop, slowly and reluctantly, "under the circumstances [—I think you may—swear—a little."

No sooner said than done: a volley of oaths sent Jack, Bill and Harry aloft, and about as quick as lightning sails were furled, ropes coiled, and a score warnings against the sin of profanity were heard during that voyage, at least.—Syon Halfa "Retrospect of a Long Life."

EUGENIC MATING HIT

Separation Ends Union of First Massachusetts Couple.

Health Certificates Were First Class, But Both Husband and Wife Neglected to Have Their Disposition Passed Upon.

Boston.—While health may be the keynote of the eugenic marriage, there is no provision which insures the contracting parties against discord and dissension, is the deduction of the first eugenic bride of this state, Mrs. Catherin Wills Perron, who is parted from her husband after one month of wedded life.

Edwin Perron, the other principal in the unhappy match, also comes to the front conclusion, and thus, while the physician stamped the contracting parties as physically fit, Dan Cupid did not attend to his part of the contract as well as the medical gentleman.

Two months and a half ago Rev. C. Thurston Chase, pastor of the Central Congregational church of Lynn, issued the ultimatum that from that time on he would not marry couples unless they produced certificates as to their physical fitness and good health generally.

Five weeks later Edwin Perron and Catherine Wills were married at his home after they had satisfied him that they had each passed the physical test.

The marriage was heralded as the first step in the line of eugenics that had taken place in Massachusetts, if not in New England, and followed the agitation of many leading scientists, physicians and clergymen in this direction.

It is said that the groom after the ceremony was very jubilant and spoke freely about his marriage, declaring that both he and his young wife were happy.

He said that his bride preferred the eugenic marriage, as she had a dislike of opinion on the question, and he had consented to her desires that he secured his necessary physician's certificate.

The couple went to live in a cozy flat on School street, in a residential part of the city of Lynn, and they seemed happy.

One Sunday night, shortly before 12 o'clock, Perron rushed into the Lynn police station and informed the officer in charge that he had been assaulted by a strange man whom he had discovered in his wife's bedroom in the room of their home.

It is said that his lip was bleeding and he declared that this was the result of his being struck by the intruder as he thought he owned not while he went back into his home to get his belongings. An officer was sent to the flat with him, but when they arrived it is said that there was no one in the place and that the family cat had sole possession of the room.

When questioned as to what he thought of the working out of a marriage under eugenic principles, Perron declared: "I do not say that eugenic marriages are a failure. It was a failure in my case, but eugenics are not supposed to be a guarantee of domestic happiness."

Mrs. Perron denied the allegations of her husband in every particular and gave an account of her movements on the night that he asserted that he was assaulted, which would appear to take her far away from the scene of the trouble at the time.

"The charge that my husband of a month has brought against me are absolutely untrue," she declared. "On the night he says that he had trouble with a man in our former home I was at my mother's house in whose home I stayed the whole night.

"It was the first night that I had stayed away from the home that we had made after we were married, and the unhappy ending of our short married life must necessarily attract attention to our so-called eugenic marriage.

"While this form of marriage was required by the pastor of my church and I was interested in the matter, I less they could show a certificate of health from a doctor, I an convinced that my husband and I have disbarred the marriage was not truly a eugenic one.

"Now, it is really a case of the same old story. My husband tired of me the minute he thought he owned me and I felt he had no real love for me very soon after we went to our flat to live.

"Before we were married he sent me a letter telling me that I was the only girl for him, that he loved me better than he did any other girl on earth and that he wanted to marry me as soon as possible.

"While I had kept company with him only a few weeks, I thought he was sincere and so consented to be married."

LORD COMOYS AND U. S. BRIDE

Former Mildred Sherman and Her English Husband in Their British Home.

London.—Typical old English scenes were witnessed at the little village of Stoner, near Henley-on-Thames, when Lord Comoys took his American bride for the first time since their marriage, nearly two years ago, to his ancestral home at Stoner Park. The villagers cheered to the echo when they saw the coming of their lord and his lady and the three wagonettes full of the titled pair. Lady Comoys was the former Mildred Sherman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. Watts Sherman, well known in New York and Newport society, and was married at the wedding of Miss Gould and Lord Decies. Lord Comoys, who met and won the wedding, was charmed by the beautiful bridesmaid, and the romance started then culminated later in their mar-

RARE PAPERS FOR 4 CENTS

Autograph Letter of Peter the Great Found in Second-Hand Shop at St. Petersburg.

St. Petersburg.—The story of how the second-hand shops of dealers were sold for old paper has come to light. The documents in question were the letters of the Czar Peter the Great and they were found by a lover of autographs in a shop, where they were being used as old paper.

Peter the Great had a long correspondence with Count Tatischeff, the president of the government mines in the Ural mountains, over the question of the disposal of the riches contained in the mines. These letters of the Czar were bequeathed by the owner to the official museum of the mines in Ekaterinburg. The present management of the mines recently discovered the idea of selling all the old cards, but they did not feel called upon to satisfy themselves as to the contents and purport of the documents unearthed. The deeds were all lumped together and three weeks ago were put up at auction. The whole of the supposed "waste paper," which was really worth scores of thousands of pounds, went for four cents.

The buyer was the proprietor of a large number of provision shops, including some sausage shops. One of the professors who was an antiquarian noticed that the girl behind the counter in one of these shops was wrapping up his sausage in a peculiar sort of paper with a queer cut in it. He looked at it more closely and soon saw that he held in his hands a most important document. Some of the Czar Petar. He went at once to the sausage dealer to find out how this extraordinary literature came into his hands.

ANY MAN IN LOVE MAY LIE

Supreme Court Justice Says He Is Justified in Falsifying to Win One Woman.

New York.—When a man is in love he cannot be deemed responsible for anything he says to win the one woman in the world—the woman he adores.

So the learned Supreme Court Justice Guy ruled here. To quote the ruling:

"It is also a well-known principle that to the affections of a woman nothing accompanying courtship, statements made as to mental, moral or financial qualifications of the suitor cannot be too closely scrutinized, nor they be held to a strict accountability therefor."

Philip Cranck fell in love, courted the fair Hilda. In a state of mental exaltation he told her, his vows, that he was a chauffeur, earning $40 a week; that he had $3,000 in bank.

The fearful HOAX married a title.

PAY TRIBUTE TO BEBEL'S LIFE

Twenty Thousand Socialists Attend Funeral of German Leader in Switzerland.

Zurich Switzerland.—August Bebel, the German socialist leader, was given an impressive funeral here. Twenty thousand Socialists followed the body from the city hall, where it had lain in state, to the cemetery, where it was cremated.

The streets through which the procession passed were draped in mourning. A majority of the Socialist members of the German reichstag and representatives of the Socialist party from most of the nations of the world attended the funeral. Morris Hillquit of New York represented the United States.

There was a long series of addresses before the body was incinerated, hand-bearers of the socialist party introduced Isio the United States by

MEETS CHILD HE HAD PART SEEN

Daughter Born After He Had Separated From Wife Twenty-Three Years Ago.

Kansas City, Mo.—A young woman in the lobby of the Kansas City hotel, C. Hume, office, No. 547 State avenue, Kansas side, glancing before the mirror at her self, saw the face behind her.

She addressed Mr. Hume bashfully.

"I want to speak to Mr. Hume," she said.

"You're speaking to him," he told her.

"Mr. Joe Hume?" she asked with an air of uncertainty.

"I am," he answered.

Then she hesitated a minute, seemingly at a loss for something to say.

"Do you know who I am?" she finally asked.

"No, you're Helen. Sit down and let's talk."

Thus a father and daughter met who had never seen each other. Mr. Hume recognized the resemblance to her mother.

"Those large, blue eyes were her mother's too," he said. "I would have known her by them, even if I had not in every other way she looks just like her mother when I married her."

Mr. Hume, now forty-three years old, separated from his wife almost twenty-three years ago, and has remained singlehearted since. A girl was born a few months after the separation. By reports Mr. Hume kept himself informed of her progress as she grew to young womanhood, but because he feared she would resent any advances by him coldly he never tried to visit her.

Last week she was visiting friends in this city. She decided to call on her father at any cost. Her friend told her father would greet her coldly, she knew, made bets at the most difficult of her life.

But each one's dread of the other's unwelcome was dispelled in the first wave of meeting. They spent the day together. When they parted they agreed to be a real father and daughter hereafter.

Miss Helen Hume is now twenty-three years old. She is teaching school in Joplin, Mo., her present home. At the end of the next term she will come to Kansas City to make her home. And her father plans to make the coming years of his life the happiest he has ever known.

SHOULD BE CHANGED.

The opinion of a Duluth Judge, expressed recently, that the provision of the gross earnings tax law exempting railroads from assessments for all public improvements is surely supported by all reason if not by the official action of those members on the legislature who fear the wrath of the railroads.

The opinion carries from one whose official position indicates that he is a man too broad to sympathize with the ideas of those who consider any means of "cracking the railroads" as justifiable is valuable. He modestly admits to the "rank discrimination" in favor of railroads as unfair.

The method of taxing railroads by transferring them to pay into the public treasury a percentage of their gross earnings in lieu of the payment of taxes on the assessed valuation of their properties may be defended, but to exempt them from assessment for such improvements, such as the construction of suitable sidewalks, cannot be operated in reason.

All other property owners pay taxes for the support of government and in addition are assessed for the construction of sidewalks, sewers, etc.

The gross earnings tax should exempt railroads from the payment of other taxes, but it should not exempt them from the payment of assessments. If the railroads refuse to pay assessments would make the gross earnings tax rate so high as to be prohibitive the tax rate should be reduced.

There is no more illogical proposition to tax taxes than that providing for the making of funds in the determination of the amount of money that railroads shall pay into the public treasury. The law should be changed.

Some people seem to think New York has two governors, but it is possible she hasn't half of one.

THE COUNTY FAIR.

The Red Lake County fair is a county fair in fact as well as in name. Since the organization of the Red Lake County Agricultural society the company has spent on behalf of the county fair's real exhibition of the resources of the county. It has been the purpose to make the fair valuable as an encouragement of better farming methods and the breeding of better live stock.

The fair is given at this season because the work on the farms is well along and the farmers may come to the fair with their families and bring for exhibition the season's best products fully matured.

While generous programs for the entertainment of fair crowds have been provided, the features of the fair that make of it a real exhibition are not to be slighted. For that reason especially the fair is entitled to the support of all of the people of the county.

Nobody will have to miss the first rest of the "movies" now, for dressmakers have designed a gown with only two hooks.

A newspaper heading reads "Joker in the Tariff Bill." It is certainly a remarkable document if there is not more than one little joker in it.

The number of wrecks might be reduced if passengers were trained in a system of signals, or the train operators might be required to telephone to the constable of each town through which they pass.

Six girls employed by a Paris dressmaker have the reputation of having grown in twenty-six minutes, which is not much of a reputation considering the fashions in gowns to which Paris is said to be responsible.

Mayor Lemieux is considering the preparation of a document which will make it permissible to wear straw hats until after the county fair and the wanton destruction of such headgear as offense punishable by a jail sentence.

Commenting on the fact that the German emperor has brought a detailer and is urging his subjects to follow his example, the Barnesville Transcript says, this is where we Germans won't stick together, side by each."

That the judges of agricultural exhibits at the state fair were much perplexed last fall over the Minnesota potato exhibits should score so heavily as to make the state appear unbalanced agriculturally, is a recognition of the resources of northern Minnesota which is not unappreciated up here.

CO-ADJUTORS' REMARKS.

Crosby Crucible: The estimated value of this year's farm crops in Minnesota is $311,100,000. It is only one of a series of never-failing stories, and there are some of our people foolish enough to go hiking off to Canada and other far-away places.

Interlake Tribune: A boy graduate of a manual training school can take an old set-under that has been discarded by a miser as no good, and with $25 for repairs, put the house in condition to go and bring grain just as well as it ever did. We believe that too much farm machinery is thrown away, and that the average farmer would do a big task in finances to be worn to look closer after how keeping it in repair. One good way to do this is to send a boy to school where a good course in manual training is given.

Albert Lea Standard: It is now the unanimous decision of the editorial corps in the state that only two kinds of roads should be built—concrete and gravel, and that the former is the only permanent kind, requiring the least repairs, and in the end being the most economical. It is costly, but it will endure forever.

Albert Lea Tribune: And now they tell us that the increased cost of land in the real cause of the increased cost of living. Next!

Litchfield Independent: Promises were made years ago that in the near future the seven earnings taxes of the railroads would be done away and direct taxes would be abolished. The gross earnings taxes have increased even more than was predicted, but direct taxes have also kept pace with the increase and in fact far outstripped it, and the direct taxes levied for state purposes are higher than ever.

Twin Valley Times: Although some Otter Tail county newspapers have been boosting Senator Ole Bergeg for Congress next year, the man behind the plow does not seem to take kindly to the suggestion. He claims "the suggestion may have originated with some people who would like to see my seat in the Senate vacated."

WHY CORN MATURES IN NORTHERN MINN.

DEAN WOODS EXPLAINS REASON WHY RESULTS ARE ACCOMPLISHED.

EXCESS OF SUNSHINE MORE THAN OFFSETS SHORTER GROWING SEASON.

"The shortest growing season in the northern part of this state is 116 days and anything can mature in that time," said Dean A. F. Wood of the state college of agriculture at St. Anthony park recently, home from northern Minnesota. "I have just returned from Bolbeau county fair. I saw Minnesota corn that would be ripe enough for seed. I saw corn stalks fourteen feet high. I believe these readings can be grown per acre up in the northern part of this state than anywhere else. I saw red clover seeded this year grown to 4 feet and red clover seeded last year all this.

Dean Woods said that the people up in the farther north one pass the more unfavorable conditions are for agriculture is a fallacy.

"People who believe that the short growing season in a handicap in the North are surprised when they see how rapidly vegetables grow," he said. "There is an explanation. There is fully one-tenth more light each day during the growing season in this part of the country than there is further south. The hours of sunshine are equivalent to 100 days to the south because of the excess daily sunshine.

The southern part of the state is frost protected by lakes. There are lakes everywhere and they temper the wind and keep off frost until late in the fall. There is another point. Moisture is more evenly divided, and the same amount of rainfall is much more beneficial than a heavy one to the south. All of these things combined serve to promote rapid growth and a proportionate astonishing results in what is really a short growing season."

This is the point that northern Minnesota people have always made as the explanation for marvelous results in crop production and the support of the eminent authority rests in on that point is gratifying.

Dean Woods is not the only doubters they should visit the Red Lake county fair next week and see the corn show.

Game is not so plentiful as many people had supposed before the opening of the season. The Little Rifles—Big in Quality

YOU are going to buy a .22 caliber rifle, either a shot or repeater—you'll find that many well known crack shots started with a Remington-UMC .22. Their advice now would be "By all means, get a Remington-UMC" because they know that there is a tendency in some quarters to look upon these models as only "a small boy's rifle" and to cheapen them so that they can be sold at a price.

You have just as much right to expect full shooting value in your .22 caliber arm as in your $75 big game rifle.

You want the Remington-UMC rifle's slot at from $3 to $6. .22, .25-10 or .32 calibre, made by the same people who make the famous Remington-UMC Autoloading Rifles.

Or, if you prefer the repeater rifle, the Remington-UMC slide action .22 repeating rifle (rear sight, closed and open) is a winner, shooting .22 short, long or .22 long rifle cartridges, at 10 and 20 yd. in your room. The Webster ditching crew is expecting next the school broke the water pipe when they passed over but immediately made the necessary repairs. The pipe broke again on Wednesday and Thursday thus forcing the two schools to close for three days out of the week but it is thought that the pipe is mended now so as to cause no further trouble.—Thief River Falls Times.

DOES IT SIGNIFY END OF PARTY?

bors of the ambitions of Theodore Roosevelt it "will," and, fellows, "will" has told more than one promising political movement on the shelf. All you have to do is to run back over the fifty years or so and look over the Minnesota end count the wrecks. The ambitions of a few were tied up in their future and that future was brief. So the Progressive party will go if that "better than thou" policy is continued. But, after all is said and done, these abortive movements are not without their value. The Progressive party, even if it has to go, can truthfully say it has done some good. To say the least it has purified the political atmosphere, and that is something.

W. E. Lee's threatened entrance into the gubernatorial arena last year is receiving no little attention in state capitol circles and the gossips are busy with conjectures as to the possible outcome. I am not at all certain but what the threatened entrance into the game is bothering Governor Eberhart quite a bit, though naturally he does not show it. A "Billy" suggestion that the field be cleared in his behalf by not getting into the race would leave the governor's official family sit pat and take notice, but they would not stand by and allow such a condition to hardly possible. Past experience is against any such proposition. Sitting as a jury on Mr. Lee's prospects stain capitol kingmakers are not inclined to put the Long Prairie man on the same pedestal of strength that he occupied a year ago. They hold that he has grown weaker, while Governor Eberhart has improved in his relations with the people. However, it is a long cry to the next primary. Perhaps it might be best to wait and let the voters do some judging.

While on this subject of gubernatorial possibilities said persons with designs on Governor Eberhart's job it might not be out of the way to say that the organization may have to reckon with Senator Elwell of Minnesota. He has the bug and it developed into a good sized hope last week when a commercial club in the Mill City endorsed him. Naturally he explained that it was an unsolicited honor, but if the people insisted, why, of course, he could not refuse. That the administration will be delighted to have Senator Elwell under the bats goes without saying. As to getting away with the job, that is a horse of another color. Senator Elwell's chief asset is his road law, but for his benefit I would whisper that perhaps it might prove more of a liability than an asset in some localities as far as its vote getting qualities are concerned.

Every man regards himself as a progressive these days, but a perusal of the house and senate journals of Minnesota's early statehood days might convince some that we of this day and date have no monopoly of this particular virtue. Perhaps you do not know it, but there has always existed a form of infinitive and reference in Minnesota; that at some time Minnesota contributed thousands of dollars for the encouragement of immigration; that there were laws as stringent laws for the regulation of liquor than as now, and that retrenchment was the order at more than one session. The one thing then was that cures for ills were not sugar coated. We use the hypodermic now.

Purity Sunday is the latest movement to receive official endorsement. Sunday, Nov. 9, has been selected and Governor Eberhart has just issued a proclamation requesting its observance. On that day pulpits are to be devoted to appeals for a general cleansing of the body civic and politic. His excellency, in issuing his mandate, refused to call it a proclamation. Confirmation was his word.

Whether it is a case of trying to find out public sentiment on the question or that the data has really been decided upon is not known, but the Twin City publications continue to boom October as the month when Governor Eberhart will call the legislature in special session for the consideration of statewide control of public utilities. As for his excellency he refuses absolutely to say when he will issue the call. Last week the executive began a tour of the county fairs of the state, with his public utility idea as the chief feature of his addresses, and the reports are to the effect that he was well received. The initial talk was at St. Charles. He is still engaged in making the tour.

The seven senators act and other ministers calculated to reduce representation in the two bodies of the legislature are bitterly assailed by the big cities, still it is of record that in the early days of statehood such was advocated as a boon to a leader than Governor Sibley. In a message to the legislature in 1859 he advocated the reduction of the membership of the senate from thirty-seven to twenty-five and of the house from eighty to fifty. Regular sessions of the legislature, he advised, be confined to sixty days and special sessions to thirty days. And he came near getting away with it, too.

The abolishment of capitol punishment, which was done two years ago, was attacked at the first legislative session held in the state. It was at a time when extraordinary public expenditures was the order of the day and the bill, being sent to the judiciary committee to be passed upon so to its constitutionality, the committee reported that "The bill, if passed, will be legal, but in view of the present entertainment of it is advised we believe that it would be cheaper to keep prisoners convicted of capital crime than to feed them at the public expense." The bill did not pass.

In the opinion of the state tax commission dogs are worth more than sheep or hogs for assessment purposes and it accordingly fixed the value of each at $2.82. Sheep were listed at $1.50 each and hogs at $2.26. Last week the board completed its assessment of personal property in the state and the result is a total assessed valuation of $227,923,882.

Representative L. C. Spooner of Crookston, it is said, will make his residence at Minneapolis in the near future. The intimation is that he has made his last try for a legislative job.

Another legislator who will be among the missing when the two lawmaking bodies meet two years hence will be Representative Frank Ingstad, Pennington county. He, too, has moved to the Twin Cities.

The state fair did not realize very heartily the year because of bad weather, but it is now pure on for an appeal to the legislature. A new agricultural display building is wanted.

THE COUNTY CHAIRMAN.

Woman's Place.

At a meeting of a woman suffrage association in Kansas City, Kan., it was suggested that the members talk to their servants and other women workers with a view to forming an estimate as to the strength of suffrage sentiment in those particular circles. One member who has employed the same woman as cook for the last six years reported that she put the question to this worthy lady:

"Are you in favor of votes for women?"

"I don't pay any attention to politics," the washerwoman replied. "I leave all that to my husband."

"Well, how does you husband stand on woman suffrage?"

"He believes in women staying home and minding their own business." +

"And what does you husband do, Mary?"

"He ain't doing anything right now, unless he found something this morning."—National Monthly.

A Fair Opening.

The quotation is from a Connecticut woman's diary, dated 1790: "We had roast pork for dinner and Doctor B., who carved, held up a rib on his knife and said, 'Here ladies, is what Mother Eve was made of.'"

"Yes," said Sister Patty, 'and it's from very much the same kind of critter'."—Christian Register.

SYNOPSIS.

George Anderson and wife are a respectable, hard-working man and wife of Chermont, both around forty-five, living in a small house in the suburbs of Chermont-on-the-Sound, a fashionable summer resort on the Connecticut coast, where it is found that the beautiful Miss Edith Challoner has fallen dead, apparently from heart disease. Mrs. Anderson, who has been employed by Miss Challoner for many years, is suspected by Coroner Hyde of having murdered her employer, especially after the discovery of the dead body of Miss Challoner stabbed herself. A paper addressed to her by Miss Challoner, but delivered to her by mistake, is found. The paper tells of a batch of letters found in the daughter's desk, dated May 20, 1907, which have swept one which shows that Miss Challoner's father, Edward Challoner, was killed by Orlando Jones. Another paper given with Sweetwater to identify as Jones, who is in reality a man of the name of Orlando Jones, who is in reality a man of the name of Orlando Jones, who is in reality a man of the name of Orlando

Olson and two of his threshers came to Bird Island and were to solicit until midnight when they went to the stating and entered a bee car, intending to remain there until the arrival of the morning passenger, upon which they intended to return home. At 3:30 o stranger appeared at the door of the car and pointing a revolver at them, ordered them to give up their money. Olson's companions had complied with the demand, and Olson was also to the act of turning over what cash he had when the stranger opened fire, shooting Olson twice through the body.

The murderer ran west toward Olivia and the marshal of that place was notified and arrested a suspect who was trying to get on the blind baggage of the morning passenger train. The suspect is about 35 years of age and is roughly dressed and appears to be a tramp. He denies all responsibility for the shooting, but readily confessed that he had taken the robbed o blacksmith st Renville earlier in the evening. The officials believe they have the murderer and the suspect's readiness to admit the lesser crime while denying the greater strengthens them in their opinion.

The two farm hands who were with Olson were taken to Olivia to confront the suspect and in a general way identified him. Olson was about 35 years of age and had lived in the vicinity of Hector many years. The coroner is here to hold an inquest.

PIONEER GRAIN MAN IS DEAD

James Marshall, Former President of Minneapolis Chamber of Commerce, and Was Veteran of Indian War.

Minneapolis.—James Marshall, former president of the Minneapolis Chamber of Commerce and survivor of the battle of Acton in the Minnesota Indian uprising of 1862, who came into the territory of Minnesota in 1855 in an escort and was identified through an active lifetime with the development of the grain trade of the northwest, died at 2 a. m. Monday after an illness of four months at his home at Deephaven. He passed his seventy-eighth birthday March 4.

The news that "Jim" Marshall was dead cost a gloom over the Chamber of Commerce, where for many years he had been a conspicuous figure. The directors decided to close the Wednesday session at noon so that members could attend the funeral. Of the exchange floor little was said when Mr. Marshall, aside from his prominence as a member and officer of the chamber, said because his head was covered the entire period of the rise of a wilderness to a great and prosperous commonwealth, was known the state over among pioneers.

It was as the father of the grain trade that he was more widely known commercially, for he was best identified with the grain business in days when there were no railroads, and no places of exchange, and when the farmers brought their grain many miles in ox carts to the Mississippi river bank for transportation to market on the steamers of early days.

The funeral services were conducted at the Deephaven home at 1 p. m. Wednesday.

ORGANIZE TO FIGHT CHOLERA

Select Committee in Olmsted County to Lead Campaign Against Disease.

Rochester.—Olmsted county farmers have banded together to take radical steps to stop the further spread of hog cholera in this county. At a meeting in this city a committee consisting of Frank Dumke, William McCoy and William Haling was named to lead in the campaign against the epidemic and through their efforts will be made to secure as much serum for vaccination purposes as possible. It is estimated that the loss already to farmers in the county will amount to thousands of dollars, several farmers reporting the loss of from fifty to two hundred head of hogs. The situation is considered critical and all steps possible will be taken to check further spread.

Marshall.—Hog cholera seems to be general and many hogs are dying every day. It is estimated that much of the corn will yield from 60 to 75 bushels to the acre and many of the farmers had a nice bunch of sheets ready to feed. Hundreds of Nebraska, Kansas, Missouri and Iowa farmers have visited this section and many have either purchased or rented farms.

Hector.—An epidemic of hog cholera has broken out in this section. Fifteen or twenty herds are affected. O. M. Kiser of the association whose ads held meetings in the different districts and has been inoculating all herds where there was any indications of sickness. The serum treatment has been a decided success in this county.

BYRON CO-OPERATIVE AFFAIR

Farmers to Have Laundry, Creamery, and Feed and Grinding Mill as Has Chatfield.

Rochester.—The success of the co-operative creamery and farmers' laundry at Chatfield has aroused the interest of farmers residing near Byron, and a movement has been started for the organization of a like concern at that place.

The Byron farmers propose to go their Chatfield friends one better and instead of having but one cooperative plant a feed and grinding mill, Byron has no creamery, but it is the center of a rich dairying district in this county. It has been learned that before two months have passed the concrete and commission houses for cream separators which, it is being argued, should be divided among the farmers as well as the dividends of a co-operative plant.

Those interested in the project are organizing a large auto party to visit Chatfield and Dover this week for the purpose of inspecting the co-operative plants and securing data.

It can easily be seen for seventy-five miles except during storms.

CHILD SUBSISTS ON GRASS

MISSING FOUR DAYS AND FOUND BY BLOODHOUNDS.

Baby Girl Starving, But Conscious Cries for Mother When Found By Searchers.

Erskine.—Under an enormous pile of brush where she had subsisted four four days and nights by eating grass and dirt, little Beatrice Gastborn, aged two and a half years, the daughter of William Gastborn, was found, searchers being led to her by blood hounds from the St. Cloud, Minn. refrigeratory, which faithfully tracked the child along the path taken feet Wednesday when she disappeared from the Gastborn home, eight miles west of Erskine.

Still conscious, despite the four days' hardship, the little child's appeal to searchers who found her was for her mother.

"I want to go to mamma," cried the child, piteously, her face and clothing covered with dirt, and lying almost helpless on the ground blackened by her own efforts to keep slive by eating grass. A space of several feet square had been blackened in this manner.

Her face and arms were scratched and sore and her whole body bore evidence of the frightful experience through which she had just passed.

The baby's escape from death during the exposure in the open was declared to be one of the most remarkable on record. To reach the place where she was found she traversed at least a mile of the thickest kind of underbrush.

Twice the dogs covered the route of the girl's flight in the passenger train but led the searchers to a hay field from where they lost the scent. The searchers spent some time there and then took the dogs out again from the residence where the baby started on her adventures.

Once again they led to the same hay stack and later over two hundred hay stack and later over 200 men took up the search covering every foot of ground of the place where the dogs stopped. Less than six rods from the hay was a pile of underbrush, placed there in clearing land. Into this two searchers plunged and there they found the child, entirely concealed from view. Many of the searchers had passed within a few feet of her but the child was too weak to attract attention.

The fact that a panther or leopard had recently escaped from a circus at Crookston and is supposed to be at large in the timber in this district led to the belief that the child had fallen prey to the animal, but that fear was dispelled when the first day's search failed to reveal anything of her.

LONG-PENDING DEAL CLOSED

After 16 Years Estate Pays $60,000 for Mining Land Originally Offered for $11,000.

Duluth.—A long-pending deal was closed when the estate of Peter Kimberly of Sharon, Pa., paid over to W. T. Bailey $60,000 for five acres in Virginia on the Mesaba range.

Peter Kimberly left an estate estimated at $11,000,000, the great bulk of which was accumulated from milling operation on the Mesaba. Six of his transactions was with the International Nickel company (Joshs & Laughlin), and involved the transfer of forty acres on the edge of the city of Virginia. Mr. Bailey owned five acres.

That was fourteen years ago. The sum of $11,000 for his land and the mine was accepted, but Kimberly neglected to pay. Bailey met him in Chicago a year later, and the mining man again promised to pay. A year passed and the man met again. The conversation was the same as before. Bailey advanced the price to $20,000 and Kimberly agreed. Soon after Kimberly died.

The last time that Mr. Bailey gave an option to the administrator of the Kimberly estate it was for $50,000 or an advance $1,000 a month until the deal was closed. It was thirty-two months before the estate paid and Bailey receives $60,000 and interest for the property.

Cloquet Fire Loss $100,000.

Cloquet.—Fire of unknown origin caused the burning of the large barn on the farm of Leonard Goldsmith, in Cleveland township, together with four horses, five stacks of grain, a quantity of hay, harness and farm machinery.

Coiffures Adapted to the Small Hat.

THE small hat is launched upon one more season of popularity and hair dressing must be adapted to it. But the very simple coiffures which have prevailed during the past year have become too tiresomely popular to suit women of fashion, or women who strive for individuality in dress. They want something new. Therefore, those divinities that shape our ends (so far as the arrangement of hair is concerned) have developed some lovely new coiffures.

These lately remarkable and beautiful styles accommodate the new hat shapes, and at the same time answer the demand for more dignified and exhibitive hair dressing than the passing mode displayed.

There are three different styles to be featured. One shows the hair dressed high—on top of the head—in another, it is coiled low on the crown, and in a third the regulation Psyche knot is worn. In several of the new styles a higher and slightly curled fringe appears across the forehead.

In all the new styles the hair is not much waved, and in all of them the ears are covered. In the majority of coiffures three very short, tiny curls nestle somewhere, either at neck or peeping out from the knot, or displaying themselves resting on the hair just above the ear. They are just about the prettiest little finishing touches that can be imagined. Women call them 'cunning' and perhaps they are; for these little curls appear to rivet the attention of the masculine mind with extraordinary force.

The new dressy coiffures realize how much neat admire pretty styles of hair dressing and good grooming in the women they know.

SHIRTWAISTS FOR THE FALL

Washable Materials Will Be Favored, With Linen, Duck and Gingham Most Popular.

The chic shirtwaist this fall will be washable.

"No starch" is the verdict for the fashionable shirtwaist.

Many waists of chiffon will be worn.

Chiffon waists may be washed if stiffened with a somewhat stronger gum water than ordinary starch of the stock solution to a cupful of water.

Plain shirtwaists will be worn this fall—linen, duck and gingham being popular.

Extremely simple cuts are the rules in shirtwaists.

Very close to the man's shirt is the fall waist for women, elongated shoulder line and short yoke being the rule.

Cotton crepe, voile, satin and brocaded waists must all have the short yoke.

For a plain tailored waist of linen, madras, pongee or wash silk the yoke may be omitted and the plaits laid both front and back run to the shoulder.

Stitching will be made prominent on tailored waists.

"Round stitch" will be used on many of the tailored waists.

FOR THE AFTERNOON.

Model of cream charmeuse and tulle, trimmed with edgings of pink ribbon. Lace fichus.

Suede Belts.

Suede belts that button are seen on some of the most elegant frocks of the thin material. The button holes are simply slits in the ends and the buttons are big, round brass ones. There are three button holes, so that the belt can be adjusted to the individual waist as easily as a buckled belt can be. Leather belts of all kinds, by the way, are much worn with thin and cotton frocks. Some of the tailored muslin frocks show belts in the darker color found in the figured design. Black velvet leather belts with narrow and wide, are worn with other wash frocks

NET WAIST ALWAYS BECOMING

Fashion Had Good Reason for Its Popularity, Which Is Almost Certain to Continue.

There is no doubt that the transparent waist of cotton net was the leader in the race for popularity. The model in it which sold by the hundreds and is still in fashion has a wide shoulder seam, slightly gathered, a loose sleeve that hangs above the waist; with two box pleatings of tucks. The long V shaped neck is outlined, and there is a lining, also of net, which is fastened across the top edge with a smaller bow pleating.

On the majority of these waists there is ribbon attached to the lining. It is done more or less well. Sometimes there are three bands around the figure ending in satin bows in front; again the top of the lining is gathered into a two-inch ribbon band which is finished with a large bow in front.

The whole blouse is loose and appears to fall from the figure, and the corset cover that goes with it is of chiffon in flesh color trimmed with ribbon run through it. How the blouse is still selling wherever you see, buy it. It is extremely becoming, and you don't like the ribbon, take it out, or substitute still your taste.—Washington Star.

Dainty Flowered Hatpins.

The methods of making flowered ornaments are still another of the ordinary hatpin, with a round or pear shaped top, which can be bought for a penny or two, is utilized. The shaft of the pin is first swathed in wadding, and then covered with colored silk or satin, on which should be embroidered colored beads to represent the center of the flower. Pieces of ribbon are then made to form the petals. Such flowers as poppies, daisies and roses are particularly becoming. The result when finished is eminently satisfactory, and often adds a pleasing dash of color to the gay sival effect.

Ottoman Revived.

There is a revival of the old-fashioned ottoman in the house furnishing realm. It comes in all sorts of shapes and sizes and covered with all manner of silken and tapestry stuffs. One of the newest models in the form is a cushion made especially for the apartment house dweller.

The cushion is hollow within and has a top that raises up, showing a convenient little receptacle beneath, where overshoes may be put away or other small articles stored in the recesses where every inch of space is valuable.

Flower Muff.

Much has been said of large summer muffs made of artificial flowers! They are exceedingly decorative, and are composed of many different kinds of blossoms, such as roses, Parma violets and orchids. Some of them are finished with long hanging branches of the same flowers. Of course, they have come from Paris, where they are fashioned for evening fetes and gay dinners.

Novel Hosiery.

Wonderful ingenuity is exercised in the matter of smart hosiery, and for women who like novelties in any form there is plenty to choose from. Coronea effects are contrived with stripes in lace or silk stockings, varying from about an eighth of an inch to a five tairline. These are so cunningly wrought that they give elegance to the regularly cable

HAY-MAKING MOST DIFFICULT PROBLEM

Using the One-Horse Cultivator for Cultivating Turnips.

It requires intelligent management to keep all hands busy during the hay harvest without allowing them to be idle at any time and without subjecting any of the hay to annecessary neglect.

Unlike other farm operations, haymaking cannot be followed along definitely laid-out plans.

Weather is the great controlling factor in hay-making. Hay will not dry in a specified time even without rain. A cool day will not allow hay to dry half as fast as the next day with a warm wind blowing.

Dry ground is a great aid in drying moisture from green hay above it, but if we wait for the dry ground we are apt to be caught by the next storm.

Ordinarily we must begin cutting as soon as one storm has cleared up and we see indications of fair weather.

Every precaution should be used to prevent the cutting of hay by too dry weather.

The hay tedder hastens the drying to a marvelous degree, especially if the hay has already been caught by the rain in the swath and hay that is heavy and green. A hay tedder will soon pay for itself if rightly used.

The side-delivery rake is another valuable implement for stirring the hay as well as gathering it in open windrows in which the drying may go on without causing the leaves to become brittle and fall off. Unless allowed to become too dry, they form large quantities of moisture from the stalks which they have the most valuable part of the hay and must go into the mow in good condition if we are to derive the full feeding value from the hay crop.

Men who are the best feeders of farm stock appreciate this fact and are willing to undertake the extra labor of curing their hay in cocks so that they may obtain its full feeding value.

It seems almost impossible to make good hay from clover and other legumes without curing it in the cock before hauling it to the barn.

All farm work must be carefully planned during the hay harvest. Part or all of time is needed in the potato and corn fields. During the catchy weather the weeds grow fast and we must plan to keep ahead of them by employing our hands at that time when they are not busy in the hay field.

We should keep every man busy without cutting down hay when the weather is right. In fact one of our greatest problems is to find time for haying at this time of the year.

With one cultivated crop planted late and other farm work demanding the attention we have a full program. It is the time when we must hire extra men or lose a large part of the feeding value of the hay crop.

We prefer to hire the extra men when we can get them. One of our best to find, but we manage to get them somehow.

It is much easier to have the help to push the hay harvest and not fall behind with the other farm work than it is to become at mixed up with other farm work at this time of the year.

LITTLE LIFTS FOR PRACTICAL FARMER

Few Excellent Hints That Will Prove of Value in Many Different Places.

Barley straw has the reputation of breeding lice on the cattle; it is also reported, that white cattle are more subject to insect attacks than those of the darker shades.

The Cuban is the best known of all sheep dogs. There is a great difference in this breed, the color and the show Collie, which has been bred to meet the fancy points of the fad. It is of but little service in the exacting duties which the sheep dog is called upon to perform.

The mangel is more nutritive as a food than the sugar beet, when fed for weight, it contains more dry matter and a higher percentage of sugar.

It is a well recognized principle that all grain crops thrive best in a soil thoroughly worked and free of clay-dirt by a solid substratum.

Of the grasses there is a large proportion of phosphates, much larger than in the bulk of barley or oats.

Carrots are not excelled as a food for the horses. They are particularly refreshing given to a hunter after a hard day over rough country or to a work horse. They are easily fed raw or sliced.

Milk intended to be sent to the factories should be cooled as rapidly as possible to a temperature of about 60 degrees F. When the milk is thoroughly milk is cooled the longer and better it will keep.

Half-ripened cream churns very quickly—in fact, the sooner the butter from it is a long time coming and the yield is not so good as from the properly ripened article.

The bacteria or organisms which cause the souring of cream are most active at temperatures ranging from that of milk to 70 degrees. At this temperature falls much below 60 degrees they become practically dormant.

Demand for Goat Meat.

The high price of beef and mutton has sent to New York markets large quantities of goat meat. It gives general satisfaction and the prices for from five to seven cents per pound lower than mutton.

To Remove Weeds.

Spring tooth, terminating in pointed blades, have been patented by a Pennsylvania man for removing weeds, roots and all, from the ground.

Original Forests.

The original forests of the United States contained timber in quantity and variety far exceeding that found on any similar tract in the world.

Principal Crop.

Hay is the chief agricultural crop of Switzerland.

FOR BEAUTIFYING THE HOME GROUNDS

Bed of Cannas or Border of Caladiums Should Be Given Some Bonemeal.

(By U. M. BENNINGTON.)

If you want your bed of cannas or border of caladiums to make a grand tropical showing from now to frost, give them a few tablespoonfuls of bonemeal; then stir the soil, water thoroughly, and watch with keen eligibility for the appearance of the of this month. And be sure to remove the withered leaves.

Copy nature by sowing seeds of perennials as they ripen. Leaving some sort of shade for the seed bed. Some made of lath or one of unbleached muslin will answer.

The robust-growing plants will need some sort of support, but the supports be painted green or oiled to bring out the grain of the wood, and you will find them more pleasing than rough sticks and far more satisfactory. Drive the stakes firm into the earth a little lower than the plants, so that they are unconspicuous.

The plants needing supports are such hardy perennials as delphiniums, giant foxgloves and snapdragons. Do not overlook staking to the dahlias, cosmos, hydrangea and gladioli.

To maintain continuous blooming from now until frost, a few perennials must be observed. Make a habit of cutting flowers freely, and remove all the fading blossoms, and nature will reward you with a fine display.

After this month, allow the chrysanthemums to grow according to their own will—that is stop pinching them back.

Work With Pigs.

Grow the pigs from the start. Don't fatten them, but grow them, put on the muscle, form and bone. Build the frame; the fat can go at later. A fat little pig is in poor condition to grow. You want muscle, muscle, muscle, strictly, and you will then build a good form.

Earnings of Farm Labor.

The earnings of the best class of farm laborers exceed that of the best paid labor of the cities on the average.

Profitable Pig.

The healthy pig is the profitable pig. Do all things towards improving and maintaining the health if you would make a profit in the hog business.

Cotton in Cyprus.

Experiments in cotton growing on a large scale are being carried on in Cyprus.

Big Cherry Yield.

Two cherry orchards in New South Wales, Australia, yielded $10,000 worth of cherries this season.

"Our Village Postmaster" is pronounced by press, public and pulpit to be one of the best rural comedy dramas ever written. The characters are natural with no overdrawn types to mar the beauty of the play. —Adv.

Theo. LaBissonier drove to Crookston Monday evening and on his return was accompanied by Mrs. LaBissonier's mother and sister, Mrs. Margie Martin and Miss Kate Matin, who have been guests at the LaBissonier home.

Next attraction at the opera house will be Eugene Perry's beautiful rural drama "Our Village Postmaster" with Mr. Wallie Stephens and his excellent company. Mr. Stephens is well known for his peculiar style of acting, now playing his second year in the Postmaster. This play tells an interesting story of an old postmaster of a small village who spent all his earnings to educate his son for greatness. The son's greatest ambition is to become an actor, against his father's wishes. So he runs away to Chicago, failing to find work in the theaters he gets discouraged. At the time the son leaves home there is a valuable package stolen from the post office and the search is started for the culprit. Postmaster says there never was a thief in the family and goes to Chicago in search of the thief and to find that his own funny experiences in the city will keep you bubbling with laughter all evening. Other scenes will moisten the eye and make the heart beat with emotion. The Quincy, Ill., Times says of It: "'Our Village Postmaster' is a play that rents return to Broadway and vice versa, with a good moral and a well balanced cast." One night only, Sept. 25, 1913, seats on sale at the usual place, 25c, 35c, 50c.

Anyone having advertising matter or other matter for the next weekly issue of the Gazette is requested to get "copy" to the office early in the week. On account of the county fair the paper will be issued earlier than usual.

Clarence Kanaul of Dundas was a guest at the home of Mrand Mrs. John Peter from last week. Mr. Kanaul is a cousin of Mr. Peter and enjoyed some good shooting and when he returned to his home he carried the limit of game with him.

The vacancy in the teaching staff of the public schools has been filled. Miss Bernadine Bidney of Devils Lake, N. Dak., arrived this week and is in charge of the fifth grade at the Washington school. Miss Bidney is in charge of the work of the eighth grade.

Neighbors of the Bernsters of Terrebonna, who suffered a heavy loss by fire recently in the burning of the barn on their farm and several head of live stock, are contributing to a fund to partly make up the loss. The collectors were in the city the first of the week and the business men subscribed something more than one hundred dollars.

Mrs. W. A. McIntyre of Langdon, N. Dak., is visiting with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Fletcher. Mrs. McIntyre has just returned from an eastern trip taken in company with Mrs. Fletcher. Mrs. Fletcher's mother, Mrs. McIntyre also visited the meeting of the American Bar Association, and then went to New York, Washington, Boston and other cities. On her return to Langdon the end of the month Mrs. McIntyre will be accompanied by her little boy Billie who has been at the home of his grandparents for the three weeks that his parents were away.

Recreation for Students.

One department of the Northwest School of Agriculture which is of great interest to the boys and girls and which furnishes a great deal of amusement is the gymnasium department. The school has a splendid gymnasium in which the students can secure all manner of exercise to keep their bodies in good, physical condition. The regular course includes two hours of gym work each week for all of the students in which various exercises are taught. The gymnasium is open the entire day and for two and one-half hours after supper at which time the students are allowed to take such exercise as they desire. Basketball teams are organized and practice is engaged in almost every evening at this time. A physical culture class for girls is also organized.

The school band is another source of enjoyment to the students. The band consists entirely of school students and can be joined by anyone who attends. It holds regular practice and plays selections at various programs in the school auditorium. These programs are prepared by the Library Society which is organized by the students and are presented weekly. The Debating Club, which is formed constantly by the students, gives the members some very valuable work.

Light Running New Deere Sulky and Gang

The Most Widely Used Plows

Why the New Deere Gives Satisfaction

Strength, durability, light draft and ease of operation give plow satisfaction. You get all these qualities when you buy a New Deere.

Not a cheap piece of material goes into the New Deere. This is one reason the New Deere Sulky and Gang give from three to five years more service than ordinary makes.

The New Deere is easy running because of the special material and shape of the bottoms, the keen, thin "wedge" and the proper distribution of weight on the wheels.

The device for locking the plows in ground is so constructed that the harder the ground, and, consequently, the greater the draft, the more securely are the plows held to their work.

After the first furrow is opened, an entire land can be plowed without adjusting a lever, except perhaps to land the front furrow when following crooked furrows.

Adjustments stay when once made and can be made in the field—an important convenience, especially when work is pressing.

In point of construction, material, ease of management, light draft, etc., the New Deere Gang and the New Deere Sulky are alike.

The principal difference between the two is that the Gang is adapted for two bottoms and has both hand and foot lift. The hand lift makes it easy for a small boy to lift both bottoms when team is standing.

These plows can be fitted with any style of John Deere bottoms suitable to soil conditions or any kind of work.

Both Sulky and Gang are equipped with steel eveners.

Great Time Saver--Quick Detachable Shares

Easy to Take Off

Here are some reasons why John Deere Quick Detachable Shares are superior to the ordinary shares:

1 They save 80 per cent of time in changing shares.
2 No tipping of plow or lying in the dirt.
3 Simplest and strongest share ever made.
4 No bent, burred or broken bolts or nuts.
5 Only one nut to remove instead of 4 or 5.
7 Locks rigidly—equalized strain on all parts.

Why They Are Stronger

An eyebolt attached to the share passes through a bracket and holds share in place—better than when bolted to the frog in the old-style manner. The frog extends well under the share, giving it a very solid support. One extra heavy malleable lever furnishes a firm bearing for wing of share. Lug on land side of share passes into a slot in the frog, holding it firmly. It answers the same purpose as two bolts in the landside.

Each share fits the frog and bottom perfectly. It is held tightly to the frog by tight and well-distributed pressure exerted when nut on the eyebolt is drawn up.

With bolted shares this must be done as far as possible with a drift punch which causes sudden shocks from the hammer blows and unequal strain on the shares.

The re-sharpened John Deere Quick Detachable Shares which have been worn be lent to place with less effort than can the bolted share.

There are many other reasons for the superiority of these shares, brought out by actual field experience—we will be pleased to tell you about it.

CANDIDATES ARE VERY NUMEROUS

St. Paul—(Special)—Beginning with next year all primaries and elections, with the exception of those having to do with the several state offices, will be nonpartisan. Even members of the legislature are included. The new order of things is a product of the last legislature and while the first general tryout is nearly a year off the law and how it will work is of more than ordinary interest at this time, as the Capital City, one of the largest municipalities in the state, will be the first to come under its requirements. The St. Paul city elections take place next spring and at the same time the seat of government of Minnesota will take on the commission form of government. Duluth is the one other city in Minnesota operating under the modern idea. What makes the coming St. Paul election of interest at this time is that candidates for the eight offices which will constitute the new government are now filing for the several places and as the season pick up they are becoming as numerous as the days. For the office of mayor no less than a score of candidates are promised, while in the case of the six commissioners at least 100 aspirants are predicted. There is one other office, that of comptroller, but it does not count. As primaries and things in an election way go the coming St. Paul contest, in the minds of some, is perhaps no different from the political scrambles that have preceded it. True possibly as far as the usual thirst for office is concerned, but not when it is known that for the first time the elimination of party will be tried out. But will party be eliminated even though the law says so, is the question, and further will it see the passing of the organization. All this makes the coming St. Paul primaries and city election interesting, for on the outcome and the tactics employed by the successful crowd will depend plans and specifications for the handling and lending of confidence to follow elsewhere in the state. But why worry; this reforming the election laws has been on for the past quarter of a century and it T. O'Connor et al are still on the job.

In the wiping out of party designation in town, city, county and even legislative primaries and elections many reforms were promised by the framers of the law. Some held it to be the last word in candidate selecting and officeholding uplift. Such may be true, but I miss my guess if the St. Paul contest does not make a monkey of the whole thing. It spells the old Democratic machine organization for the Capital City, which has been out of business for nearly four years now. The organization will win through a multiplicity of candidates. As the law applies to St. Paul, and which is incorporated in its new charter, primary results will be on the basis of the two highest for each office. With party figuring, even if the designation does not appear on the primary ballots, the means that the two candidates for mayor which will appear on the election ballot to follow will be Democrats and entirely satisfactory to the Democrats. The race will be the case with the other offices. This will be accomplished by selecting two or three men, popular men of course, for each office and then packing the field. What follows is a cinch. "Can't happen," you say; "citizens interested in good government will not permit it; they will beat the organization at its own game." Yes, such things have happened and they might happen this time, but it is not likely. Observations on the part of years truly have not run that way. Another job of making over the election laws and Mr. Good Citizen will not even be allowed to vote.

Now comes the job of secretary of state and if reports are true Julius Schmahl, the present incumbent, is in to have a few rivals. G. H. Mellom of Roseau county, it is said, has it in for the job and to try again for the place. Another mentioned possibility is Representative Sawyer of Minneapolis. Representative Charles Warner of Aitkin county is reported to have the bug. That Mr. Schmahl will have competition next year is certain but under the new order of things it will be hard to get his scalp. Besides Julius is some popular over the state, even if certain St. Paul dailies have it in for him. So far he has gotten by with votes to spare and it is not a bad bet that he will repeat.

George F. Authier, secretary to his excellency, A. O. Eberhart, is not exactly a Frank Day-winner, but they have quit making Frank's kind since that the same be is putting a few things across these days that place him in class 1. I refer to the good things the city and many of the daily papers are saying about Governor Eberhart and the reception by the same of the governor's public utility scheme. The reception sure has been cordial and it is growing. George is a mixer—his newspaper training is largely responsible for that—and his secretary to Governor Eberhart has brought into line not a few of the opposition and at the same time out at ease and brought to the governor's office a line of future help that consistention would have lost. Forgive me, George, if I have said too much. Governor Eberhart knows. Well, he is equally as modest and another campaign will demonstrate the fact.

As primaries are conducted in Minnesota a big field is always the best for the man that is in, but sums problems are in an overproduction of gubernatorial candidates from Hennepin county trouble for the present Republican state administration. Three—Fred Snyder, Senator Elwell and James A. Peterson—are now mixed from that district. It was Hennepin and Ramsey counties that helped put Governor Eberhart over last year and the state knows now, some of the klangmakers say, would be minding trouble. It is early to try end of the game did not do so good. W. E. Lee and the other candidates profited there.

Stories are still in the rounds to the effect that state senators are being lined up on a proposition to confine the special session of the legislature, which Governor Eberhart will call, to the enactment of public utilities only. In return the governor is not to call a session until January. What truth there is in the stories is not known, but you can put it down as certain that the legislators of legislation will be taken up, whether it is called in October or January. If nothing else the hot chelora epidemic will be discussed and there will be legislation designed to curb its activity in the future. Then, too, the bonus is sure to take on a number of matters and they will be a kind that even senators cannot well ignore.

SUPPLY AMPLE IF NOT ABUNDANT

CITY WELL WILL SUPPLY PRESENT NEEDS OF THE CITY.

AND SUPPLY PROBABLY ADEQUATE FOR THE FUTURE NEEDS.

Since the completion of the waterworks system in Red Lake Falls there has been much concern as to whether or not there is a sufficient supply of water for the city well to supply the needs of the city. It has been definitely determined that while the supply is not inexhaustible it is adequate for present needs of the city and probably for the future needs.

Records of pumpings made by H.F. Wheeler during the past week indicate that the supply seems to be increasing.

Sept. 16 the water was 15 feet and 10 inches below the pump and it took 30 minutes of pumping to lower it 2 below the point the pump will lift. Sept. 17 it was 17 feet and 3 inches below the pump and it took 30 minutes to lower it. Sept. 18 it was 15 feet and 6 inches below the pump and it took 30 minutes to lower it. Sept. 20 the water was 15 feet and 4 inches below the pump and the pump was run twice, 44 minutes in all under ordinary conditions this might indicate a very limited supply of water, but the pump is one of much more than ordinary capacity. It throws 175 gallons a minute. In 44 minutes on Sept. 20, 7700 gallons of water were forced into the tank.

The test indicates that the supply will be sufficient to supply the needs of the city for domestic purposes and will allow a surplus for fire fighting. It also indicates that as the well is being used the supply seems to be increasing.

The water is of excellent quality and perfectly clear. People who have been hesitating about going to the city water into their homes need hesitate no longer.

KILLED HIMSELF: CREMATED BODY

SET BUILDING ON FIRE AND THEN COMMITTED SUICIDE.

Chas. A. Hedeen, aged 26, unmarried, a son of Oscar Hedeen, one of the pioneer residents of the county, living about five miles east of Angus in the township of Wyandette, committed suicide early last Thursday morningin an empty log barn near the Hedeen farm by shooting himself with a double-barreled 12 gauge shot gun, after first saturating the interior of the building with the contents of kerosene can of which he used in line and setting it on fire. Coroner Halverson of this city found the charred skeleton in the smoldering ruins shortly before noon Thursday and pronounced the catastrophe a suicide, deeming an inquest unnecessary.

Hedeen has always made his home with his father, younger brother and sister in section 23 in the township of Wyandette. During the past summer he had been acting strangely and for the last two weeks had been suffering under the hallucination that he was being pursued by officers of the law for criminally assaulting a horse and that when he killed himself they would "get" him. Feeling that he would thereby cut his throats, all firearms in the house had been hidden and the demented man placed under surveillance.

Shortly after midnight he escaped from his room and was not seen again till about 6:30 Tuesday morning, when the members of the household, discovering his absence, started a search and later found the body. An empty fire gallon kerosine can and the metal parts of a double-barreled shot gun were found near the skeleton. The stock was still intact, giving grounds for the theory that the deceased had completed the contents of the shot gun inside his body. The coroner believes that the demented man took his life was built of logs and was completely demolished by the flames.—Thief River News-Press.

DEATH OF PIONEER

Anthony Lambert of Lambert Township Died Last Saturday of Heart Failure.

Anthony Lambert, one of the pioneers of Red Lake county and a resident of Lambert township for thirty years, died suddenly Saturday evening. Mr. Lambert was working corn in the garden near his home when he was stricken with heart failure, his death coming almost instantly.

Mr. Lambert was sixty-five years old at the time of his death. He was born in St. Ursule, Province of Quebec, Canada. Thirty two years ago he came to the Red Lake county and settled on a farm in Lambert township where he has continued to reside until his death.

He is survived by five children, all married. The sons are Napoleon and Alfred Armidas of Lambert and Alphonse of Fosston. The daughters are Azelie, la Mrs. Francis Fournier of Lambert and Mrs. Joseph Gervais of Lambert. The funeral was held at the Lambert Catholic church at 10:30 o'clock Monday morning, Rev. Fr. Beaudet officiating, and was largely attended.

MADE FINE SETTLEMENT.

Man Injured on Railroad Got $12,000 Without Fuss.

Fred Steinbrook, who a year ago was struck by the Great Northern express at Cormon, losing an arm, and being dragged a distance of a quarter mile, got today made a settlement with the Great Northern for $12,000 cash, the company also paying his hospital and doctor bills.

Mr. Steinbrook settled with the company himself and says there was no trouble in getting what he wanted. He is very much pleased with the way the railroad company is using him.

The accident happened in the yards the 10th of last November. Mr. Steinbrook was switching box cars, he string of thirty, and was endeavoring to get on one of them off. In some manner the two lost their hold and he was knocked down and the cripples ran over him. He was picked up around and will soon be in pretty good shape, though he went through a terrible ordeal.—Crookston Times.

MADE FINE FLIGHT

Balloon Man Put on Interesting Feature Late Yesterday Afternoon.

Late yesterday afternoon the balloon man made an ascension and parachute leap at the county fair grounds. He went up several hundred feet and made a fine drop. This stirfter will be put on this afternoon and again tomorrow afternoon.

The races for great horses yesterday were very interesting and the auto race was especially exciting. The autos went beautifully mail they were urged to hurry past the barns when a dispute arose. Some of the drivers were prohibited on all sides of the fence. The decision of the judges was that the autos was this race.

The big race events are scheduled for this afternoon and tomorrow afternoon.

Drainage Law Upheld.

Minneapolis, Sept. 19.—Minnesota's drainage law was upheld in a decision by the state supreme court in the case of the state against J. L. George, the auditor of Redrand county.

J. L. George had a contract for a ditch in Redrand and Marshall counties, when the drainage law was amended to provide that the contractor could be paid 40 per cent of the estimated cost of his work as completed by the state engineers. The state law limited the payments to 75 per cent of the work done.

County Auditor George refused to pay the estimate on the ditch, and in the proceedings in the county of Redrand intervened, attacking the law as unconstitutional. Judge Stanton, who tried the case, decided in favor of Argle and the law and his order are affirmed.

BALLOON TODAY AND TOMORROW

THRILLER FOR ENTERTAINMENT OF COUNTY FAIR CROWDS IS ASSURED.

MAN WILL GO UP IN BALLOON AND JUMP WITH PARACHUTE.

A thriller on the county fair program for this afternoon and tomorrow afternoon that was not announced in the last issue of the Gazette is the balloon ascension and the parachute leap. The fair officers have contracted with an aly man for the big thriller and he will on each day go up in a balloon to a dizzy height and jump with a parachute.

People who have never seen a balloon ascension will find this one feature of the fair worth the price of admission. Those who have seen the stunt before would gladly pay the price for another thrill. But there are many good features on the fair program, so people attending will be sure to get good measure in entertainment for their money.

Paper Out Early.

This issue of the Gazette is published several hours earlier than usual that readers may have the final announcements of arrangements for the Red Lake county fair. Much of the space is given over to fair announcements, but this is surely excusable since the fair is worthy of all the "boosting" it is possible

PLACES TO EAT.

Ladies of St. Joseph's Church Serving Meals in Duffy Building.

Providing meals for the crowds of county fair visitors is certainly deserving of a problem and the public eating places are overrun with business. The ladies of St. Joseph's church are assisting with the good work by serving in the Duffy building on Main street. Good meals are served for 36 cents.

ACCIDENTALLY SHOT

Seventeen Bird Shot Lodge in Face and Hand of Waldemar Peterson.

As a result of being accidentally shot last Sunday while hunting, Waldemar Peterson has 17 flesh wounds in his face and hand, but it is only through exceedingly good fortune that at least one eye was not destroyed.

Mr. Peterson with three companions was out hunting, Peterson driving and the others walking across the fields. Through some misunderstanding Peterson got behind some prairie chickens, the others bunting on the opposite side. When the birds started flight the three shot directly towards Peterson, the distance being about one hundred yards. Fortunately Mr. Peterson had his hand screening his eyes at the time as seventeen shot lodged in his hand, face and head, two completely perforating his low-er lip. No serious results will follow.—Plummer Pioneer.

For the Collection.

Mrs. Murphy was getting the supper for the children on Saturday night when a young woman came to her door.

"I'm a collector for the Dorcas-ards' Home," she said. "Could you help us?"

"Come around tonight and I'll give you sumthin'," said the housewife as she went about her work.—Life.

STORES TO BE CLOSED

Business Men and Employees Will be Off Duty Each Afternoon of Fair.

All business places in the city are to be closed each afternoon of next people in deciding to shut up the fair. The action of the business men will not only benefit the county fair crowds materially but will make it possible for all of their employes to enjoy all of the county fair programs.

Emporia Arrivities.

Two boys of Emporia, Kan., ran away from home to seek their fortune, after reading a biographical sketch of Dick Whittington. They got as far as Kansas City, where the conductor accompanied them and took them to the police station. There the captain questioned them closely, and baling drawn forth much useful information, finally asked:

"Why did you boys run away from Emporia?"

"Well," replied the elder of the pair, thoughtfully, "there's nothing there but William Allen White, and we get tired of hearing of him."—Culture Weekly.

FORMER CROOKSTON MAN.

Warwick, N. D., Newspaper Man Held to District Court.

Minnewaukan, N. D., Sept. 19.—Francis J. Kirsh, editor of The Warwick Sentinel, was arraigned yesterday and held to the District court under bond, charged with forgery. He accepted two notes in settlement of an account, it is alleged.

The party he was representing then refused to pay a commission and Kirsch raised the face of the note from $20 to $70 to cover the charge involved, it is said.

Kirsch formerly resided at Crookston, Minn.

IOWAN WAS SHOWN CORN EXCELLS HIS

Farmer Convinced That Minnesota Corn is Better Than the Iowa Product.

If there is one thing all Iowans are proud of it is their corn crop, and to cast insinuations that other states can raise as fine corn as Iowa, is liable to invite the contempt of multitudo of his neighbors from Missouri to the Dakotas. But one Iowan, at least, was this week convinced that northern Minnesota can grow grand corn. This farmer was looking for seed for the country with the object of buying land, and he had with him samples of corn which he considered could not be duplicated, but there were ears grown on the Ralph Green farm west of here he was forced to admit the local product was superior.

The ear of corn which Mr. Green was picked at random from a fifteen acre field, and is a part of the corn exhibit Mr. Green will take to the county fair at Red Lake Falls next week.—Summer Pioneer.

THAW, VICTORIOUS, TAKEN TO CONCORD

WINS VICTORY IN U. S. COURT HEARING AT LITTLETON, NEW HAMPSHIRE.

MAY BE SUCCESSIVE APPEALS

Fugitive's Lawyers Plan to Carry Case to Supreme Court If Findings Are Adverse—Prisoner Predicts He Will Win.

Littleton, N. H., Sept. 17.—Harry Kendall Thaw has just won one of the most notable court victories in the United States or Canada since his escape from the asylum for the criminal insane at Matteawan, N. Y. Thaw's counsel have since laid the foundation for plans to carry his case to the supreme court of the United States.

The Situation.

When the governor of New Hampshire passes on the matter of the extradition of Thaw to New York, at the hearing to be held at Concord on Tuesday, next, the findings, if adverse to Thaw, will be reviewed by the United States district court and, should a decision against him then be rendered, successive appeals will be taken until the case reaches the highest court in the land.

This is the announcement by the Thaw lawyers. It was made after a hearing on a federal writ of habeas corpus obtained in Thaw's behalf, and invoking the fourteenth amendment to the constitution, had been indefinitely suspended until such time as counsel saw fit to begin arguments after the extradition matter had been decided by the governor.

Holds Writ in Abeyance.

United States Judge Aldrich, for the district of New Hampshire, in deciding that Thaw had the right, in effect, to hold his habeas corpus writ in abeyance, explained in his receipts that this was the preliminary privilege in that should he be ordered extradited it would still be open to federal authority to afford such protection as the constitution of the laws of the United States require.

Thaw, accordingly has been taken to Concord. He predicts that the gates of Matteawan will never close behind him again.

Mr. Jerome had little or nothing to say.

"Thaw is tied up now with a federal writ," he said, "and there is no getting around it. But the questions to be decided by the governor are simple and we hope for victory."

Interesting Procedure.

Concluding his receipt Judge Aldrich excused Mr. Jerome in federal colloquy as regards Thaw's status as an inmate now of a criminal. It was perhaps the most interesting part of this brief court proceeding.

For the first time since his return to the United States, after his sudden deportation from Canada, Thaw was openly cheered. Arriving here from Colebrook, near where he was arrested last week, enthusiastic and sympathetic crowds greeted him at the station and when he descended to Main street, after his court victory and was taken to his hotel for dinner, hurrahs greeted him as he passed.

PRIEST ALSO COUNTERFEITER

Schmidt, Confessed Murderer, Tells Police He Fitted Up Den to Make Fake Money.

New York, Sept. 17.—The discovery of a counterfeiter's den which Henry Schmidt, priest and confessed slayer of Ann Annuller has admitted was fitted up by him to make spurious money, led the detectives, Coroner Feinberg and others to express the opinion that Schmidt is sane and that further investigation will show that counterfeiting was only one of his "side lines." They declared it an their belief that he is feigning insanity after carefully thought out plans of a criminal mind.

To Rev. Father Evers, chaplain of the Tombs prison, to his attorney and other callers, Schmidt admitted his connection with the fat in West One Hundred and Thirty-fourth street, where detectives found bundles of imitation $10 gold certificates. To Ernest Arthur Nicot, a dentist arrested Monday night when the raid upon the counterfeiter's flat, was held in $5,000 bail on a charge of having in his possession a counterfeiting imitation of a state law.

William Flynn, chief of the Secret Service, announced that he had temporarily taken charge of the government's end of the case and would work with the New York police in tracing the operations of Schmidt as a counterfeiter and also the connection Mayer might have had with the fake money plant.

BAPTIST PREACHER SAID TO HAVE SPANKED FATHER.

Grand Jury Returns True Bill Against the Reverend Elijah M. Hanley of Franklin University.

Terre Haute, Ind., Sept. 17.—Rev. Elijah M. Hanley, president of Franklin college, has been indicted by the Vigo county grand jury on a charge of assault and battery growing out of his attack on his father, Calvin Hanley, last Thursday.

President J. ley said to be at Franklin, Ind. ...d Rev. C. M. Vernan, a member of the board of trustees of the institution, told court officials that he would appear when wanted.

The alleged assault on Calvin Hanley occurred at his home near Middletown, Ind., when, it was charged, the minister attacked his father because of remarks made to his daughter-in-law and on account of treatment accorded his mother to which the son objected. The father told neighbors that he had been beaten with a club and kicked by his son.

President Hanley asserted that he had not beaten his father, but had "switched and cuffed" his parent for ill treatment of his mother and other members of his family.

SAND VERY LATEST REMEDY

Cure for Aches in One's Stomach—Fried, Baked or Raw, It Works Wonders, It Is Claimed.

Muncie, Ind., Sept. 17.—Sand—parboiled, baked or fried—has cured stomach troubles, according to a former, congressman from the Eighth Congressional district; John Fitzgibbon, president of the Muncie board, and Harry W. Long, lawyer and former prosecuting attorney of the Muncie county.

Despite much laughter that greets them when they tell the stories of their recovery from indigestion, dyspepsia and other stomach disorders they are spreading the gospel of sand.

"Raw sand will do the trick for some people," said Fitzgibbon, "baked sand will do it for others. Another might have to have the sand parboiled, strained and fried. I took me over. Before I took the baked sand cure I was nervous, generally run down, and subject to violent attacks of stomach trouble which made me miserable. It was sand and a nuisance to my friends and I."

THREE ARE BLAMED FOR TRAIN WRECK

CORONER'S REPORT ON LAST NEW HAVEN ACCIDENT FLAYS EMPLOYEES.

DOESN'T BLAME MANAGEMENT

Couldn't Have Happened If Rules Had Been Obeyed—Conductor, Flagman and Engine Chief Are Held.

New Haven, Sept. 17.—Three employes of the New York, New Haven & Hartford road are held by Coroner Mix to be criminally responsible for the disastrous wreck at New Haven on September 2, when the White Mountain express plunged through the second section of the suburban train Bar Harbor express, exacting a toll of 21 lives. The coroner's finding was filed after he had concluded a "private" inquest.

Those held responsible are Adjust B. Miller, engineer of the White Mountain express, and Bruce C. Adams and Charles H. Murray, conductor and flagman, respectively, of the Bar Harbor train.

The coroner neither blames nor absolves the New Haven road. He finds the signals were in perfect order and "whether the block signals are obsolete or not, the accident could have been prevented if the company's rules had not been violated." He declares the number of violations of rules by employees "makes a sorry record."

Engineer Is Arrested.

Engineer Miller was arrested on a bench warrant and pleaded not guilty before the superior court.

Bench warrants have been issued for Adams and Murray. It is said they will be brought into court today.

In his finding the coroner says of Engineer Miller:

"The lives of a large number of people were in his care and he was in duty bound to take no chance and incur no risks. Engineer Miller was on the late train. He was ahead and that it was imperative and his duty to have had his train under perfect control, ready to stop at a signal of danger.

"Miller disregarded the signal, the banjo signal, set at danger, just north of the wreck, at a reckless rate of speed."

Regarding Conductor Adams of the Bar Harbor express, Coroner Mix says:

"It was clearly his duty (after the train had been stopped) to get away from danger at once and clearly his to see that a proper guard of the train behind and at once proceed."

Of Flagman Murray of the Bar Harbor express, the coroner says:

"It is claimed that he did not have time to go back the required distance before being called in by a signal given by the engineer and before he could place his torpedoes and light his fuse. From all the testimony I find directly to the contrary. He did not go out immediately when the train came to a stop. He did not endeavor to go back the required distance, and he did not set his torpedoes nor light his fuse."

MEXICO CELEBRATING BIRTH

GREAT CROWDS JOIN IN INDEPENDENCE PROGRAM.

Great Parade in Southern Republic for Today, With Speechmaking and Festivities.

Mexico City.—Army increase is the keynote of the message which President Huerta delivered to congress. Huerta read last night to the congress which has just convened.

Mexico City, Sept. 17.—"Viva la Independencia de Mexico!" was the cry which ushered in the celebration of the 103rd anniversary of Mexico's independence. As is the capital, so in every city, town and hamlet was observed the time-honored custom marking the hour of the ringing of the first liberty bell.

Sharp on the strike of 11 o'clock in the presence of thousands who packed the big square in front of the national palace, President Huerta appeared on the balcony and grasped the cord attached to the tongue of the big bell suspended above, and shouted the magic words,

Then from the crowd which prior to this had been standing in silent expectation, burst into an echoing roar of voice for the independence of the nation.

For the fourth successive year a new president has officiated at the midnight independence ceremony. General Porfirio Diaz for the last time ceended the liberty bell at the celebration of the 100th anniversary in 1910. He was followed by Francisco de la Barra, an provisional president, who in turn was succeeded by Madero a year ago.

Preceding the "Grito" President and Signora Huerta gave an elaborate reception in the halls of the palace which was attended by government officials, members of the diplomatic corps and friends of the executive and his wife.

TRIAL OF SULZER OPENS AT ALBANY

HIGH COURT OF IMPEACHMENT FORMALLY ASSEMBLES TO HEAR EVIDENCE.

DISCUSS RULES OF CONDUCT

Mode of Procedure to Be Fixed Before Actual Trial Begins — Chief Judge Cullen Presides—Prosecution Ready.

Albany, N. Y., Sept. 18.—For the first time in the history of New York state, and for only the eighth time in the history of the country, a chief executive today faced trial for "high crimes and misdemeanors" when a majority of the state senate and a majority of the court of appeals opened their sittings as a high court of impeachment with Chief Judge Edgar M. Cullen presiding.

Rules Are Discussed.

After the court met to try impartially and fairly the case before the court the judges and senators entered into a discussion of rules for the conduct of the trial. They are no precedents in New York state for the trial of a governor and the only guide for the court is the constitution of the state, precedents established in other states and the records of federal impeachments. Therefore, the court went through out the question of rules to govern the conduct of the trial before it can get down to the actual work for which it has been called into being.

The assembly board of managers, of which Aaron J. Levy, majority leader of the assembly, is chairman, is fully prepared to proceed with the presentation of the evidence, to be made by the prosecution.

Answer to Be Filed.

The formal answer before the court, after the rules have been agreed upon, will be the filing of an answer by attorneys for Gov. Sulzer. Basing it on a general denial of all the charges, this answer will probably be followed with the prayer that the court of impeachment dismiss the charges on the ground that his term expires by law found when the assembly was in extraordinary session, called by him for the purpose of considering certain legislation, the assembly could not legally be in session. Other than those for which the chief executive summoned it into session.

With Sulzer on trial the battle between New York's "People's government" and Tammany Hall, the political organization that made him, and which Sulzer has broken bread him, will bear its seed. It is a political quarrel that will go hard to settle.

The court of impeachment will not be effected in any way by the feeling of popular sympathy for Sulzer. It will be a cold, calm proposition of whether Sulzer was guilty or not guilty of malfeasance in office. A question of whether, as charged by the assembly, he did or did not speculate in Wall street with campaign funds and to cover up his acts did not fail to give a true and correct list of his campaign contributions in his sworn statement of campaign receipts and expenditures.

LIFE IS AGAIN JEOPARDIZED

NEW INFERNAL MACHINE SENT TO GENERAL H. G. OTIS.

Japanese Servant Prevents Soldier Editor From Being Blown Up—Victim Suspects Old Enemy.

Los Angeles, Cal., Sept. 18.—The life of General Harrison Gray Otis has again been jeopardized by a bomb the second time within three years. General Otis has been threatened many times since the blowing up of the Los Angeles Times, of which he is proprietor, Oct. 1, 1910.

That he escaped injury probably was due to the watchfulness of his Japanese servant, who received from the postman an infernal machine, mailed in this city, and called his employer's attention to it. The first infernal machine directed at the life of General Otis was sent by mail and resembles a few hours after his newspaper plant had been destroyed through the efforts of the McNemara conspirators.

This latest attempt on his life was attributed by the general to agencies friendly to those who conspired aventuated in the destruction of his newspaper plant and the killing of 21 man three three years ago.

But the police and postal authorities believe themselves on a new channel from the theory that the Mexican question has a part in it.

General Otis is heavily interested in the Mexican affairs of Lower California where, two years ago, Industrial Workers of the World joined the "liberal cohort" element of Madero in an effort to establish a socialistic commonwealth.

The bomb reached "the Bivouac," the General Otis home, wrapped in a small package about five inches long, three inches wide and two inches deep. It bore General Otis's address, written in what is believed to be a disguised hand.

The Japanese servant removed the wrapping paper without taking it to General Otis. He told the general that he thought there was something suspicious about the package.

Captain E. B. Feltz, a powder expert in the police department, took the machine to a sparsely inhabited section of the city and pried open the box. He found matches fixed in the inside of the box in such a way that if it were opened in the usual way they would have rubbed against pieces of sand paper and ignited. There was also black powder, a small section of fuse, two fulminating caps and two other of 25 per cent dynamite, which tore a great hole in the ground.

Threshing Delayed; Yield Less.

Beach, N. D., Sept. 18.—Threshing was delayed here for the past two days owing to a rain that lasted all Monday night. The wheat crop in this section will average a yield of from 15 to over 20 bushels per acre, though two hailstorms during the early summer caused considerable damage. There are nine grain elevators here and all are receiving a large amount of grain. Last year nearly 2,000,000 bushels of wheat were marketed at Beach, but it is believed that this crop will be nearly 1,000,000 short.

HUERTA TAKES A FLING AT WILSON

SAYS THE UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT, NOT PEOPLE, ARE UNFRIENDLY.

MESSAGE IS DISAPPOINTING

Many Auditors Had Hoped Privately at President Would Discuss the Recent Diplomatic Exchanges.

Mexico City, Sept. 18.—President Huerta began his message to congress with: "Besides the friendship which exhausts us, the keenness of our diplomatic relations with the government of the United States, although luckily not with that people, has put us in a state of apprehension, has made us suffer more than one affliction, which was not meritless and retarded the complete pacification of the republic."

Disappointing to Some.

The message was disappointing to those who had expected that President Huerta would deal at some length with recent diplomatic exchanges. This omission, however, has said, "helps so delicate and the permanent commission to congress being already informed," he passed with a bare mention.

In his message, President Huerta said:

"The Mexican government regards the pacification of the country as an urgent necessity in order to restore the public services to their normal state, to establish definitely the social and economical equilibrium and to make possible a program of reforms which will satisfy the national aspirations. I will spare no effort and no sacrifice to attain this desired peace and to guarantee fully in the coming elections the free casting of the ballot.

"You may be sure it will constitute the principal object of attention for the interim government to surrender effectively its succession to the one that is to be expected, enters upon its functions with public peace and order an accomplished fact."

Speaks of Funds.

Of the treasury funds, amounting et the beginning of the last fiscal year to $37,650,000, $34,000,000, he said, had been expended for the defense of the country; of the loan of $100,000, 000 authorized in March, French bankers took $30,000,000 at 95c. Out of this, Sayner & Co. had raised $20,000, 000, half of which was o loan to the national treasury and half to the mexico central railway.

For the army, 600 horses and 2,300 mules were purchased during the year. The national cartridge factory, he said, was turning out 200,000 cartridges monthly. Besides a great number of cannon of various descriptions, mountain guns, rifles, carbines and ammunition, the government has contracted about ten armored cars, 27 armored automobiles and 50 armored automobiles and two armed transports.

At the close of the reading of the president's message the house of congress was adjourned until today.

Refuses to Answer Huerta.

Washington.—President Wilson and Secretary Bryan received an abstract of President Huerta's address to the Mexican congress, but no comment on it was forthcoming from either.

Administration officials were in a quandary over whether to send the customary formal message of congratulation on the celebration of independence day throughout the Mexican republic today. The hesitancy about addressing a message of that character to a government which had not been formally recognized.

Clash Ends Crop Movement.

St. Paul.—Treasurer Smith direct ed the distribution of $1,274,000 among the rural banks of Minnesota and the movement is expected to add materially to the movement of the crops and settlements incident there to. In all, 378 banks were accommodated. The amount given each bank varied from $1,000 to $5,000, but, small as it is, it is welcome at that, for this is the first time in three months that the rural depositories have been able to get hold of any state funds.

SOME FAMOUS FEASTS RECALLED

by Edward B. Clark

RECENTLY there was given in Paris a great feast to the mayors of France. Some of the French newspaper men declared unhesitatingly perhaps that in the point of the numbers fed and in the sumptuousness of the banquet it was the greatest affair of the kind ever given in the world.

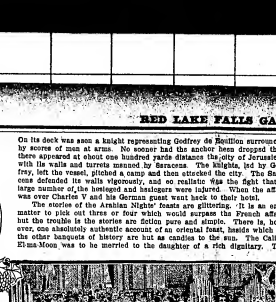
If the Paris correspondents are Frenchmen they are to be forgiven, perhaps, for leaving out of their calculation another Parisian feast given nearly five hundred years ago. At that banquet 100,000 people were fed. Wine was not served from bottles, but the revelers filled their flagons and cups from fountains which ran the product of champagne and Burgundy throughout the livelong day. It was the English King Henry V. who gave this feast, and it was in celebration of his conquest of France and of his being declared king regent of that country. Of a truth the Parisians may be forgiven if their minds revert not to that former festival.

As a matter of fact there are in gastronomic history scores of dinners that outdid in the number of diners and in the elegance of appointment the one which the government of France gave to the mayors of the country's municipalities. The story of the banquet which Tigellinus gave to Nero, as it appears in "Quo Vadis," has foundation in fact. That feast was held on a raft made of gilded timbers, the structure being moored to the shore by means of golden ropes. The seats were beautifully cushioned in birds, mammals, fish and plants to the spreading forth of the table. The entire revenue of o Romen province for a year went to the cost. The currency which was spread over the heads of the diners was of Syrian purple, while the glassware was "the plunder of Italy, Greece and Asia Minor."

The cost of the French mayors' banquet, putting it at $250,000, sinks into the pit of insignificance compared with the amount of money which a single man, Marcus Gobius, spent on the appetite. This Romen epicure in the early empire period paid $4,000,000 for the gratification of his palate. When he had spent all of his money between the years 33 and 1405 he poisoned himself in order that he might avoid the misery of being forced to live on a plebs diet.

One needs to go no farther than to England to find a feast at which more people were fed than partook of the French government's hospitality. When Henry III's daughter Margaret married Alexander III of Scotland, 60,000 people partook of the royal hospitality at one sitting. A curious feature of this banquet was the service by the assembled multitude of whelce and porpoises, sea mammals which the English of that day regarded as the chief of delicacies. That their taste may not have been to the best reduced may be guessed perhaps from the fact that as the same day they ate picturesquely coarse, heroic and barbaric. Hints that were given the stomach of the bon vivant of today. The Scotch and English on that occasion, in addition to other edibles, disposed of 100 cxen specially fattened for the feast.

The French people may find an instance in their own history of a dinner given by the government in the person of the king, which for novelty and cost far surpassed the gathering at the board of the mayors. Near the end of the fourteenth century Charles V of France wanted to do something nice for the emperor of Germany, so he invited him to dinner, promising him as an inducement to come something which he had never seen before. The emperor came, and guests to the number of many hundreds were seated about the board in a great open pavilion. When the banquet had reached the point between fish and fowl a shadow fell athwart the table, and looking up the astounded banqueters beheld a full-rigged ship with sails all set bearing down upon them. It was impelled across the land by unseen and noiseless machinery. At the edge of the pavilion the vessel cast anchor.



On its deck was seen a knight representing Godfrey de Bouillon surrounded by scores of men at arms. No sooner had the anchor been dropped than there appeared at about one hundred yards distance the city of Jerusalem, with its walls and turrets manned by Saracens. The knights, led by Godfrey, left the vessel, pitched a camp and then attacked the city. The Saracens defended its walls vigorously, and on realizing this the fight then a large number of the besieged and besiegers were injured. When the affair was over Charles V and his German guest went back to their hotel.

The stories of the Arabian Nights' feasts are glittering. It is an easy matter to pick out three or four which would surpass the French affair, but the truths in the stories are fitting more and more. There is, however, one absolutely authentic account of an oriental feast, beside which all the other banquets of history are but as candles to the sun. The Caliph El-ma-Mcon was to be married to the daughter of a rich digitary. The prospective son-in-law wished to do things in proper style, so he asked everybody, rich and poor alike, within 100 miles of his residence, to attend the marriage feast. The historical accounts of the affair say that ten great palaces with all their rooms could not take in the guests who came in the multitudes that came. When the people had assembled, the poor as it by lustlust, herded together while the rich feasted in the palaces. In order that the common people might not become impatient while waiting for their dinner, the caliph and his bride stood upon a great platform and directed the movements of a score of servants whose labor it was to shower the poorer guests with gold coin. The coin storm was succeeded by one of small bags of ambergris as valuable as the glittering gold which preceded. Then, as a further diversion, bales of musk were thrown among the people, who scrambled and struggled mightily for their possession. Each guest upon hall was a ticket which entitled the lucky holder to enough land, slaves and horses to make him independently rich. The guests all sat down to dinner together and were served by an army of attendants. If they had been at one long table the man who sat at the head could not have seen the man who faced him at the foot. One of the features of the dinner was a candle of ambergris weighing 80 pounds. This candle, worth a fortune in itself, was kept alight for days by the same complaisant slave who brought had money to burn. The candle was in a gold candlestick weighing many pounds. The bride sat at most with the guests, and as she took her place at the table her grandmother approached and emptied a bucket of pearls over her head.

The caliph's father-in-law "went broke" over the banquet and in order that he might reimburse himself the caliph made him estrap of one of the richest Persian provinces. Inasmuch as the province in question was filled with it the privilege of raising or lowering taxes at will, it may be imagined that the father-in-law was not long in getting even.

The Earl of Warwick, the king-maker, if he could have been consulted through a proper spiritualistic medium, would have been able to give the world a menu. Of the feast that he gave there have been revealed, trying to decide where the camp should be. Then, if you have your compass, and it is not among the things that you have pawned, your judgment, stick faithfully to that direction. Even if it does not agree with your decision, it is better to keep on in one direction than to wander as a lost man in with some stream, and can follow it to a human habitation.

Kleptomania.

The pornographist opened his typewriter, inserted a sheet of paper, lit his pipe and with a sigh of relief leaned in thought. Then he clicked of a single line of type. He looked at what he had written and a look of horror spread over the dark features. Then he gasped, shrieked and went into a fit of hysteria.

PARIS NOT FOREIGN

Visitor From U. S. Sought in Vain for French Quarter.

Shops, Subways, Music, Drinks and Even the Prize Fighter Were American Made — Nothing Novel was to Be Seen.

Paris—"Say, where's the French quarter of this town, anyway?" asked a visitor from the west of a clerk in the tourist agencies of Paris recently.

"I was mean—"

"Exactly what I say," said the stranger. "I came all the way to Paris to find something novel, something different, and all I've found is—say, the hottest pancake I've ever had—I read an American paper, though it's published over in Paris. I found that the jockeys who won races here before are now named Medlen, O'Connor, O'Neil. Sounds like a list of Broadway traffic equad 'cops.' Can you beat it?

"The first thing I saw when I went out on the boulevards was the sign 'American shoes.' Next door was a windowful of gaudy green and yellow neckties and celluloid collars—ties no hayseed would wear and celluloid collars like our motormen discarded years ago, but all labeled 'American.' Then a Camelot shoved a handbill at me. It had a facsimile of the stars and stripes and an 'ad' for an 'American dentist.'

"I dropped into a cafe and asked for glores. 'Sure,' said the clerk. 'We have re-gloves-American.' It was a bar rag, and he added: 'And rees es Amerikaine wean, also, a-nest-ce-pas?'

"When I went back to the hotel for lunch a maid brought in my laundry. 'Ah, ze glauque Americaine,' she said, fingering the collars, 'and I 'ave been given a shiny glass. I didn't know I still bor one adjoining an American laundry man would put on such a 'finish.' I saw then if I had 'ze there a manicure in this neighborhood?' I asked the clerk.

"'Mais, oui,' he answered. 'Just around the corner is an American—'

"I was riding in the subway that afternoon when some guy stood me up and volunteered: 'You Americans helped to build this line.' Finally I reached one of the residence sections and thought I had found Paris at last. Just then a hand organ started up and 'Tiddledink,' a tune which was made in Kansas City, I think.

"A French friend of mine took me driving in his motor car. By the way? he said, 'this machine is American made.' We nearly ran into a taxicab and on its side I saw the name of an American engineering firm.

"I went to one of the summer gardens that advertises 'tango matinees.' An orchestra played one piece of tango music then struck up 'Alexander's Ragtime Band'. I'll not stay to the accompaniment of 'Row, Row, Row.'

"By that time I thought I had earned a drink. Yes, I saw that American soda water sign but it dodged into a cafe across the street. When I was seated a garcon came up and asked: 'Grog American, M'sieu?' I said I'd rather have a chop so buy some flowers for my wife. I asked for 'La France' roses. Nothing doing. They gave me American Beauties. I happened to think just then that the last mail day and I had to send a business letter, so I hurried back to the hotel. I asked up the stenographer. 'This is an American typewriter,' she said, caressing the machine.

"While I was at dinner I tried to figure out why Christopher Columbus went to all the trouble of 'crossing the ocean to discover America when it would have been so much easier to run up to Paris. But I was desperately homesick and I wouldn't have me any more.

"After that I went to a music hall, one that they said was free Parisian. Out came a splieler to announce that 25,000 francs would be given any man who could face a fighter for ten rounds in a finish go bouts. Then the fighter appeared. He was—"

"George Carpentier?" asked the clerk.

"Not on your life! Jack Johnson! That was the finishing touch. I went to the hotel then in a hurry. In my room I tried to figure out what that one day in this great 'foreign city' had done me."

"And you found?"

"I found that that blasted cocher had slipped me an American quarter instead of a franc piece."

BIG RANCHES OF ARGENTINA

Vast Tracts of Land Recovered From Indians Supporting Great Cattle Herds.

Washington.—It is almost impossible to conceive of the enormous growth of the stock industry of Argentina in the last quarter of a century," said Ernest Maffet, a large cattleman of Buenos Ayres, at the Shoreham. "I believe a few of the two new countries are favorable Argentina can supply the country with a great quantity of beef, which would materially assist in reducing the cost of meats to the consumer.

"Less than forty years ago the great rich tracts of grass land in Argentina were practically unproductive. The Indians roamed the plains and general settlement on the land was dangerous and well nigh impossible. The Indians, however, were subdued in 1878, and that date saw the inception of the estancias or ranches and the systematic reclamation of the land to be used in a few years for the meat supplies of within today is stupendous.

The immensity of the cattle business can be estimated from the official returns recently published, which show that last year in the Argentine there were 25,000,000 cattle, 70,000,000 sheep and 7,000,000 horses. The cattle and horses are bred in the warmer parts of the country to the north, where alfalfa abounds, and the sheep in the districts to the southern provinces.

Some of the large ranches carry as many as 50,000 head of cattle and provide hunting grounds for many Eagenos and well nigh impassable forests. The most picturesque as well as useful figure on these ranches and forms the counterpart of his famous brother the cowboys of North America. Life on a ranch is far from unpleasant, and some of the big ranches under British control sweeting dinner dinners of a la custom. The Argentine wool is of high grade and a large part of it goes to supply the home markets."

MONGOLS KILL BRAVE MAN

British Telegraph Operator Laughs in the Face of and Taunts His Executioners.

Pekin.—News has reached here of the fate and death of an English telegraph operator named Grant and his four Chinese companions. It seems that Grant, together with Mr. Henningsen, the Danish superintendent of telegraphs, and other Europeans, had been sent into Mongolia to repair the Chinese government lines. The party separated at Tsuerin, Grant following one line and Henningsen another. The latter completed his work and returned to Pekin, where rumors were brought him that Grant had been slain. With Dr. Wolf and a Mr. Giles, Mr. Henningsen at once returned to Mongolia to look for the missing operator or to verify the rumors of his death.

When the party reached the place of the reported capture of Grant, he described the appearance of Grant to the local chief, who told him that such a man was in the camp of the Great Chief, 40 miles further on, but that he had joined the Mongols and would not leave them. When they reached the Great Chief's camp Henningsen was found there who bore a striking resemblance to the missing man. In the camp they found Grant's belongings, his saddle, pigs and boots. They asked the Russian about them and were informed that the things had been captured from the Chinese.

Henningsen then became sorry, and bitterly reproached the Russian. The latter replied that he had no idea the things had belonged to Grant. The Mongols had captured them all from the Chinese, and it was evident that the Great Chief had killed and robbed Grant. Henningsen then turned to the Mongols and upbraided them.

"You must have known that this was not your affair," he said, and he also said, "and as you have all my friend's belongings you must know what has become of him." "He is dead," said the Great Chief."

The Mongols who had shown the party several courtesies then drew their swords and the white man set to indige in any further questions.

Human life and those of all the party depend upon your discretion in this respect," he warned them, and we find out any more here, but t can tell you that Grant had been killed. Go away in peace. If Grant had done that he would not have been killed."

Having discussed the matter the party decided that they could do no more, but they learned from other Mongols that Grant and the three Chinese had been captured, and that the Mongols had decided to kill the Chinese. Grant was told that he could go to Kalgan but that his money had been destroyed, but he refused to abandon the Chinese.

The Mongols gave him the choice of going away at once or being shot with the Chinese. Grant chose the latter, and as he stood in front of the firing squad he insulted the Mongols with their cowardice and laughed in their faces until the Mongols wondered at his bravery.

U. S. HONORS LORD HALDANE

England's High Chancellor Has Busy Time—To Address Bar Association at Montreal.

New York.—Viscount Richard Burdon Haldane, lord high chancellor of Great Britain, has a busy time during his five-days' visit to the American continent. As president of the British Mission to the Mitary academy at West Point, banquets in New York and Montreal, an address before the American Bar association at Montreal and the acceptance of an honorary degree from McGill university were some of the events that occupied his time.

The prime object of his visit was to deliver an address before the meeting of the American Bar association at Montreal. His theme was the "Higher Nationality," a subject in law and ethics. Among his auditors were former President William H. Taft and

ODD CAUSES OF INTOXICATION

Fruit and Vegetables Capable of Having Disastrous Effect on the Nervous System.

Those who cannot resist the temptation of too many strawberries should not be surprised if they are attacked with "fruit drunkenness," for it is an extraordinary fact that the excessive eating of strawberries often results in many of the sensations connected with alcohol attacking the eater. These symptoms consist of giddiness, headache, blurred sight and occasionally double vision.

For strawberries contain far more acid than most of the other fruits in season at the same time, and complete cets very quickly on the nervous system, especially in the case of stout and full-blooded people. Excessive rhubarb eating can also produce symptoms of intoxication, owing to the excess of oxalic acid which lurks in this fruit.

But this is only one of the many ways in which symptoms of drunkenness can be developed, apart from excess of alcohol. It is quite possible to become temporarily intoxicated by excess of emotion, whether it be sorrow, joy or panic.

The explanation is that deep emotion deranges the nerve centers, which are thrown out of unison with each other, so that such actions as walking and talking become difficult. An invalid who lives on diet for come considerable time, and then accidently has a huge meal, can quite easily get symptoms of drunkenness on a chop or stock.

Strong coffee on an empty stomach also produces results similar to alcohol, whilst the fumes of turpentine are very liable to render you light-headed. Recently six men were reduced to a rolling condition while inhaling a cargo of this spirit from a barge at Bristol, England.

No "Ear for Music."

Dr. Birman-Bers, after making a study of the ear of famous musicians, has come to the conclusion that the construction of that organ has little to do with one's musical appreciation, and that it is not necessary to have even normal ear-drums to become a finished musician.

Dr. Birman-Bers says that his observations have shown that composers as a class have short, short and very thick ear-drums, and that other musicians other than composers have ear-drums the position of which varies from the slanting to the vertical, including all intermediate forms. Whether Dr. Birman-Bire's discovery will result in the discarding of that handy and much used phrase, "an ear for music," of course, remains to be seen.

SHEDS LIGHT ON MICROBES

Complete Collection in a Naval Museum for London Public Health Institution.

The Royal Institute of Public Health, London, has been placed in possession of one of the most remarkable scientific museums connected with public health, one which is intended to contain a complete collection of all microorganisms connected with important infectious diseases.

The growth of the microbe is exhibited, with their biological characteristics and their morphology in the form of diapositives and photo-micrographs. Many specimens have been obtained from abroad and the museum will play an important part in the work of the institute.

Moreover there are sections devoted to serological reactions, which render possible precise diagnosis of infectious disease, and non-pathogenic organisms, as well as a department for forensic medicine.

The science of public health which the institute specializes in has grown at such a rate during the past few years that the laboratories of the institute have had to be extended. Since 1910 the institute has placed at the disposal of the state what is known as the precipitation test for blood—an important test in criminal trials. Water, food, milk and drugs are analyzed for public authorities, and tests are carried out for infectious diseases. There is also a department of agricultural biology.

OPPORTUNITY FOR LOYALTY.

If there is one institution that is entitled to the loyal support of the people of Red Lake Falls it is the Red Lake county fair. The business men of the city have shown their appreciation of this fact by making it possible for all people in their employ to enjoy the afternoon program each day of the fair.

By their enthusiastic support in the past the people of the city have assisted greatly in making the county fair a success. Let's keep it up, for the fair merits all the boosting that its supporters can boost.

Then, here's the last opportunity to help the 1913 fair. Of course everybody is going to the fair this afternoon, but let's not stop then, for the last chance will not have arrived then. There is going to be a great big show Friday, Sept. 26, the last day of the fair. Let everybody go then, even at a financial sacrifice. Let's wind up the 1913 fair with a big public demonstration of enthusiasm.

It is expected that the Red Lake county people outside of the city will accept this suggestion heartily, for the Red Lake county fair is in fact a county fair, a farmers' fair for the special object aimed at is to make the fair of value to encouraging the growing of better crops and the raising of better live stock.

If the federal income tax brings distress to the supposed-to-be wealthy and well-to-do, relief may be found in the "Nelson cure."

It is certain that Taft's reciprocity program if carried out would not have hit the producers and farmers harder than the democratic tariff bill just passed. Yet the tariff bill is quite generally supported because it is part of the plan for tariff revision "downward," while the reciprocity plan was bitterly condemned. There is little doubt, that the agitation against reciprocity was financed by high tariff beneficiaries with the purpose of creating a sentiment inconsistent with the widespread demand for tariff revision "downward."

The writer should appreciate comments from the state press on our suggestion of putting the state fair grounds to some practical use during the period that it is not needed for fair purposes.—Menahga Journal.

All right, here's a suggestion. Move the buildings, and then plow, disc, harrow, etc., and plant to alfalfa. Then make it the pasture lot for Minneapolis' town herd.

CO-ADJUTORS' REMARKS.

Hibbing Mesaba Ore: There should be no complaint from the railroads over the passage of a proposed bill compelling all cars to be made of steel. The Iron of Ate, which could have been translated by the use of the stronger material, has cost far more than the new cars would.

St. Peter Herald: Minnesota's butter output for the last year had a value of almost $10,000,000. It pays to cackle the dairy cow.

St. Peter Press Press: If the progressive Republicans in Minnesota ever expect to do something worth while they had better discontinue their present methods of fighting each other. The rank and file voters stand for principles, but have very little sympathy for the scrapping now indulged in by the various factions. With them it is a question of purer politics and not a matter of preference, as evidently is the case with some of the parties now striving for supremacy.

Browns Valley Tribune: Minnesota is a growing state. There is no doubt about that, but its growth of population is far from keeping pace with its growth of public expenses. There are a lot of leaks in the public treasury of this state that ought to be plugged up.

Pine River Sentinel-Blaze: It takes Northern Minnesota brain and resourcefulness to start the measures that make the upbuilding of the newer portions of the state. The latest suggestion for the development of Northern Minnesota is that the state begin a dynamite factory, and dispose of the product to the farmers at a price that will enable them to go in for clearing land on a larger scale. This the state should do, and inasmuch as the farmers anywhere in the state has for years been benefitted by the manufacture of binder twine by the state, it would be no more than fair if the northern part should have the opportunity of being benefited by the state's manufacture of dynamite. The next legislature will have this problem to contend with and it is an easy prediction that it will be carried to a favorable conclusion. Northern Minnesota needs this aid.

Stillwater Gazette: Speaking of evidences of prosperity, the statement is made that more than 2,000,000 farmers of this country have telephones and several hundred thousand own automobiles. Why should the young man from the country desire a job in the city?

A NARROW ESCAPE

By SAMUEL E. BRANT

When young Mrs. Marshall came to L. leaving that the start one makes socially in a place counts for a good deal, she made herself agreeable to every one, became familiar with easy the best, was careful that her costumes were cut in the latest fashion, and also the dominant circle admitted of cavaliers for their prominent members, she rather encouraged the attentions of Huntington Dabney.

It must be admitted that keeping Mr. Dabney up to his duties as her cavalier was hard work. His main accomplishment was leading a cotillion, and he was not known to have any secondary one. Mrs. Marshall could stand to be put in a straitjacket cotume and listen to society gossip, to closing prices on stocks and the number of the last social climber who had fallen from an upper round of the ladder to the bottom, but found it irksome, indeed, to pretend to be flirting with Huntington Dabney in a solitary corner at a function in order to maintain a reputation for being one of those ladies to whom husband and children are a bore. And it was the harder for her because she was devoted both to her husband and her children. As for Mr. Marshall, she said him in the beginning what her designs really amounted to, but he didn't take sufficient interest in the matter to remember the explanation.

Among the other penalties Mrs. Marshall must pay for effecting an entrance into L.'s society was the attempt to fight slippers for several hours at dinner parties. Her feet were tender, and for this reason her footwear was made of light material, but even silken slippers made very small, binding the feet for hours on a stretch, will at last cause pain. It was during these at a dinner party for an unusually long period that brought about a mishap to Mrs. Marshall that came very near plunging her to the foot of the social ladder and rendering her an unfortunate one that she would not have been able to begin to climb again.

At the dinner in question Mr. Dabney was assigned to take Mrs. Marshall out. Mr. Marshall having been honored by being assigned to the hostess Mrs. Marshall's right hand to her cavalier, pretending to be so wrapt in her husband as not to notice the movement. Of course the gentlemen kept his seat, too, and was all attention. The lady watched out of the corner of her eye the retiring guests and saw that no special notice was taken of her remaining behind. As soon as the others were all gone she informed Mr. Dabney that she had lost her slipper under the table and had begged behind to recover it. Dabney started to get it himself, but the lady stopped him and scrambled down, search for the missing article. It was dark down there, and Mrs. Marshall was hemstitched. She wanted some one entirely unknown. Then Mr. Dabney's collapse on the floor of his discretion, and down he, too, went under the table to help.

The host had scarcely left the dining room before he bemused that the men were for a party friendly because all the ladies whose heads were not easily overturned by subtleties here since decided that they, too, wanted "another." Suddenly the dinner room door was thrown open, and a merry party entered. Mrs. Marshall, realizing the horror of the situation of being discovered under the table with her cavalier, whispered to him:

"For heaven's sake be still!"

Mr. Dabney obeyed orders. What else could he do? The host poured the liquor and all were standing around the table ready to drink when there under it loomed him say:

What the deuce name of Dabney and Mrs. Marshall? They didn't leave the dining room with the rest of us."

"They must have gone out by another door," suggested one of the women.

"Drink her down," said the host, "and we'll go and look for them. They must have gone up that stairway. I don't allow any scattering in my house," he added jocularly.

The revelers tossed off the brandy and ran laughing up the staircase. As soon as the last one had disappeared Mrs. Marshall scrambled out and ran like a deer to an unoccupied upper room, followed by Mr. Dabney with the slipper. Then Mrs. Marshall sat down to a piano and began to run over the keys. This brought those who looked for them, and all exclaiming:

"How did you do it?"

When Mrs. Marshall that night before going to bed told her husband of the nerve escape she had had he looked at her to holy horror.

"Great Scott, nonamny," he exclaimed, "that's the nearest thing to a catastrophe that ever happened in this family!"

MOB THREATENED TO LYNCH MURDERER

CASS LAKE PEOPLE HAD A VERY EXCITING TIME SATURDAY.

Cass Lake, Minn., Sept. 22—Mob violence was averted here Saturday night by Archdeacon H. F. Parshall of the Protestant Episcopal church who pleaded with a crowd of enraged men to let the law take its course in the case of John Lloyd,slayer of Dan Lilly, a bartender in Murphy's saloon.

In attempting to quiet Lloyd, who was creating a disturbance in the saloon, Lilly engaged in a scuffle with him and during the altercation Lloyd drew a revolver, shooting him below the heart. Lilly was shot instantaneous.

Lilly's slayer left the place immediately, dashing for the railroad tracks. A posse of 50 men was immediately organized and began to scour the neighborhood. Within an hour after the shooting, Lloyd was apprehended and lodged in jail guarded by heavily armed men.

On learning of the capture of Lilly's assailant, a crowd gathered about the jail and threatened to take the prisoner from the guards by force.

Archdeacon Parshall's eloquent plea calmed the mob and averted violence and a possible lynching.

After the mob had dispersed, the officers in order to avoid trouble, took Lloyd in an automobile and drove to Walker, where he was lodged in the county jail.

When seen in the jail today Lloyd gave an entirely different version of the tragedy. He said:

"I met a stranger on the street, and invited him to have a drink with me. We stepped into Lilly's saloon and ordered our drinks and commenced a conversation with the bartender. An argument resulted between the stranger and Lilly. Without any cause whatever Lilly turned to me and cursed me and threatened to 'get me' and started around the bar. I dodged around him and endeavored to escape him but he grabbed me and shoved me to the rear of the saloon.

"He jammed me into the woodbox and commenced handling me pretty rough. I told him I didn't want to fight with him as I am a much smaller man. He then dared me to use my gun and when I made to move to do so he said he would force me to use it. It was then that I drew my revolver and shot. I didn't know where the bullet struck him but I remember seeing him fall and I immediately left the saloon and gave myself up. I walked to George Dedrick's home and as he was not in I told my story to his wife and awaited for Mr. Dedrick to arrest me."

The last statement was confirmed by Mr. Dedrick, who stated that the prisoner had made no effort to escape whatever. The prisoner appears to be a steady working man and from appearances one would not judge him guilty of such a crime. He didn't appear to be worried over the catastrophe as he consoled himself by believing that he was forced to do it.

Farm House Burned.

The residence on the P. I. Anderson farm, occupied by the Lorentzen family, was burned to the ground early Friday morning. The family were asleep on the second floor and did not discover the fire until it had gained such headway that they had barely time to escape with their lives.

The neighborhood was aroused by the use of a telephone but assistance arrived too late to save any of the contents of the building.

Mrs. Lorentzen was so badly burned in trying to make her way thru the lower rooms, that she received the services of a physician. Dr. Swanson making a hurried auto trip shortly after the fire.

The origin of the fire is unknown. —St. Hilaire Spectator.

ST. HILAIRE

Mrs. Lorentzen, who was badly burned Friday morning in the fire which destroyed their home five miles west of this village, died today as a result of her injuries. In making her escape through the lower rooms, which were ablaze, she was severely burned about the chest. After suffering intense agony, she passed away at 4 o'clock this morning.

Dr. C. Swanson has let a contract for the erection of a two story combination residence and office on the lots north of A. J. Reed's place on Broadway. The plans call for six living rooms, the front half of the second floor being taken up by the doctor's office and waiting room.

Richard, the one year old son of Mr. and Mrs. R. T. Hovel, died early Monday morning after a severe attack of summer complaint. The funeral was held from the Swedish church on Tuesday, Rev. Gyring officiating.

Mrs. Herman Adams and children, who have visited here the past month, left Monday for their home in St. Paul.

Glenn Starr, Ralph Hall and James Walker left Monday for points in Montana. It is their intention to register for the opening of the Fort Peck Indian Reservation and to visit different parts of the western country, with a view to locating.

KERNELS OF CORN.

Careful Attention on This Point Means Increased Yield.

(A. D. Wilson, Extension Superintendent, University Farm, St. Paul.)

Seed corn with deep, well filled kernels and small cobs has a high shelling percentage and tends toward the production of a high yield of shelled corn per acre. It should be selected as far as possible without danger of late maturity. The shallower kernel indicates earlier maturity and judgment must be used in deciding just how far to go in saving kernels of the type that we would like to be able to mature but that the frost may catch.

The only way to be safe is to select ears that have matured before the time at which killing frosts may be expected in ordinary years. This means about the week of Sept. 15 in Minnesota. On this account the Agricultural College urges the selection of seed corn during the week set aside by the governor's proclamation as "Seed Corn week."

At least fifty ears of corn should be selected for each acre to be planted the following year. With this number that promises early maturity further selection can be made by more careful study of the kernels and by eliminating those that fail to germinate until the twenty ears showing the best type of kernel, the highest shelling percentage, and the strongest germination test remain.

(a). Good types of kernels of corn Note broad tips. Such kernels are richer in food nutrients, have larger stronger germs and yield a larger proportion of corn to cob than do kernels with small pointed tips, like those shown in (b).

CHOLERA SERUM BULLETIN.

New Law Provides Serum---New Bulletin Explains Disease---A Fight to Check Fifty Millions Annual Loss.

A law recently put into operation by the Minnesota legislature provides for the sale of hog cholera serum at one-third of a cent per cubic centimeter by the Agricultural Experiment Station at University Farm, St. Paul. Virus is furnished free of charge when it is advisable to use it with the serum. These prices are lower than the previous prices and the serum may be administered by competent veterinarians or other persons especially authorized by the Minnesota State Live Stock Sanitary Board. This is but one more step in the fight against a disease which is estimated to have caused losses amounting to $10,000,000 in 1912, one state alone losing $10,000,000 worth of hogs. Four years' records of serum-treated animals in Minnesota indicated that the losses in healthy herds are insignificant and that about 99 per cent of the animals treated in sick herds may be saved.

In order that the use of the serum and the nature of the disease may be more fully understood, Dr. H. P. Hoskins, in charge of the serum plant, has prepared "Hog Cholera," Bulletin 37 of the Minnesota Farmers' Library published by the Extension Division. It is written in simple English and avoids technical medical terms. Its illustrations contrast healthy and sick animals and show the appearance of the lungs, kidneys and intestines of hogs dead from cholera. These, together with the careful statement of the symptoms of the disease and of other disorders sometimes mistaken for cholera, will help owners to decide whether to order serum. A dosage table stated the amount of serum required for hogs of various sizes and enables the owner to decide in advance just how much serum to order and how much the treatment will cost. Sales from the payment for a veterinarian's services. The Virulent Blood or Simultaneous method of vaccinating pigs at the age of three or four weeks is also described briefly its cost is much lower than that of serum treatment.

About 45,000 of these bulletins have already been distributed, but those who were not reached in the first distribution may secure copies by addressing the Office of Publications, University Farm, St. Paul.

LOSS FROM POOR SEED.

Not Acclimated and of Low Producing Vitality.

(By A. F. Woods, Dean, Dept. of Agriculture, University Farm, St. Paul.)

The importance of natural variation and differences in climate in relation to agricultural production has never been fully realized. Under natural conditions only those survive which can modify their habits of growth so as to make a successful readiness to destructive influences and propagate their kind.

When man enters in as a factor he may, and usually does in a considerable measure, interfere with these natural adjustments. He selects individuals and cultivates them for some natural peculiarity, and in a result intensifies these features; but unless he follows nature's methods and destroys the plants that are not best adapted to his conditions and requirements he soon gets a mixture of individuals, good, bad and indifferent, and cultivates them all together.

On the other hand, if he selects the individuals that give the best results under his peculiar conditions and prevents their crossing with the less desirable sorts, he soon develops a strain of high efficiency and productiveness for those particular conditions; but, like nature, he must continually select the good and persistently destroy the bad, or eventually lose all and see the variety "run out."

The great importance of selecting and growing seed under the conditions under which the future crop must be grown is now apparent.

SYNOPSIS.

George Anderson and wife are a prosperous looking man come out of the apartment house in which Orlando Brotherson has his home and pass on. Coincidence attracts them to the elevator, where it is found that the beautiful wife of Edith Challoner has fallen dead. Another tenant, Miss Doris Dorle, is found in her bonds in the room. The hotel manager declares him to be Orlando Brotherson. Physicians find that Miss Challoner was stabbed and not shot, which proves to be the work of a woman. Mrs. Anderson is a keen observer and detective. She and husband, take up the case. Mr. Chevenix Challoner, a brother of Miss Challoner, is charged, which all believe to be true. Five letters except one, which shows that the writer was acquainted. Mr. Challoner was visited by Orlando Brotherson, who, according to the latter's statement to Brotherson, who professed to be interested under the name of Dunn. He is an inventor. Brotherson tells the coroner Miss Challoner received him with scorn when he called to see her husband, and that while the motive of the murder of a woman remains in which some details were similar to it. Challoner admits that letter admits his daughter was deeply in love with Dunn. Mrs. Anderson and Brotherson are holding the fatal building with Brotherson. He watches for Dunn's return as a spy. Mrs. Anderson is also watching. Brotherson's life is in a most delightful Brotherson's life. Brotherson's best friend is murdered. Brotherson is arrested. He admits him and admits the intimacy of Miss Challoner. Brotherson is under with Edith Challoner's friendship ordered out to Brotherson. He declares the letters were not written by him. Brotherson is suspended by Brotherson, who declares he recognized him at once.

"Letters! Fury thickened the speaker's voice, and that a savage gleam to his eye. 'Forgeries! Make believes! Miss Challoner never wrote the drivel you dare to designate as letters. It was concocted at police headquarters. They made me tell my story and then they found some one who could write a poetic pen. I'm obliged to them for the confidence they show in my credulity. I credit Miss Challoner with such words as have been given me to read here today? I know the lady, and I have myself. Nothing that passed between us, not an event in which we were both concerned, has been forgotten by me, and no feature of our intercourse fits the language you have ascribed to her. On the contrary, there is a lamentable contradiction between facts as they were and the fancies you have made her indulge in. And this, as you must acknowledge, not only proves their falsity, but exonerates Miss Challoner from all possible charge of sentimentality."

"Yet she certainly wrote those letters. We had them from Mr. Challoner. The woman who brought them was really her maid. We have not deceived you in this."

"I do not believe you."

It was not offensively said; but the conviction it expressed was unbearable. Sweetwater recognized the tone, as one of truth, and inwardly laid down his arms. He would never like this man; there was too much iron in his fiber; but he had to acknowledge that as a foe he was invulnerable and therefore admirable to one who had the good sense to appreciate him.

"I do not want to believe you." This did Brotherson supplement his former sentence. "For if I were to attribute those letters to her, I should have to acknowledge that they were written to another man than myself. And this would be anything but agreeable to me. Now I am going to my room and to my work. You may spend the rest of the evening or the whole night, if you will, betcing at that hole. As a heretofore, the labor will be all yours, and the indifference mine."

With a satirical play of feature which could hardly be called a smile, he nodded and left the room.

CHAPTER XXI.

A Change.

It's all up. I'm beaten on my own ground." Thus confessed Sweetwater, in great dejection, to himself. "But I'm going to take advantage of the permission he's just given me and continue the listening act. Just because he told me to and just because I don't think I won't. I'm sure it's no worse than to spend hours of restless tossing in bed, trying to sleep."

But our young detective did neither.

As he was putting his supper dishes away, a messenger boy knocked at his door and handed him a note. It was from Gryce and ran thus:

"Stick off, if you can, and as soon as you can, and meet me in Twenty-ninth street at the corner. Have been made which alters the whole situation."

CHAPTER XXII.

O. B. Again.

"What's happened? Something very important? I ought to hope so after this confounded failure!"

"Failure? Didn't he read the letters?"

"Yes, he read them. Had to, but he denies everything. Said she would never have written such letters to him, even gone so far as to declare that if she did write them—the most he strangely ignorant of her it was writing they were meant for some other man than himself. All out, but —" A bitch of the shoulder conveyed Sweetwater's disgust. His sense of good nature was strangely disturbed.

"He says that, does he? Come, now! prejudice aside, what's your honest opinion of the man you've had under your eye and ear for three solid weeks? Speak up, my boy."

"I can't. I hate the fellow. I hate anyone who makes an idol ridiculous. He—well, well, if you'll have it, sir, I will say this much. If it weren't for that blasted coincidence of the two deaths equally mysterious, equally under his eye, I'd stake my life on his honesty. But that coincidence stumps me and—and a sort of feeling I have here."

It is to be hoped that the slap he gave his breast, at this point, carried off some of his superfluous emotion. "You can't account for a feeling, Mr. Grryce. The man has no heart. He's as hard as rocks."

"You're found no evidence against him?"

"N—no."

"Then listen to this. The test with the letters failed, because what he said about them was true. They were not meant for him. Miss Challoner had another lover."

"Only another? I thought there were a half-dozen, at least."

"Another upon she favored. The letters found in her possession—not the ones she wrote herself, but those which were written to her over the signature O. B. were not all from the same hand. Experts have been busy with them for a week, and their reports are unanimous. The O. B. who wrote the threatening letters received indged to by Orlando Brotherson, was not the O. B. who penned all of those love letters. The similarity in the writing misled us at first, but once the doubt was raised by Mr. Challoner's discovery of an allusion to one of those letters which pointed to another writer than Mr. Brotherson, ood experts had no difficulty in reaching the decision I have mentioned."

"Two O. B.'s! Isn't that incredible, Mr. Grryce?"

"Yes, it is incredible; but the incredible is not the impossible. The man you've been shadowing admits that these expressive effusions of Miss Challoner were poetic pen. Let us see, then, if we can find the man who were meant for."

"The second O. B.?"

"Yes."

Sweetwater's face instantly lit up.

"Do you mean that I—after my egregious failure—may have hold again on the dunce's seat? That you will give me this new job?"

"Yes. We don't know'af a better man."

"The superintendent—how does he feel about it?"

"He was the first one to mention you."

"And the inspector?"

"Is glad to see you on a new tack."

A pause, during which the eager light in the young detective's eyes clouded over. Presently he remarked:

"How with the finding of another O. B. after Mr. Brotherson's position? To my mind, the discovery of a more favored lover brings in an element of motive which may rob our self-reliant friend of some of his complacency. We may further, rather than destroy, our case against Brotherson by locating a second O. B."

Mr. Grryce's eyes twinkled.

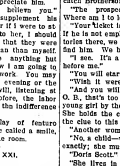
"You won't need to. One look may more irksome," he smiled. "The boy has given us little bones you may be just beyond the works. But let me tell you, stranger," he went on with the some precipitation—

But here he was called off, and Sweetwater lost the conclusion of his warning, if warning it was meant to be. He had troubles enough to involve. He stood a moment, taking in the prospect; decided that the works and the works alone made the down, and started in a line which would have been pointed out to him. His way lay through the chief business street, and was not unconcealed by the morning fog gave but a passing glance to the rows on rows of workmen's dwellings stretching away to the left to seemingly interminable distance. His main glance he certainly took to the fact that the sidewalks were blocked with people and wondered if it were a holiday. If so, it must be an enforced one, for the faces showed little joy. Possibly a strike was on. The surly-looking workmen now gathered on young faces and old, argued some trouble; but if the trouble was that, they were all heads turned indifferently from the works, and why were the works themselves in full beast?

These questions he may have asked himself and he may not. His attention was entirely centered on the house he saw before him and on the possible developments awaiting him there. Nothing else mattered. Briskly he stepped out along the sandy road, and after a turn or two which hid him quite from the works and its surrounding buildings, he came out upon the highway and this house.

It was a low and unpretentious one, and had not one distinguishing feature. The porch which hung well over the doorway was square in shape and gave an air of picturesqueness to an otherwise simple exterior; a picturesqueness which was much enhanced in the effort by the background of Wissintaba forest, which united the foreground of this pleasing picture with a great chain of hills which held the works and town in its ample basin.

As he approached the doorstep, his mind involuntarily formed an anticipatory image of the absent owner. The stitches in embroidery were like a fairy, fairy wanting a way from the works and its surrounding buildings, he came out upon the highway and this house.



"Dear Little Doris!"

in finding this child. It was to her Miss Challoner's last letter was addressed.

"Dear Little Doris!

"I begin to see."

"No, you don't, Sweetwater. The affair is as deep as your hat; nobody sees. We're just feeling along a mysterious line which may or may not be dominable friend he seems to have developed in her. I only wish he'd give us some facts; they would have been serviceable. But the letters reveal nothing except that he knew Doris. He writes in one of them: 'Doris is learning to embroider. It's like a fairy weaving a cobweb!' Doris isn't a very common name. She must be the same little girl to whom Miss Challoner wrote from time to time."

"Was this letter signed O. B.?"

"Yes, they all are. The only difference between his letters and Brotherson's is this: Brotherson's retain the date and address; the second O. B.'s do not."

"How next? Turn off, do you mean?"

"Yes, or rather, neatly cut away; not as some of the scrologee were kept, the only means by which we can locate the writer is through this girl Doris."

"If I remember rightly Miss Challoner's letter to this child was free from all mystery."

"Quite so. It is as open as the day. That is why it has been sanctioned as showing the freedom of Miss Challoner's mind five minutes before that fatal thrust."

Sweetwater took up the sheet Mr. Grryce pushed towards him and re-read those lines:

"Dear Little Doris:

"It is a snowy night, but it-it all bright inside and I feel so chit it is mlod or body. I hope it is so in the little cottage of Derby; that my little friend is as happy with harsh winds blowing from the mountains as she was on the Summer day she came to see me at this hotel. I like to think of her as cheerful and beaming, as jubcloy to tasks which make her so womonly and sweet. She is often, often in my mind.

"Affectionately your friend,

"EDITH CHALLONER."

"That to a child of sixteen!"

"Just so."

"Doesn't she spells something besides Doris?"

"Yes there-is a Doris. Remember that O. B. says in one of his letters, 'The Dorle I refer to reminder'?"

"Yes, I remember that."

"So you must first find Doris."

"Very good, sir."

"And as Miss Challoner's letter was directed to Derby, Pa., you will go to Derby."

"Yes, sir."

"Anything more?"

"I've been reading this letter again," he went on, "and—"

"The last sentence expresses a hope."

"That has been noted."

Sweetwater's eyes slowly rose till they rested on Mr. Grryce's face. "I'll cling to the thread you're given me. I'll work through the labyrinth before me till I reach him."

Mr. Grryce smiled; but there was more sag, wisdom and sympathy in the youthful enthusiasm in that smile than there was confidence or hope.

CHAPTER XXIII.

Doris.

"A young girl named Doris Scott?" The station-master looked somewhat sharply at the man he was addressing, and decided to give the directions asked.

"There is but one young girl in town of that name," he declared, "and she lives in little house you see just beyond the works. But let me tell you, stranger," he went on with the some precipitation—

But here he was called off, and Sweetwater lost the conclusion of his warning, if warning it was meant to be. He had troubles enough to involve. STATE NEWS IN BRIEF

STATE BUSHEL TAX ADDS TO REVENUE

AFFECTS 240,427,302 BUSHELS OF GRAIN IN VARIOUS ELEVATORS.

INTERESTING FACTS SHOWN

1,507 Elevators in Minnesota and Nine Counties Without Any —Pels County Has Most, 63.

St. Paul.—Minnesota's special grain tax, usually known as the bushel tax, will bring 240,427,302 bushels of grain under taxation this year. This is a great increase over the quantity so listed last year, but how much greater is not known, as the tax commissioner's figures show only the amount of taxes collected. The special grain tax of 1912 produced a revenue of $35,059.56, but this year's lists will produce $47,418.53.

Purpose of Tax.

The bushel tax was devised as a means of taxing grain in public elevators. It was apparent to the state's officials that to impose a personal property tax on all grain in elevators May 1 was unjust, for only those who had grain in elevators on that day would be taxed and others would escape.

The old method also interfered with the grain trade as many refused to ship grain to terminal points or even Minnesota points until they knew that it was safe from the tax collector. The elevator men thought there was no hot water all the time, because they objected to paying any tax on the grain stored with them and also objected to disclosing the names of the owners. Often 'as a matter of fact they could not give the information as to ownership because of the transfer of elevator receipts in the ordinary course of business.

The Basis of It.

So the special grain tax was devised on the basis that all grain passing through a public elevator should pay a tax, but the rate should be so small as to not prove burdensome. The statutory rate was fixed at one-fourth of a mill for wheat and flax and one-fortieth of a mill for coarse grains.

The figures of the tax commission show that 128,522,541 bushels of wheat and flax and 101,253,541 bushels of coarse grains will come under the provisions of the bushel tax this year. These figures naturally bear no relation whatever to the grain yield of Minnesota, as much of it is used at home and much goes direct to mills to be ground into flour and feed and does not get to an elevator at all.

There are 1,507 elevators in the state which the tax commission has under its special jurisdiction and one of the curious facts of their distribution is that there are nine counties in the state of Minnesota without public elevators. Another curious fact is that Hennepin county does not have in the number of elevators, for Polk county with sixty-three stands alone in this respect, while Renville has one more than Hennepin.

ALFALFA EXHIBIT IN FIELD

Farmers Show Products From Field and Home and Serve a Big Dinner.

Fergus Falls.—The farmers of Star Lake township in Ottertail county, believe in giving a good setting to their predominating interests, as shown by the fact that 500 men and families assembled in an alfalfa field last week to hold the second annual exhibit of the Lake Side Farmers' society. A big picnic dinner was a part of the day's program.

Prizes were awarded for farm products and articles of home manufacture, including corn, potatoes, vegetables, grains, both in sheaf and threshed, some livestock, bread, pastry, canned fruits and vegetables, butter, needlework, cooking by the girls and woodwork exhibited by the boys.

The program for the day was furnished by the county agricultural agent of Ottertail county, F. B. Jamison, and the supervisor of county farms, Frank B. Bulmer of Morris. Mr. Johnson spoke of the importance of early selection of seed corn and the value of the work of the farmers' clubs. Mr. Johnson told the farmers that they must go to the field to before killing frosts and select good type of ears from strong thrifty stalks, hanging them up for curing the same day, or better the same half day, that selection is made if good seed is expected to be bed for next year's planting.

The corn may be carried by D. A. carrying a sack over one's shoulder, taking the ears in sheaves on a rake, or by the use of a long sled or stone boat with a box that will hold four or five bushels which may be drawn between the rows by a horse. The double benefit arising out the corn from methods of arranging corn for drying were demonstrated.

Mr. Balmer told those present that every former in Otterall county would gain ten acres of alfalfa, were he applying the conditions required for its successful growing, by paying all tax on the grain stored with them and also objected to disclosing the names of the owners. Often 'as a matter of fact they could not give the information as to ownership because of the transfer of elevator receipts in the ordinary course of business.

MOVEMENT TO START OCT. 13

Better Farming and Good Roads School of Instruction to Move Across Southern Minnesota.

Mankato.—The better Farming and Good Roads School of instruction, which is to move across southern Minnesota in charge of Secretary John F. Deere of the Southern Minnesota Better Development league, is arousing a great deal of interest in the southern tier of counties, through which it is to pass. It will start at Caledonia, Oct. 12, and close at St. James, Oct. 17, after having gone as far west as Pipestone and Luverne. Mr. Deere is receiving reports that show how much interest is being aroused.

At Austin, the County Agents' associations and the Farmers' Grain association are co-operating with the Commercial club in arranging plans for the entertainment of the party, which will comprise several automobile loads. A company of Austin autoists will meet the expedition at Preston and pilot it into Austin, and a similar courtesy will be extended by Albert Lea autoists. The Albert Lea Commercial club is making extensive plans, and Fulda, which is on the route, but is not located on a main paving point, has a special request that the party make a short detour Oct. 17, which is the date that the boosters are scheduled to pass through.

Secretary Deets has received communications from Professor Lewis, of the Wisconsin agronomist, and D. A. Wallace, editor of the Farmer, stating that they will join the party making the trip. Twin City papers are to be represented.

The four will embrace thirteen counties, and some good talkers will address the farmers at the various towns on the itinerary. Mr. Deets will speak on the different phases of farming. Lectere have been sent to commercial clubs and others interested in the route, the towns where the party will stop at interest.

Secretary Deets spoke at St. Charles today, at the county fair, on the subject of better farming and better development. On Sunday he will address the farmers at the Plainview fair, and on Friday at Westbrook. He will speak at Winona, Sept. 18; Farmington, Sept. 19; Northfield, Sept. 22, and Arlington, Sept. 23. He will appear at all of the principal fairs.

ELWELL ROAD LAW CASE ON

Supreme Court Eventually May Get Test Litigation Started by County Commissioners.

Minneapolis.—A test of the Elwell road law has been begun by the board of county commissioners following a conference with members of the Civic and Commerce association and the case eventually may be taken to the supreme court.

When roads are constructed under the law the state pays one-half of the cost, the county one-third and the remainder is assessed against the property benefited.

The test will be made on the Rockford road between Osseo and Rockford, and the commissioners refuse to pay the assessment. They therefore the law unconstitutional.

To begin a test case, the county commissioners today voted to pay one-half of the engineer's assessment, thus assuming the burden that the fight will cost on the property owners.

Alexis Caswell, representing the Civic and Commerce association, said the association, through a taxpayer, will at once ask for a injunction to restrain the commissioners from paying more than one-half of the total expense of the road. The case may then go to the district and supreme courts.

TRIAL OF AUTOIST BEGINS

State at Red Wing Said to Have Decided to Make Example of Case.

Red Wing.—No Prison Term.

Red Wing.—Ralph H. Babcock of Minneapolis must stand trial on a charge of manslaughter in the second degree for running over and killing Mrs. Alfred Anderson with his auto. It was ruled that he must appear to make a settlement of $5,000 with the Anderson family and would plead guilty if assurances were given he would secure a prison sentence by paying a fine of $1,000.

But County Attorney Thomas Mohn would not listen to the disposition of the case in this way.

It will be difficult to secure a jury owing to the publicity given the case in the press.

Babcock is represented by F. D. Lambee of Minneapolis, F. M. Wilson of Red Wing and Attorney Mohn of Zumbrota. Attorneys Thomas and Albert Lee are conducting the prosecution. The young man's father, mother and sister accompanied him to the courthouse.

Back Broken; Going 6,000 Miles.

St. Paul.—A St. Paul boy with a broken back is going on a 6,000-mile journey to his home in Poland to see his father before he dies. Train schedules were altered and the boy's condition was given to write a letter of introduction to assist the young man traveler on his long journey. He is Martin ("Mike") Wascak, 19 years old, who for 13 months has lain at the St. Joseph hospital unable to sit up. He lies on a pneumatic pillow in a wheelchair and by that contrivance will make the long journey home.

Tremendous Rain Storm.

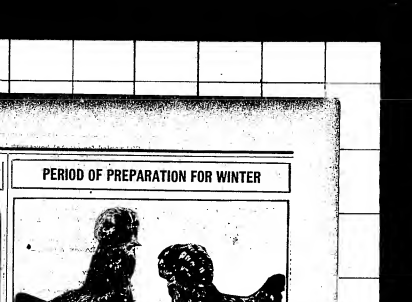
Fergus Falls.—This locality had a tremendous rainstorm last week, the fall in this city being officially reported at 3.26 inches. This is the heaviest rain in years. The rain did but little damage in the country.

Sues Brewery for Slander.

Albert Lea.—An action for $10,000 damages against the Schmidt Brewing company of St. Paul for slander has been started by L. J. Reimer of this city, formerly local manager of the brands' house.

PERIOD OF PREPARATION FOR WINTER

Fine Laces Within Reach of All



Two Houdan pullets hatched April, 1912. They commenced laying in September and from October 1 to April 1 of this year, laid 201 eggs.

(By RAT VAN BENTHUYSEN.)

From the early part of August until the end of October the rear-ed stock is going through a period of preparation for the coming winter by getting rid of the culls and old ones and acquiring a beautiful new one. A slight molt is also experienced by some young pullets that have been hatched very early in the year. The only time we have ever had a chance to observe this, however, was to the best of our knowledge, the pullets that were hatched in February. These began to lay in the latter part of August, and while they went through a slight molt in the last part of October, this molt was so gradual that it did not seem to affect the egg yield to any noticeable extent. Other experiences that we have heard of differ from this one the above is probably the exception rather than the rule. Generally speaking, it appears that pullets hatched earlier than the first part of March will go through the molt in October and November and will not resume laying until late in January. Therefore, it would seem that old hens or April and early May pullets should be kept over and molted for early winter laying and for breeding purposes.

Regarding the heavy molt which happens after the pullet year, several items have been made from time to time, to see if this molt could be "forced" so that the hens would resume laying at least in November. In forcing the molt, the general plan is to starve the fowls for a period of from four to six weeks and then feed heavily during the remainder of the period. It has generally been found, however, that the fowls will molt almost as quickly under normal conditions as they will if forced.

It is not generally known that the time for a fowl to complete its molt extends from about 60 days (in the pullet year) to over 200 days (for the older birds). Therefore, if a rearling hatch comes in the middle of August she will not have her full plumage until about the middle of November. This, however, is the earliest date for the molt to commence and in some cases the hens do not begin till the last part of October or early in November. When such a late molt takes place the time for the complete molt is generally not much more than two months.

Since it has practically been proven that forcing of the molt is not effective, except in a few individual cases, it would seem that the only thing to do in this regard is to take as good care as is possible with the flock so that the molt will come rather mute to the best health. It will be understood by anyone that the shedding of feathers and the building up of the new covering is a strain on any fowl and while the owner is putting almost no returns from his flock this is the time when the feeding details must be most carefully watched. The usual result is, however, to neglect the flock during this period simply because they have not grieving good results.

One of the best recommended mixtures to be fed the flock during the molting period is given below. If one does not vary much from the feed given during the rest of the year except that cracked corn is used instead of whole corn and not as much corn is fed during the warmer months as during winter.

Scratch mixture—Wheat 10 lbs., oats 10 lbs., cracked corn 16 lbs.

Hopper mixture—Corn 4 qts., wheat bran 2 lbs., wheat middlings 2 lbs., oil meal 1 lb., alfalfa meal 1 lb., and scraps 1 lb.

This latter mixture was used by the Cornell experimental station in tests along these lines.

Our general opinion is that more thought should be given to the question of molting, and that careful attention must be given flocks at this time. The days when 60 eggs per year per hen would be considered excellent have passed and it is remembered that we now throw out the hen with such a record and save everything the 100-egg hen; we should also remember that the results we expect cannot be reached unless we give the flock the best care that we possibly can and consider no details too small to be overlooked in the daily routine.

SMART FALL GOWN.

Who wouldn't undertake to own a pretty boudoir cap sod gown when such easy directions for same are dollars and a half expenditure? Since manufacturers of laces have said good by to the old hand-made patterns and have turned their attention to the original designs that can be made by machinery, we have a new order of flounces and most exquisite laces that cost hardly more than fine, plain cotton fabrics. This adaptation of design to mechanical workmanship has done wonders in putting pretty things within the reach of even woman. These laces are woven in wide flouncings as well as narrow edgings and can be used like any other thin material. They have made a tremendous advance in popularity this season.

The cheaper varieties of machine-made laces are not specially durable, but they are not intended for garments demanding durability. But with a modest outlay one can buy the Gerval and better grades of shadow lace and be sure of their wearing qualities. It is fascinating that so hard on flimsy laces. It is so easily done that garments made with lace trimmings should never be sent to a laundry but done at home. No starch log, no blueing is necessary. They are washed on either the rear-ed stock is going through a period of preparation for the coming winter by getting rid of the culls and old ones and acquiring a beautiful new one. This latter mixture was used by the Cornell experimental station in tests along these lines.

Our general opinion is that more thought should be given to the question of molting, and that careful attention must be given flocks at this time. The days when 60 eggs per year per hen would be considered excellent have passed and it is remembered that we now throw out the hen with such a record and save everything the 100-egg hen; we should also remember that the results we expect cannot be reached unless we give the flock the best care that we possibly can and consider no details too small to be overlooked in the daily routine.

Cotton Percale Apron.

Chiffon Motor Bonnet.

Among the attractive new automobile caps is one of two thicknesses of chiffon, made like a sunbonnet. The chiffon is green and blue and is shirred over a wire frame which fits closely about the head and forms out over the face. The fullness of the bonnet is blue and the strings is green.

Ruffs is also used for automobile bonnets. A pretty pattered cap is woven of colored straws and is mounted over a shirred foundation of colored silk. A frill of the silk about the face and neck gives the effect of the ruffle. A silk chin string fastens at each side under a bunch of artificial flowers.

Cretonne Slips.

Cretonne slips to put over frocks that are hanging in the closet or wardrobe are convenient. They are made of two pieces of cretonne, cut in semi-circular outline, a little bigger than a dress hanger. They are seamed together about the curved edge, with a little opening left for the neck of the dress.

Novel Veil.

To the straight edge two long, straight scalloped flounces are gathered, long enough to come to the bottom of the frock. These straight pieces can be seamed together or fastened with tapes or socket fasteners.

Autumn Leaf Decoration.

Sprays of autumn leaves, done in rich colors, are now used as a decoration on all sorts of dressy clothes, edged with gimp. The effect is strikingly beautiful, as if the leaves had just fallen and accidentally upon the them.

Novel Veil.

An interesting hat is printed chiffon, mounted on net, and then wadded, set on with silver foil. The net and chiffon are pulled to the straw about the edge of the brim with gold or silver braid.

SMART FALL GOWN.

PLEASE HIM WITHOUT FUSS

Not Hard to Put Some Dainty Handiwork on the Front of Husband's or Brother's Silk Shirt.

A man doesn't like "fussy" things, but he'll appreciate a bit of handiwork on the front of his silk shirt. Ask him, for instance, what he'd like and you are afraid that you can't do the shirt entire, buy one from his beberdasher. The material best suited for the purpose is striped—striped stripes about an inch apart or on a white ground—so be sure that you get his favorite color. Most men are fond of lavender. Now stamp the center of the white ground between the colored stripes, about two inches apart, tiny designs not larger than a ten-cent piece will be large enough. There is a tiny round five-petaled flower with a dot colling in the center and with a split dot to fill the center space when the petals meet that is easily drawn or stamped by even the novice, and looks well. If preferred, one can use the same difficult design for the cuffs and the bosom, but one will find it quite enough to do with the bosom. Fed the designs well and work them in white silk floss. Floss the color of the stripe and use floss for the rather conspicuous. There is a quiet elegance about the white on a white ground that most men would prefer. It is necessary to consider only the part which shows when the coat is unbuttoned. Of course, a bandeau-bordered shirt would be lovely, but it leaves pleasure the wearer still more.—Philadelphia North American.

New Sashes.

The invention of new sashes there seems no end. These long lengths of colored material are an absolute rage in Paris, and they are worn by women and girls of all ages. Some of the newest sashes are tied directly in front, in a large, full bow; others are tied at the side, for being low down; others, again, are wound round and round in Egyptian fashion and simply knotted at the back.

All the art shades of blue are in demand for these sashes, especially the pale kinds known as Madonna.

The wearing with pale white dresses we find smart sashes of printed gauze, which exquisite various shades of red intermingled with touches of black and deep blue. Almost all the sashes of the season are fringed in order that they may fall heavily.

Gathered Skirts.

All smart skirts now are gathered at the back of the waistline, and the plain, close-fitting skirt—at this point of distinctly out of the fashionable; of course, the fullness is between the waistline and hip only, for before the hips the garment must cling closely to the figure.

Autumn Leaf Decoration.

Sprays of autumn leaves, done in rich colors, are now used as a decoration on all sorts of dressy clothes, edged with gimp. The effect is strikingly beautiful, as if the leaves had just fallen and accidentally upon the them.

Novel Veil.

An interesting hat is printed chiffon, mounted on net, and then wadded, set on with silver foil. The net and chiffon are pulled to the straw about the edge of the brim with gold or silver braid.

GUINEA FOWL IS MOST DELICIOUS

Cross of Pearl and White Will Produce Carcass Resembling English Grouse.

(By MICHAEL E. BOYER.)

The Guinea hen is a good layer, but on account of the wild, gamey flavor, it is more suited for the game carcass for table use. However, by turning in the right direction a carcass of a considerable profit will be derived. The flesh is the nearest substitute we have for the wild game.

The Guinea is of a roving disposition and seems to be the best known destroyers of insects.

The Guinea season starts in early April and continues until October, the hen laying as many as 120 eggs in a season. In the early part of the season it is not advisable to let the Guineas hen hatch a brood, as she is of too restless a nature, and will not make a desirable mother or proper attention. But after the first of July, on account of the warm weather, she will be found to be a good hatcher and reared with a brood.

It requires four weeks to hatch out Guineas. The hen always hides her nest in the grass, so some care is necessary place. As it comes off the nest it gives a shrill cry, and in that way the hidden place may be found. As soon as the keets are fat enough to be eaten they are ready for the table, and they are worth almost as much as chickens. Especially the keets of the Pearl and White Guineas will produce carcass closely resembling that of the English grouse. If rightly cooked, the meat of even an old bird will be tender and delicious, while that of the young bird is unsurpassed as a broiler or fryer. The dressed Guinea has a round, plump body, good-sized breast, and small bones.

Guineas will pair if the sexes are equal. They generally lay between the hours of ten o'clock in the morning and two o'clock in the afternoon. Until well feathered, the young Guineas are delicate and tender. It is not advisable to hatch before June. The Guineas are not as easy as much for the young as does the hen, particular during the day and hovering them at night.

The male bird is larger than the female is more noisy and has a more different call. The hen makes a notes sounding like "Come back, come back," while the male says "Tick, tick!" The cry of the Guinea is one of warning to the rest of the poultry, and they at once hide until the danger ceases.

Guineas do not scratch like other fowls, and therefore are safe to have in the garden. They are very fond of their freedom, as they do not thrive in confinement.

Making Calls Lilies Bloom.

A busy woman puts her calls out in the border during the summer and insists that she can get more satisfactory—keeping the weeds down and looking occasionally. In September she pots them in a good-sized pot, with plenty of coarse sand for drainage. She uses good, rich potting soil and when the new growth appears in December she places the pot in a crock and fore or five times a week gives a quart of warm (body heat) water in the crock. She reports that often her first two flowers bloom at the same time.

Look After the Fences.

Don't forget to fix the fences. A fence that will turn stock one year will not do so the next. Stock will find fences now and than will often cause trouble, especially if the idea of having to drive the cattle home from the pasture. Animals are almost habit when it comes to going where some one does not want them. Remember, a fence is expensive, but not allowing any sags in the wire or broken or decayed posts is the line. A well-kept fence is an indication of a good farmer.

Get Rid of Weeds.

Stubble fields are not pastured as much in the west, where fencing is expensive, as they should be. There are always many weeds that will be held to have exterminated in the stubble. Pasturing is the best way to get rid of many of them.

Burbank Plum.

The Burbank plum is the heaviest bearer that ever grew in the land. The wild goose has but little fruit, but the Wrant still makes up all deficiency.

Old Wood Ashes.

Old wood ashes which are still rigid can be made better use of by bathing and plastering on the inside of Portland cement plaster. Lime should not be used in the mixture which comes in contact with water or acids.

Progressive Farmer.

Those farmers who give the greatest heed to the means of improvement have averaged 60 to 80 bushels of oats with an occasional crop of 100 bushels per acre.

Clever Forger Cashed Checks at Crookston.

Some stranger victimized three saloonkeepers in Crookston by signing the name of Mayor H. L. Larson of the Crookston Sash and Door factory to three checks for $19 each. He cashed one of the checks with Eddie Peterson, on Robert street that check being made out "Peterson" and the other two "Nelson."

In some way the grafterjr had secured a rubber stamp with the "Crookston Sash and Door Factory," and the checks were stamped with that "By H. A. Larson." The initials of Mayor Larson are H. L. and those of the other member are "L. M.," but this was not noticed by the saloon men who cashed the checks.

The second of the checks was passed on E. J. Brink and the third on Bert Cochrane. He was a rather tall, dark individual, and is believed to be a professional check artist.

The checks were drawn on the First National and went thru the Merchants National. The forgery was not discovered till the day following, and the writer is probably busy today cashing plumber forgeries in some town several hundred miles from here.—Crookston Times.

She will confine her efforts to old fashioned dances and otherwise entertain her guests with dignity and grace.

RED LAKE FALLS, RED LAKE COUNTY, MINNESOTA, THURSDAY, OCTOBER 2, 1913. VOL. XXXI—NO. 1

RED LAKE COUNTY FAIR WAS A GRAND SUCCESS

ATTENDANCE RECORD BROKEN AND EVERYBODY LIKED THE BIG SHOW.

CROOKSTON AND THIEF RIVER REPRESENTED BY BIG DELEGATIONS.

The weather man threatened to do things to the Red Lake county fair and then relented and supplied a brand of weather for the last day of the affair that could not have been improved upon. On Wednesday, the first day of the fair the weather was disagreeable and the attendance was light. The second day was much better and though the weather was threatening, it did not keep the crowds away. Friday, the last day, was so delightful that fair visitors were able to enjoy the attractions without being hoodled up in last winter's rags.

Thursday was the big day and it is estimated that three thousand people were on the grounds. Crooks-ton people were more than good as they came in force and Thief River Falls promise to be represented by a big delegation. Sixty Crookston automobiles made the trip and they carried three hundred Crookston people including their excellent band. Thief River Falls also made a very fine showing at the fair. Besides those who came on the train, there was an automobile run in which fifteen cars participated. The Thief River Falls people also brought their band to help entertain the fair crowds.

A fact that is also gratifying is that farmers from all over the county were here and the visitors from every quarter pronounced it a very good show.

The exhibits to all departments were good and the corn exhibit might be called a feature. The corn exhibit occupied a large section of the exhibit hall and occasioned much favorable comment by visitors. There were fine exhibits of vegetable, agricultural displays in the women's work and poultry, grains and vegetables and educational departments. There was a very good showing of live stock considering the fact that the farmers hesitated about bringing in stock because of the threatening weather.

The races and the special features were good and offered a generous amount of entertainment for the afternoon programs. The circus was always added to the good noise without offending, for there were none of the extremely vulgar variety on the company.

The Red Lake county fair of 1913 has certainly made history that is a creditable advertisement for the county and there can be no doubt that the annual county fair is a permanent institution.

FAIR RACES WERE INTERESTING EVENTS

HORSES OWNED BY LOUIS SIEFF TOOK FIRST IN TRACK EVENTS.

The county fair races were enjoyable events, though the harness races would have been improved by more entries. Horses owned by Louis Sieff, "Signal Hal" in the 2:35 and free for all, and "Mucky K" in the specials, took first place by straight heats in each race causing "Signal Hal" seemed to have it "on" "Mucky", the fast Crookston horse, all the time. The automobile races were real thrillers and the male races were an amusing act because the lift crowds to rise "as one man" and root for the "blind mule". Results of the races were as follows:

TEAM BEING RAPIDLY ORGANIZED. FIRST GAME WITH FOSSTON OCT. 11.

After several years of inactivity in football, the high school promises this fall to produce a team which will get out and win town credit in the branch of athletics.

Under the efficient coaching of Messrs. Peterson and Reinhold, of the high school faculty, the boys are now practicing their plays in preparation for the first game with Thief River Falls at that place on this Saturday, Oct. 4. Crookston is the next opponent on their own grounds on Oct. 18. Return games with Thief River Falls and Crookston will be arranged for in the early part of November.

The backfield composed possibly of Donald Marshall at quarter and Captain, with Edward Hunt, Zalser, John Henderouth and Joseph Helm holes promising. The line although light will be able to withstand their opponents' attacks. Candidates for the line the George Gibson, Ernest Kuehl, Maurice Bray, Tracy Jaffers, Armand Mireau, George Gerisch, Ley Carter, Charles Boughton and Henry Leiendreas.

The game with Thief River Falls promises to be an exciting contest. Last Saturday Thief River was defeated by Fosston to the tune of four touchdowns. The game will be called about 1:30 owing to the early departure of the afternoon train for Thief River Falls Saturday afternoon.

DEPOT HOLDUP AT THIEF RIVER FALLS

THREE MASKED BANDITS GOT AWAY WITH PACKAGES CONTAINING $7,500.

JOB WAS DONE IN A HURRY BANDITS WENT AWAY ON SPEEDER.

Three masked and heavily armed men held up and robbed the Soo line station in Thief River Falls of $7,500 shortly after the 2:38 a. m. Winnipeg Flier from Minneapolis pulled out from the platform Tuesday morning.

The strangers containing the money had been thrown on the platform and then carried into the station office by Charles Johnson, night baggageman.

Upon returning to the platform for the rest of the baggage, Johnson was held up by a masked man and ordered back into the office.

In the meantime, two other bandits covered the night ticket agent, Ed. Tollefsrud, with their guns and took the keys from his pocket and, after knocking him senseless. After opening and robbing the strongbox, the men departed, ordering the baggageman to remain perfectly quiet.

The loot was contained in five sacks and was all paper currency. It was shipped from Minneapolis for the purpose of distribution among banks along the Soo line.

Two of the robbers are described as being men of medium build and the third as short and thick-set. Sheriff Lafave and County Attorney Stanton, with an armed posse, left forty-five minutes after the robbery and are searching the country.

Tollefsrud believes the robbers are railroad men and the knowledge of the express shipment established by the bandits causes the police to give much credit to this theory.

The money was all in small bills. The bandits went out of town on a gasoline speeder.

There are various theories as to how the bandits made their getaway. Some people believe they are local men and that they simply went out of town on the speeder and walked back. Some believe they may have transferred their loot and themselves from the speeder to an automobile or other conveyances as soon as they got out of town.

GLASS AND SHARPER GET CO. FAIR CUPS

DRAW THE BIG PRIZES FOR LIVE STOCK EXHIBITS AT THE FAIR.

Wm. Schaper and F. E. Glass won the two prizes for exhibits of live stock at the county fair. These prizes were two silver cups offered by the Northern Pacific Railway company and the Great Northern Railway company. Mr. Glass won the prize for showing the best pen of five pigs, any make and breed. Mr. Schaper won the prize for the best dairy cow exhibited.

The cups are not now the permanent property of Messrs. Schaper and Glass. They are to have possession of them for a year and they will be competed for at the next fair. The first Red Lake county farmer whose stock shall win a cup to him three times will become the owner of the cup. It is not necessary that he win three times in succession or within a given time; the condition is, first that the first man to win one of the cups three times gets it "for keeps."

The cups are valued at $50.00 and are considerably more valuable than that for what they represent.

PRESENT BILLS.

County Fair Officials Ready to Settle Accounts.

All persons having claims against the Red Lake County Agricultural society are requested to file bills with A. Robertson, the secretary, before next Tuesday night. The fair officials are prepared to make settlement at all events except the horse premiums and the premiums will be paid as soon as the allotment of the state appropriation is received.

The premiums will be paid checked as soon as the secretary has had time to prepare it in detail.

FIRST GAME SATURDAY

Local High School Team Will go to Thief River Falls Saturday.

The Red Lake Falls high school is to be represented on the gridiron this fall by a foot ball team. It is a team of unknown prowess, for few if any of the boys have had previous experience in chasing and coaxing the pig skin. It is probable that the Red Lake Falls team is hitherto than most of the teams representing high schools in the part of the state. However, the boys are not lacking in enthusiasm. They have been doing some diligent training and will probably make a good record for the season.

The first game of the schedule is to be played with the Thief River Falls high school team at Thief River Falls Saturday afternoon.

HANDS BADLY BURNED

Mrs. Krall Strated Fire With Kerosene With Serious Results.

Mrs. Krell, living on the east side, narrowly escaped being seriously burned on Tuesday. She was engaged following an attempt to start a fire in the kitchen stove by pouring kerosene in it. Mrs. Krell cannot explain just what happened, but the explosion threw her unconscious. When she revived she was found on the floor and one of the sleeves of her dress was burning and both of her hands were seriously burned. The explosion did not set fire to the house.

The burns might have been much more serious had it not been that there was only a small quantity of kerosene in the can that Mrs. Krell used. The amount of fire was also small.

RURAL SCHOOLS HAVE ASSOCIATED

FOUR WILL HAVE ADVANTAGES OF INSTRUCTION IN INDUSTRIAL BRANCHES.

MORE SHOULD TAKE ADVANTAGE OF THE OPPORTUNITY FOR IMPROVEMENT.

Four rural schools of Red Lake county have allied themselves with the local high school in order to secure the advantages of systematic instruction in agriculture and industrial subjects. Association does not mean the consolidation of these schools and it bears no relation to consolidation. The association is new in this county, many such have been formed in the western section of the state for the last four years.

Those schools will be visited at regular intervals by the instructors in agriculture and domestic science of the local high school, and the greater part of half day each such times is to be devoted to agricultural instruction and study. The regular rural school teacher carries on the work in a limited extent during the interval between the visits of the special teachers.

Each associated school receives fifteen dollars from the state and one mile work. The local high school receives the special state aid to defray the expenses of the visiting teachers.

Rural school association is a movement that is worthy of wide development in this county and it is to be regretted that more schools have not availed themselves of this opportunity.

The following are the associated schools: Dist. No. 12, Louisiana township; No. 40, Red Lake Falls; No. 49, Red Lake Falls; No. 141, Poplar River.

On Saturday, October fourth, occurs a meeting of the school boards of these four districts. The meeting will be held at the Court House.

Red Lake Falls, in the office of Supt. DeBerge, at 2:00 P. M. It is necessary that there be a majority representation of the board in each district.

FAIR OFFICERS GRATEFUL.

Wish to Thank People Who Assisted With the Big Show.

The officers of the Red Lake County Agricultural society are grateful to the weather man and all people who helped contribute to making the 1913 Red Lake county fair a success.

This year as in years past the success of the fair is due as much to the enthusiastic co-operation of the people of the county as to the zealous work of the fair officials. The members of the board of directors have asked the Gazette to express their appreciation of the generous support received.

FED THE MULTITUDE.

St. Joseph's Church Ladies Served Many Meals.

The ladies of St. Joseph's church, who during the days of the county fair served meals in the basement building on south Main street, certainly did a rushing business. The total receipts were $304 and after all expenses have been paid there remains a balance of $225.

BOYS TOOK LIVE STOCK CENSUS

WORK OF CLASS IN AGRICULTURE OF THE LOCAL HIGH SCHOOL.

The class in farm stock of the local high school has nearly completed a census of Red Lake Falls township. Each member of the class has assigned territory, and each pupil worked independently. The boys were required to furnish their own conveyances and in having conveyances made use of them, while the others walked.

The object of the work was twofold. First, the farmers themselves are of considerable value. A knowledge of the numbers of horses, cattle and other stock kept on farms and the value of the property of the community when these figures are totaled is of much interest and federal census takes three years apart. Secondly, the census is helpful to agriculture, however, the work is especially important as it enables the members of the class to get out and meet the men who are doing the farming, and do gain a first hand knowledge of farm conditions.

A summary of this livestock census will be published in an early issue of the Gazette.

HUMAN TORCH.

Burning Man Jumped Into River and Saved His Life.

As a result of a fire that started in the tool house of the Minnesota & Dakota Bridge company at Swan point last Monday evening, Martin Swanson of this city is confined to his room seriously burned about the hands and back, and the bridge company, who were contractors for the new bridge, suffered a heavy loss in the destruction of their property.

Swanson was engaged in painting the tool house and was using gasoline in the cleaning of the saddle bridge pier, went into the tool house about 11:30 for a supply of gasoline. He was carrying a lantern and while filling a five-gallon can from the sixty-gallon tank spilled some of the gasoline onto the lantern. In an instant the smaller can exploded, enveloping Swanson's clothing with its contents and setting him on fire. With rare presence of mind he plunged headlong into the river a few feet distant, extinguishing the flames and saving his life. Although severely burned, he is now resting as comfortably as can be expected.

The fire department responded to the call that was sent in but the blaze had gained too much headway. Assistant Fire Chief Jos. Parr, who was operating the chemical hose, was slightly burned about the hands and face when the large gas exploded. The tool shed and all that it contained was destroyed.—Thief River Falls-Press.

He was of short duration. He suffered an attack of appendicitis that was so violent that the efforts of physicians were unavailing.

George Tandberg was a boy possessed of no bright intellect and a personal charm that made him very popular among his school associates during his short career. He attended school here and the announcement of his death has brought much sorrow to Red Lake Falls people. He graduated from the local high school with the class of 1913 and was just beginning his junior year at Carlton college and the future looked very bright for him, when came the call home.

GRAIN STACKS BURN

And Separator Nearly Lost in Fire on the Ducharma Farm.

A part of a setting of wheat on Louis Dunmire's farm worked out of town, was burned Tuesday afternoon and the separator nearly lost, the threshing the setting was saved after the fire had progressed so far that it was believed the machine would also go up in the flames.

The fire is believed to have started from a spark from the engine. When the fire started the engine was running on low steam pressure and the engineer hooked onto the separator the engine failed to pull through, for the fire was running around about.

From the way the grain had been running during the day's threshing it is estimated that the fire destroyed about 250 bushels of wheat.

IDENTITY OF MAN FOUND NEAR PLUMMER ESTABLISHED

BODY FOUND ON SOO RIGHT OF WAY THAT OF FRED JOHNSON.

WAS A LABORER WHO HAD BEEN WORKING NEAR CARLOS.

Through the efforts of County Attorney Boughton, the identity of the dead man who was found near Plummer, September 8th, has been established. Near the body at the time it was found was an old hat with the late name of merchants of Alexandria, Minnesota, in the band. Also a conductor's seat check dated September 4th was found near the body. And with these as a starting point, and the description of the body, the County Attorney communicated with the sheriff and chief of police at Alexandria, Minnesota, with the result that he this week received a letter from R. L. Johnson, Chief of Police at Alexandria stating that merchants of Alexandria had given Mr. Boughton's letter to be published in the local papers with the result that the man was identified as one Fred Johnson, a laborer who had been working for the Great Northern railway. The following clipping from the Alexandria Citizen was also enclosed:

"The identity of the unknown found near Plummer has been reported by N. J. Nelson on Lake Darling. The man's name is Fred Johnson and had during last winter had chopped wood for Carl Shogren near Carlos. This spring he had worked a few days for Nelson. The marks found and characteristics described by the county attorney of Red Lake county and published last week led to the discovery of the man's identity.

"Little is known of the man. He did not desire to talk about his past. All they know about him is that he has two sisters some where in this country. He was an excellent worker and honest in every way. He was afflicted with the liquor habit which perhaps made him discouraging and should be a cause for us to have anyone of his folks know his whereabouts.

"The authorities of Red Lake county and here have done what they can to secure information concerning the man and everybody possible interested in him."

Will Meet at Roseau.

The next meeting of the Adams Presbytery will be held at Roseau, this decision has been made at the annual business session of the convention, at East Grand Forks. The reports of all committees were read and approved of and the work of the churches in the various parts of the Presbytery found very gratifying.

PUBLIC UTILITIES TO BE THE ISSUE

St. Paul—(Special)—Of course you have heard the latest—Governor Eberhart's announced abandonment of his promised call of the legislature in special session. Yes, it is true, and it is final as far as any special consideration of a statewide utility control act is concerned. Who advised the governor to take the new decision was reached and how he expects to get off a shamefaced from those he holds responsible for the course taken, no one knows. The call is off and that is all there is to it. Arrington, Minn., where the governor spoke at a county fair, furnished the atmosphere that sent him on the back course. Catching the first train out of Arrington he hastened to St. Paul, met his private secretary, George F. Ambler, at the Union depot, hurriedly dashed off a statement to "Ye Public" and a few minutes later the wires were carrying the message to the four corners of the nation. An hour later he took the train for Fergus Falls, where he had another speaking engagement. The statement issued you have probably read, but if you have not here it is in brief: "The house organization is against state control of public utilities and the opinion of the governor was to secure this much desired reform is to carry it direct to the next primaries." Quite frank, you will have to admit, after numerous credited interviews that the movement was going along swimmingly and that the call would be made, and with no when you consider that the whole thing is a practical announcement of his exclusive's gubernatorial candidacy a year hence. What the issue will be it is needless to mention.

SULZER ATTORNEYS LOSE ONCE MORE

MOTION TO DISMISS IS LOST BY VOTE OF 51 TO 1—SPEEDY TRIAL ASSURED.

LAST STAND IS NOW MADE

Attempt to Quash Indictment Being Made—Story of How the Last Vote Was Taken.

Albany, N. Y., Sept. 24.—Governor William Sulzer must go to trial. This was decided by the high court of impeachment when by a vote of 51 to 1 the members overruled the motion of the governor's counsel to dismiss the proceedings on the ground that he was unconstitutionally impeached by the assembly because that body was in extra session when the impeachment was brought.

But One Nay Cast.

Senator Stanfield H. Wende of Buffalo, Democrat, an ardent supporter of the governor, cast the solitary nay, while seven members of the court were absent.

The governor's defeat was the second that has marked the battle waged by his attorneys to annihilate as far as possible the impeachment proceedings. Last week the court thwarted their attempt to prevent four senators from testifying as members. Their remaining ammunition consists of arguments to prove that certain of the articles charged against the governor are not impeachable. These arguments are now being heard.

Secret Session Vote.

The above mentioned vote was taken in secret session after an afternoon devoted to speeches by the opposing attorneys. When the time came for the court to render its decision, Presiding Judge Cullen announced that he did not feel inclined to use the power granted him under the rules to be the first to express an opinion.

"My brethren," he said, "you will readily appreciate that the point which has been discussed goes to the very foundation of the proceeding. If decided in one way the proceeding must necessarily end. You have the power to clear the court for private consultation, under the rules."

This was done on motion of Judge Cullin, but the vote was later announced in a brief public session and the record of the proceedings was immediately made public. It showed that a tentative call on the motion was immediately taken and that the presiding judge delivered a long address on the points at issue when his name was called, thirteenth on the list.

Opinion of Judge Cullen.

Judge Cullen's opinion, in substance, was that the provision of the constitution which limited the sets of the legislature in extra session to such subjects as were recommended to it by the governor should be given a reasonable construction. It upheld the contention of the prosecution that the provision referred to the legislature as a whole and not to the assembly as an independent body.

"So construed," said Judge Cullen, "these subjects all relate to what the legislature as a body can do, and not to the power vested in one branch of the legislature."

DIVINING ROD IS TESTED

Scientists Are Enthusiastic Owing to Success of Several Experiments in Germany.

Halle, Germany, Sept. 24.—The congress of scientists which has been meeting here to test the efficacy of the divining rod in discovering underground springs of water and mineral deposits has decided to organize an international association. So many successful experiments were reported that the executive committee was increased by the addition of four members, in the expectation of increased activities in the future.

Tests conducted under the supervision of the congress by divining rod experts resulted in the location of three potash veins, the existence of which was confirmed by mine shafts, of coal deposits and of water courses. One expert found a leak in the city water main.

The congress received enthusiastic reports that southwest African farmers are finding water regularly by means of the divining rod.

BLAME FARMER BOY FOR HIGH PRICES

SO SAY SPEAKERS AT FARMERS' NATIONAL CONGRESS IN ILLINOIS.

"KEEP BOY ON FARM" SLOGAN

Claim It Will Restore Community Life—Declare More Persons Should Work Own Land, Not Labor for Others.

Piano, Ill., Sept. 23.—"Keep the boy on the farm and restore community life to the country."

This was the message brought to the twenty-third annual harvest of national congress by Governor Cox of Ohio.

All Speakers Agree.

Governor Dunne of Illinois indorsed the message. All the speakers talked on the high cost of living and all agreed that it centered in the emigration of the country from the farm to the city.

"To keep the boy on the farm is our problem. It is a problem we have signally failed to solve," said Governor Cox.

"My solution of it is smaller farms. There should be more farm owners working their own land instead of big, proprietor owning large tracts worked by tenants or overseers."

Make Farm Interesting.

Governor Cox asserted he saw no reason why life in the country should not be made entertaining. "Every town should have a telephonication community house and high school.

"They should have lyceums there, moving pictures and the like. A strong town is the result of

It will not be necessary to advertise it to the cause, but it may be necessary to finance some of them.

Indians Hold a Fair.

Bemidji.—The city head led a large delegation of Bemidji business men and their wives on a special train Friday to the Red Lake Indian reservation to attend the "Bemidji Day" celebration of the Red Lake fair to be inaugurated by Minnesota Indians. The fair was held Thursday, Friday and Saturday. A baseball game, square dance, the ancient war dance of the Chippewas, foot races and various Indian sports were features. There were splendid exhibits of head work, basket weaving, ponies, etc.

Is Settlement in Sight?

Red Wing.—A third attempt for a settlement of the municipaltier case against Joseph H. Babcock of Minneapolis is being made here. This, like the others, contemplates a plea of guilty on his part, but a heavy fine in lieu of imprisonment and the payment of costs. Judge Anderson's family. It is rumored the compromise will go through and the case cleared from the calendar. The report is not confirmed, however.

Status Is John A. Johnson.

St. Peter, Minn., Sept. 29.—St. Peter citizens honored the fifth governor of Minnesota who came from their town Sunday when they dedicated a monument to the memory of John A. Johnson on the fourth anniversary of his death. The statue is a replica of the one erected last spring in the state capitol grounds. Two little nieces, Viola, daughter of Edward Johnson of St. Peter, and Helen, whose father is Fred W. Johnson of New Ulm, pulled the cords which revealed the monument to the crowd of 8,000.

"Cemetery Sunday" Is Observed.

Hastings.—Cemetery Sunday was observed here, services being conducted in the cemeteries of the Catholic churches by Rev. Messrs. P. R. Conmahan and William Everman, and prayer offered in behalf of the dead.

ORIENTAL LIMITED WRECKED

SEVERAL COACHES OF G. N TRAIN ALSO BURNED.

Flaming Culvert Causes Derailment and Five Coaches Are Consumed —Few Hurt.

Wheaton.—While it was rushing an hour and twenty minutes late, the Great Northern Oriental Limited, southbound from Seattle to Chicago, rounded a sharp curve six miles below East Wheaton at a speed of 59 miles an hour and was wrecked over a burning wooden culvert, at 1 o'clock Thursday afternoon.

The engine passed safely, but the combination express and baggage car was thrown into the ditch as the side and the five coaches behind it were either wholly or partially derailed.

Several coaches were thrown over on their side. Every passenger escaped death, but several suffered minor injuries. Within a few minutes after the train was brought to a stop, flames leaped over and enveloped a Pullman sleeper which had stopped directly over the little wooden span. Passengers saved most of their belongings before the fire, fanned by a high wind from the northwest, licked its way through the balance of the derailed coaches.

Engineer Al Hardy of La Crosse first saw the danger ahead and shouted to Guy Atkinson, fireman, also of La Crosse, who was firing when the locomotive plunged around the point of a bluff. The emergency brakes were applied, sending the passengers in all directions. In a few seconds after the train stopped, the entire crew of the nine-coach train having escaped, was ahead of the sleeper stopped with the trucks on either side of the little bridge, which was burning.

The passengers, realizing their predicament, left the cars in every conceivable manner. Some on their hands and feet through the windows, others forced the glass with their backs, and still others climbed down the vestibules.

The most seriously injured person was Miss Margaret Freund, telephone, ind., who was bruised about the chest. Not more than five or six persons were injured beyond a few scratches.

KILLED IN AUTO ACCIDENT

Machine Turns Over and Crushes Youth—Companion Escapes.

Pipestone.—Henry Adams, 19 years old, was almost instantly killed on a country road north of Pipestone when the automobile he was driving struck a culvert and shot into the air, turning over sixty feet from where it left the road.

Adams was crushed to death by the steering wheel. Fred Erickson, who was riding with Adams, was thrown clear of the car and was not bodily injured.

Adams was a machinist and was employed as a driver at a local garage. He was returning from a night trip into the country when the accident occurred. The lights an his machine were out of order and this is given as the cause of the accident.

Answers Governor, Eberhart.

Farmington.—Governor A. O. Eberhart's speech on the public utilities question, delivered at the Dakota county fair here, was answered by James A. Peterson, of Farmington. "The governor was quite humorous," said Mr. Peterson, "in his speech the other night at Minneapolis. He said that one of the advantages of this public utilities bill was that it would take the railroad and warehouse commissioners out of politics. He says a people allow them out if politics by leaving the people allow Governor Eberhart to appoint them. The newspapers do not say whether or not his hearers smiled at the joke."

Farmers to Live Cheaper.

Spring Valley.—Farm hungered farmers living in the vicinity have formed a co-operative association for the purpose of buying groceries, wearing apparel and other necessaries directly from the wholesale houses. Among those the farmers organized what is known as a livestock shipping association, and it has proven a great success. The crops throughout this section are excellent and the corn bids fair to be exceptionally good.

Electrocuted While at Work.

Red Wing.—Joseph Kolm, who was the head electrician for the Marshall-Wells company, at work on the new Orpheum theatre at Sioux Falls, S. D., was electrocuted by taking hold of a live electric light wire. The pulmotor was used for 40 minutes in an effort to revive the young man, but to no avail. Mr. Kolm was walking in the alley in the rear of the theatre when he attempted to brush aside a broken wire which proved to be carrying 2,300 volts. The young man's home is here.

Barn and Horses Destroyed.

St. Cloud.—Fire caused by lightning struck barn on the Paff Oaks farm, owned by S. J. Gillispie, seven miles north of here, five head of horses, thirty tons of hay, grain and machinery being burned.

Pipestone Sunday School Officers.

Pipestone.—At the annual convention of the Pipestone County Sunday school association James McClaskey of Edgerton was elected president; Mrs. R. Graham secretary and R. R. Jencham treasurer.

Straight-Backed Coat Most Comfortable.

TWO views of the straight-backed coat, cut across the front above the waist line, and hanging straight from the shoulders, shows how easy and comfortable looking it is. The waist line is not defined either in the blouse and skirt or in the coat. The blouse deserves its name as it hangs over the top of the skirt and the effect is apparently to make the waist large rather than small.

Other models in these coats are longer in front and gathered in to a lone belt or band, placed at the normal waist line or a little below it. And there are a few models for dress coat wear with shorter sleeves. Three-quarter length with turned back or lingerie cuffs. It must be conceded that they are smart-looking on trim figures and there not much beyond the normal in size.

The straight back is a godsend to one who in a little round shouldered. The collar stands away from the back of the neck and the curve from the neck to shoulder blades is very slight. There is no curve from that point to the bottom.

But the straight-back is not for everyone and there are plenty of other models to choose from. All the new designs may be said to hang on the figure rather than to fit it. Among them the Russian blouse is sure to appeal to many for in point of style there is nothing smarter. It is a cold weather garment, however, and to be discussed a little later.

JULIA BOTTOMLEY.

Washable Veil Both Charming and Fashionable

THERE two veils flave, in addition to the advantage of being clean-ly, at least three others: they are becoming, they are durable and (what means more to the universal feminine) they are fashionable.

Many more veils and other dress accessories are made to stand washing than in former seasons. Each year manufacturers of fabrics increase their efforts to find stable colors and methods of strong weaving, for nearly all articles of apparel. All fabrics tapped more surely and permanently to the buying public if this item of standing the wash is among their virtues. For cleanliness is an essential of elegance. Women have taken to heart the axiom that to be elegant things must first be clean. The veil of the moment not has widely scattered embroidered dots and a graceful border made by applying roundstrand braid and fine cord. The latter is chain-stitched by machinery to the net. Such veils are always in fashion, more or less, and will last a lifetime. They are made from fifty cents up to two dollars apiece, the cost more than two dollars for Even at a higher price this veil is not a bad investment since it may be used as a fichu, or for trimming a bodice or as a fancy. Two veils of this kind made a beautiful decoration for a dressy waist.

A new weave is shown in the veil of shadow lace made of mercerized cotton. This design is unlike the older lacee and had its birth in the brain of someone who originates patterns to be made by machinery. Scotch fancy. It is sheer white, soft and strong and is fascinating in appearance. The lightest breath of air sets it to gently fluttering. If fastened close, it molds itself to the face and accommodates itself to the movements of the wearer. It does not protect the face as a veil of closer mesh but it is amazingly becoming. Such veils are to be found "by the piece" or made singly. That is, they may be bought by the yard as well as in individual veils. The oddest'ones are worn with a single motif in some spot (usually a flower) formed, somewhere in the veil. The clever weaver places this one decoration where it will call attention to some pleasing feature in the face, perhaps the soft curve of her cheek, or the fine line of the jaw, or perhaps the exquisite modeling of some of her ears. Sometimes this single figure is cut lined in black thread. The effect of this veil is quite startling at first glance.

These veils are fine for traveling. One can wash them out and pin to a pillow or stretch against a window-pane, and they are as good as new in the morning.

Flowers Suitable for Evening.

When selecting flowers for the dinner table or other decorative purposes under the condition of artificial light, bear in mind that all yellow and blue flowers appear much paler and rather dead by artificial light, while white flowers and the brilliant hued flowers stand out with more snap. On the other hand, the soft green foliage appears to greater advantage under artificial light than does the very dark green foliage, though bright greens show up far better under these conditions.

Mastery.

Many women have the mistaken idea that because shoes and stockings are so much in evidence with the new slashed skirt modes they should wear stockings that are nothing less than daring. Those thin light gray silk are positively vulgar, as they are so suggestive. Indeed, dark color stockings would be less objectionable—and, as a matter of fact, these are very pretty and dainty with summer frocks. However, black and stockings with black shoes, and white with white, still remain the most refined.

Every Woman a Touch of Color.

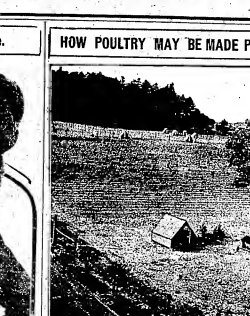
Grace Margaret Gould, fashion editor of the Home Companion, reports the new fall styles in that publication. One point is as follows:

"It is the touch of color that counts this season in the new frocks. Of course, not all women will favor the startling, dazzling color combinations made by the Cubists and Futurists, but the woman who would be stylish must not affect at least a touch of brilliant color in her gowns."

Fichus to Be Worn This Fall.

From Paris comes the announcement that in fall outdoor fichu affects, to be worn either with separate blouses or with the fashionable and popular one-piece dress, are to be strongly favored. Old lace, if one is to fortunate as to possess such a thing, is need more advantageously in a fichu than any other type, but innumerable fabrics are thus employed.

HOW POULTRY MAY BE MADE PROFITABLE



View of a Chicken Range on a Poultry Farm Where From Three to Four Thousand Chickens Are Reared Annually.

(By KATHERINE A. GRIMSBY.)

"The proof of the pudding is in the eating," and the proof of success in the poultry business is in the profit made at selling time.

You must begin to plan as to when and how you are going to market your fowls about as soon as the eggs are set—even before, as we do know what your aim is to be—whether master dresser poultry, birds for breeding, or frying chickens. Of course it all depends upon what the demand in your vicinity is far. If you live where there will be sale for good birds for breeding, it may not pay you to sell many fowls to the market. If you find a good call for broilers or small chicks for frying—and those usually bring good prices—you might do your best work in raising some kind of early-maturing fowls that will make a pound and a half at six weeks or two months old.

If you intend to sell dressed poultry, it is usually best to choose a breed that is plump and has good-colored feathers, as they look nicer than the white-legged, bleeded-colored varieties. The head is not a bad guide, as you know it is looks that count when a thing comes into a market.

As soon as the pullets can be told from the roosters, they should be separated, and unless you expect to sell them for breeding, the surplus males be fed to fattening and marketed as early as possible.

If you want to hurry them onto the market, one of the very best plans is that known as the crate-feeding method. Take some slats about an inch and a half wide—lath will do very nicely—and make a crate with a flat top and a slat bottom, about 18 inches wide the same in height, and long enough to accommodate the number of fowls you have to fatten. Allow about six inches in length to each bird. Divide your crate into sections that will hold four or five birds each. Set it up on a trestle—a couple of sawhorses make good supports—so that droppings will fall through the slat bottom and be out of the way.

Now make a V-shaped trough the same length as your coop. This is used for soft food, and a mixture of feed should consist of finely-ground oats mixed to a stiff batter with skim-milk or buttermilk, preferably the latter. Feed this mixture three times a day, but do not let it stand in the troughs. Give them ample time, say half an hour, to eat all they want, and then if any is left, clean out the troughs well and fill with cool, fresh water. This should be fed before them until next feeding time.

A cup of grit should be fastened where they can get at it all the time. A little grass stuff and mixed with the feed is a good appetizer, but not indispensable.

Two weeks in a coop like this will nearly double the weight of a thrifty bird. Even the calls and "runts" can be brought to a very satisfactory market stage in a few days. For old hens, such as every flock should be cleared of once a year, it is the best possible plan to get them into shape for selling. The flesh of crate-fattened fowls is white and tender, not berry-boon toughened by exercise. Then, too, there is the satisfaction of knowing that only clean, wholesome food has been eaten. The fastidious person this makes a great difference.

Probably the best way to market poultry, for the average boy who has a small flock, is to work up a trade with private customers. This can easily be done where the same plan has been followed in selling eggs. If he has kept the eggs up to a high standard, the buyer reasons that his chickens will be as well. Even an "extra" start he can demand, and get a price that is much above the ordinary market stock, provided, always, that he feeds and keeps a high quality as his standard.

Birds that are to be kept for sale as breeders should never be allowed to become fat. They should be kept in good order, in clean, attractive quarters, and always where they can be shown to prospective customers, and a mannish attitude. The finest bird in a dirty, bad-shedding coop will not have to good advantage, and will not sell as quickly as an ordinary one in attractive surroundings. Birds having white plumage should be kept where they can be kept clean, otherwise they will not show for what they are.

Sell your roosters early, treat the pullets to increase your flock, and get rid of your old hens as soon as you are through with them as biters and mothers. Never sell a bird for breeding purposes unless it is first class, even at a lower figure than common. If a fowl is to advertise your business, it must be worthy of the name, and be of the best. Don't let anything else go from your yard.

PREPARE ANIMALS FOR BEST RETURNS

Most Common Mistake Among Farmers Is in Selling Product Only Half Finished.

It is astonishing to observe during a visit to the stock yards how little care most farmers take in conditioning their animals for market. The most common mistake is made in selling animals that are half finished. Fully 75 per cent of all the animals sold would be the gainers if properly finished condition. This, more than anything, is probably responsible for the common belief that there is no money in feeding livestock. Sometimes stock is sold because they are high. At other times the available supply of feed has been consumed before the stock is conditioned, but more frequently perhaps, many feeders are not understand what well-conditioned means. With some feeders it is a case of going with the crowd. No amount of reasoning can overcome the influence of that powerful fad that a bird in the hand is worth two in the bush. It is true unless a man is a good shot, for he has the time and nerve he can cast no well big bird. But it is true also that a man who is not a good shot, if

GOVERNOR CHANGES FRONT.

There may be some doubt as to what issues will be discussed in the next political campaign, but there is no doubt that the power bill is one of them. And in this connection it might be said that the Gazette and a hundred of more country papers may feel that they have been endorsed for his extemporary resume to have acted on their suggestion that he refrain from cajoling the legislature in special session and make his public utilities control plan an issue in the next election instead. The governor has made the following public statement:

"I have made a careful canvass of the membership of the present legislature, and I have satisfied myself that there would be no hope of the passage of a public utilities commission law by the legislature as now constituted. An extra session would therefore be an expense without compensating benefit to the state.

"I have therefore decided that no special session will be called. Instead of that, I shall put the question up to the people at the next state primaries and general election. The people will then decide by their votes what the policy is, and that decision will have more effect upon the legislature than anything I can say. It is right that the voters should express themselves upon the question."

Of course, that is a complete about-face, for if there ever was a necessity for action by a special session of the legislature it certainly still exists. However, if you did not approve of the governor's original plan, you can consistently be grateful to him for not doing what he threatened to do.

You may also think several other things, for, naturally, it is going to be contended that the governor was bluffing all the time, that he was only playing politics and making some of his being the "big noise" in the next campaign.

It is now on the program that the governor will campaign as the "father" of the plan for statewide control of public utilities. His right to the title will be questioned, for it will be remembered that the way legislature passed a law providing for the regulation of public utilities but the regulation provided for was not according to his plan. Evidently everybody is going to campaign for the regulation of public utilities and take issue on the plan to be adopted.

The governor is being warmly praised for deciding not to do what he threatened to do.

If Governor Eberhart should find that he cannot "live within his salary" and Secretary Bryan has a corner on the chautauqua box office receipts, it is certain that his cabinet will not have to look far for employment as a press agent.

Let us rejoice. The Two Thief River Falls newspapers are filling with real news the space for some time devoted to a discussion as to which paper publishes the most news.

THE "FRIEDMAN VACCINE."

"At the recent meeting of the Rhode Island Medical Society Dr. Barnes of the Rhode Island State Sanatorium for Tuberculosis presented a report on the results with the Friedman vaccine. It merely adds to the mass of information that goes to make up the literature concerning Friedman's attempt at exploiting the consumptive, all of which shows the Friedman treatment to have no advantage over other methods of treating tuberculosis; more, in all probability, it is a dangerous one. The medical profession has, until recently, maintained toward this product an attitude of reasonable and sensible skepticism," says the Journal of the American Medical Association in a recent editorial. "In view of the fact, however, that it seems impossible to find a single reliable favorable report on this nostrum and in spite of the fact that the hope that in the Friedman vaccine we have a true cure for tuberculosis. Moreover, the methods of exploitation have become so obviously commercial, with what appears to be a deliberate attempt to play upon the humanitarian viewpoint, the time has surely come for not only a definite stand against the sale of this product but for positive opposition to the methods used by those financially interested in it. The claims of Friedman secured the financial backing which wide-spread newspaper exploitation brought him, and in spite of away, leaving a host of 'Friedman institutes' to divide with him the dollars of the too often credulous sufferers. These "institutes" are being organized in various parts of the country and the personnel of those connected with these organizations in practically every instance is sufficient to suggest their true nature. Steps have been taken in several states to check this exploitation of the consumptive for commercial gain, especially in Idaho, Iowa and Arkansas. In others, the weakness of local ordinances has made this impossible. What is now needed is that these unscrupulous attempts should be met with an intensive campaign of education of the public concerning the dangers and worthlessness of this treatment."

COADJUTOR'S REMARKS.

The prevailing impression that the State University provides a free education to the youth of the state is somewhat of a delusion.—Little Falls Transcript.

Northern Minnesota wants the state to establish a dynamite factory. Wonder if the demand has been inspired by a glance at the numerous chunks in the state capitol. —Red Wing Eagle.

Wonder if the apathy of the members of the Minnesota Legislature relative to an extra session is at all due to the fact that they would draw no salary and would be obliged to pay their own expenses? Perish the thought.—Stillwater Gazette.

Governor Eberhart, by calling off the threatened extra session, pleases alike his friends and foes. The Governor evidently realizes that there is no great demand for a coalyard solution to exact legislation which seven-eighths of the voters don't understand and care less. The regular session will roll around in time (though after election) and the public has plenty of time in which it became educated to proper control of public utilities, by the candidates who will aspire for the gubernatorial chair in the campaign.—Cokato Enterprise.

Another Gleam.

The seventeenth century puritan preachers talked for two hours or more and "by the glass" lost by the hour glass. Whereupon he made his subject, and, reversing the horology, "Let's have another glass," said he.

The Right Way to Do It.

Elihu Root tells a story about himself and his efforts to correct the manners of his office boy. One morning the young statesman came into the office and, tossing his cap at a peg, exclaimed:

"Say, Mr. Root, there's a ball game down at the park today, and I want to go to it."

Now, the great lawyer was willing that the boy should go, but thought it would teach him a little lesson in good manners.

"James," he said, "that isn't the way to ask a favor. Now, you sit down in my chair and I'll be the office boy, and you come in and ask me."

The boy took the office chair, and his employer picked up his cap and stepped outside. He then opened the door softly and, holding the cap in his hand, said quietly to the small boy in the big chair:

"Please, sir, there is a ball game at the park today; if you can spare me I would like to get away for the afternoon."

In a flash the boy responded:

"Why, certainly, Jimmie; and here is 50 cents to pay your car fare."

The captain of the relief boat called to him: "Hello there, uncle! What do you want?" "Nothing but wings, boss," was the answer.

Nick Helm has sold his cottage, south of the Washington school, to C. H. C. Boker. Mr. Helm will continue to occupy the property until a new house he is constructing east of the Gerlach house, on the east side, is ready for occupancy.

C. O. Bryant, secretary of the Fort Dodge, Iowa, commercial club, was in the city Saturday. Mr. Bryant was so well pleased with Red Lake county that he expects to invest in farm lands before returning to his home.

ST. HILAIRE

The many friends of the Lorentson family surprised them last evening and as a token of the esteem in which they are held, presented them with several useful pieces of furniture and other articles to replace those destroyed by fire last week.

The fair at Red Lake Falls was a grand success in every way. The attractions this year were exceptionally good. The balloon ascension, horse races and vegetable exhibit being especially worthy of mention. The Glaciesenn, Ryenna Gillis, T. Ashby. cars were in attendance.

Glenn Harris, Ralph Hall and James Walker returned from points in Montana Saturday. While in the west they looked over the much talked of lands in the Fort Peck Indian reservation which will be open for settlement in a short time, but failed to find any of the "grand" opportunities claimed for that part of the country. They returned thoroly convinced of the superiority of northern Minnesota.

The funeral services for the late Mrs. Emma Lorentson was held last Sunday in Black River, Rev. Fyglen Lorson officiating. Mrs. Lorentson was born in Sweden Nov. 26th, 1848. She with her husband, who passed into the great beyond a year ago, were among the earliest settlers in this part of the country. She has always been an active pet in church affairs and her home was a gathering place for the entire settlement west of town. She leaves to mourn her untimely death four daughters and three sons, all of whom reside here.—Spectator.

PLUMMER

Julius Pioch left last night for Osceola, Wis., where he expects to close several deals for the sale of Red Lake County lands.

While Hisholm of the Hisholmen, Minn., is here this week looking after the threshing on his farm north of town. It is probable Mr. Hisholm will move his family here and make his home here permanently.

The citizens of Plummer were treated to a few selections of band music Monday evening by the White Earth Indian band. They arrived on the evening train from Red Lake where they had furnished music at the Red Lake Indian fair.

A deal was closed this week whereby McKinney brothers become the owners of the property occupied by the hotel and pool room and barber shop, having purchased the property from Julius Pioch. They have also purchased the fixtures and tables from Mr. Erickson and will take possession about October 1. They are planning on making alterations and entirely repairing the property.

In spite of bad weather the attendance at the Red Lake county fair at Red Lake Falls Wednesday and yesterday, was large and with a clear sky and warm weather today the attendance for the three days should excell all previous marks. The exhibits in all lines were exceptionally good and besides the hundreds of articles of educational value there were many entertainment features of merit. Running and trotting and automobile races featured all three days.—Pioneer.

LAMBERT (OKLEE)

(Intended for last week.)

Threshing is pretty nearly done and people are hauling wheat these days.

Chas. Stegrz sr. was up in Oklee visiting his son and family and barber Hog for the Red Lake county fair.

The numerous friends of Mrs. W. O. Tessier will be glad to know she is home and much improved in health after a serious operation at Bemidji.

"Cev." Paquin is home again and his friends are glad to hear his hearty voice again. He is thin and somewhat weak but on the road to complete recovery.

Tom Methy is in the hospital at Bemidji with a severe case of typhoid fever.

Ole Methy reports a son and heir at his home Thursday night. All well.

J. O. Tessier autoed to Red Lake Agency with a party of friends and took in the Chippewa fair last week.

The new road purchased by the business men of Oklee runs straight south on the main street line and cute off three quarters of a mile for people east of town. It is a great help for a big bend and we hope such cuts are made in all.

Died of Heart Failure.

Anthins Lambert of Lambert village dropped dead Saturday afternoon, while chopping wood. Mr. Lambert was one of the first settlers of Lambert. He is a brother of Frank Lambert of Red Lake Falls, and father of X. A. and Miles Lambert. Mr. Lambert was in his usual health and looking remarkably well for a man of 65 years of age. During the week in which he died he had made plans to visit Jefferson, points and visit a cousin in Canada and thence on to Michigan to visit a sister whom he had not seen for years.

His wife died on August 8th and since that time Mr. Lambert has stayed with his son Xavier at the store. He was of a retiring disposition and covered his grief and loneliness so that not even his sons knew the inroads grief was making on a heart made too strong at heal, so his death was unexpected. The remains were interred beside thoe of his wife in the old churchyard by the side of their home in the village. He is a man who will be missed in the school and town boards where he served many years with credit.

The sympathy of the community is extended to his children and brother Frank, who came through the night during an east wind and the black frost of Saturday night to reach his only brother's side for the last few hours on earth.

Mingling With The People

By REGINALD D. HAVEN

Billy Biggs and I, being in Paris when the warm season was coming on, thought we would go to Switzerland. We had both been in Europe several years studying languages and were well equipped with both French and German. So we concluded to tramp about, mingling with the people and not give away the fact that we were Americans. We went to Interlaken by train and from there told out pedestrian tours.

One of the first we made was to Grindelwald and thence up the side of the mountain to Scheidegg. There we got a good dinner, after which we walked up a short distance to a point where we could see the glacier. It was very wild and magnificent and all that, but seeing such sights is not what I am going to tell you about. In the afternoon we walked down the mountain to Lauterbrunnen and shortly before we reached that place came up with a couple of Swiss girls dressed in the costumes of the country.

It occurred to both Billy and me that it would make the rest of the way with two pretty girls—as girls could be lonely in the Swiss costume—it would be very short of trudging alone by our own substrcutting selves. As we passed them I bowed very politely, took off my cap and, pointing to a mountain whose name I knew as well as my own, asked in German—the language mostly spoken in this part of Switzerland—what it was.

"That's the Eiger," replied one of the girls.

I boldly expatiated on the beauty of the scenery, excited those who lived always in the Alps, and as soon as I ran out of something to say Billy took up the dialogue. The girls did not seem averse to forming our acquaintance, and it was not long before we separated them, Billy walking beside one, I beside the other. We both pretended to be Germans of the lower class, though not Swiss. I got in as many side things to my girl as I could think of, and she being to the country born and unsophisticated I didn't hesitate to lay it on thick. Every now and again I could hear Billy, who was walking with the other girl only a few yards ahead of me, doing the same thing.

When we reached Lauterbrunnen the girls bid us goodby, saying that they lived in a chalet beyond the town. We were near a refreshment house standing beside the road, and I invited them to go up on to the porch for a cheese sandwich and a glass of the beer they drink over there, which is exceedingly mild that it wouldn't intoxicate a mouse. After a considerable spurt from us they said they wouldn't mind being refreshed after a long walk, and we all four went up on to the porch, took a table and called for the beer and sandwiches.

Billy was talking glibly about our life on the farm at home when one of the girls said:

"You are not a farmer; neither is he. You are both gentlemen."

I looked at Billy, and Billy looked at me.

"How did you find that out?" I asked.

"We have so many tourists about us all the time that we could tell their nationality no matter what disguise they might put on. You are not German either. Don't you suppose we can tell a German from a Frenchman or an Englishman?"

"What nationality are we?" Billy asked.

"You wear French clothes, but you are not French. You are either English or American. I think you are American."

"By Jove, Billy," I exclaimed in the plain American language, "they're smarter than I thought they were!"

The girls were very much tickled that they had been able to tell our nationality. They asked us to teach them a little English. So I told the one I had walked with to pronounce the words "I love you." She spoke them. "I lofe you," and asked me to translate them into German, but there was a look in her eye that made me suspect that she already had an idea as to their meaning. I told her they meant "Thank you."

Meanwhile Billy was amusing himself by telling the girl to say "Kiss me," telling her the words meant "Good morning." Billy and I kept looking at each other, laughing over the fun we were having, and by and by the girls said they must go home. We asked permission to attend them, but they declined. At parting one of them said:

"We thank you for your kindness, gentlemen. Though we are only poor Swiss farmers' daughters, we seem to have amused you."

"The thanks are due to you," I replied, "since you have given us a very pleasant hour."

"Don't you think," said Billy, "that there was some shrinkage about those girls?"

"What do you mean?"

"Seems to me they know more than we think they do."

A week later we were in the casino at Lucerne when I heard a woman's voice behind me speaking with the real American accent

"For heaven's sake, Jim, where have you been all this time? I've been looking for you everywhere."

I turned, and there stood our Swiss peasant girls.

"Sold!" cried Billy, and the girls burst into a laugh.

SYNOPSIS.

George Anderson and wife are a remarkably looking couple and one of Clermont hotel, built around furtively, which his life in the snow and grass on. Constantine attracts them to the Clermont. Edith Challoner, a beautiful girl, and Edith challoner has fallen dead. Another man describes the only to ease wash his hands in the snow. The hotel manager declares him to be Orlando Brotherson, a New York capitalist. Brotherson is found dead and not shot, which seems to clear Brotherson of suspicion. George and Mrs. Anderson are taken to the Clermont by Lane Challoner, a brother of Edith Challoner, arriving from his home in Chicago. Mrs. Anderson is put in the latter's room, one which shows that she visited Brotherson's room. Mrs. Anderson's clothing is found in his closet. She also, signed "D. Bell" and the name of Lynn. He is an intimate friend of the coroner, Dr. Challoner. Brotherson's will is found and will be offered for his inspection. Sweetwater is made executor of the estate of Brotherson, who declares he recognized him at once. The testimony is made that the letters signed "D. B." were written by Mrs. Anderson. Mrs. Anderson tells of her life and of her husband's peculiarities. She expects to locate through one Doris Scott mentioned in the will and the name of Lynn. Sweetwater is home for Oswald Brotherson, a nephew of the dead man, and a friend of Lane to his defense.

CHAPTER XXIV—Continued.

His rise had been rapid. He had not risen from the east three years before new to the west, but he was not the one man there. Of his relations with east, family or otherwise, nothing was said. For them his life began and ended in Dakota. Of course, his water could see, though on actual expression was given to the feeling, that there was but one expectation in regard to him and Doris, to whose uncommon beauty and sweetness they all seemed fully alive. And Sweetwater wondered, as many of us have wondered, at the gulf frequently existing between fancy and fact.

Later there came a small excitement. The doctor was seen riding by on his way to the sick man. From the window where he sat, Sweetwater watched him pass up the street and take the road he had himself so lately traversed.

And so an hour—two hours passed. Others were watching the old horse now. The street filled with many an eager figure with head turned northward. From the open doorways women stepped, looked in the direction of their anxiety and retreated to their work again. Suspense was every where; the moments dragged like hours. A sudden change took place in the aspect of the street. Men and people running, and to another moment saw why. The doctor had shown himself on the porch which all were watching. Was he coming out? No, he stands quite still, runs his eye over the people waiting quietly in the road, and beckons to one of the smaller boys. The child, with upturned face, stands listening to what he has to say, then starts on a run for the village liar. He is stopped, questioned, questioned, and allowed to run on Mamie rush forth to meet him. He is panting, but quiet. Mr. Brotherson has waked up conscious, and the doctor says, for the first time.

CHAPTER XXV.

The Oval Hut.

Right by the inviting hotel a station. Sweetwater, who knew when to be frank and open, as well as when to be reserved and ambiguous, made no effort to disguise the nature of his business or his chief cause of interest in Oswald Brotherson.

His friend, therefore, was a plain announcement.

"Mr. Fenton, my name is Sweetwater. I am from New York, and represent for the source, Mr. Challoner, whose name I have simply to mention, for you to understand that my business is with Mr. Brotherson, whom I am sorry to find seriously, if not dangerously ill. Will you let me know long you think it will be before I can have a talk with him on a subject which I will not trespass from you may prove a very exciting one?"

"Weeks, works," returned the doctor. "Mr. Brotherson has been a very sick man and the only hope I have of his recovery is the fact that he is ignorant of his trouble or that he has any cause for doubt or dread. What then, if any intimation should be given him of the terrible tragedy suggested by the name you have mentioned? The man would die before your eyes. Mr. Challoner, you will have to wait."

That I see; but if I knew when I might speak—"

"I can give you no date. You had better return to New York. Later, you can write me if you wish, or Mr. Challoner can. You may have confidence to my reply; it will not mislead you."

Sweetwater muttered his thanks and rose. Then he slowly sat down again.

"Dr. Fenton," he began, "you are a man to be trusted. I'm in a devil of a fix, and there is just a possibility that you may be able to help me out. It is the general impression in New York, as you know, that Miss Challoner committed suicide. But the circumstances do not fully bear out that theory, nor can Mr. Challoner be made to accept it. Indeed, he is so convinced of its falsehood, that he stands ready to do anything, pay anything, suffer anything, to have this distressful blight removed from his daughter's good name. Mr. Brotherson was terfere, tolerating. For what purpose had it been built and why this isolation? It was too flimsy for a reservoir and too expensive for the wild freak of a crank.

A nearer view increased his curiosity. In the purchase of the roof over the curving sides he found fresh food for inquiry. As he examined it in the walk he made around the whole structure, he came to a place where something like a hinge became visible and further on another. The roof was not simply a roof; it was also a lid capable of being raised for the air and light which the lack of windows necessitated. This was an odd discovery indeed, giving to the uncanny structure the appearance of a huge box, the cover of which could be raised or lowered at pleasure. And again he asked himself for what it could be intended? Nothing in his experience supplied him with an answer.

A cause was approaching. He could hear the heavy tread of horses moving, and presently the rattle of a wagon. Then a figure appeared at the corner of the building, and Sweetwater saw that it was Mr. Brotherson's coachman, Clarence, who, on seeing the visitor, stopped short and looked at him with a surprise which he made no effort to conceal.

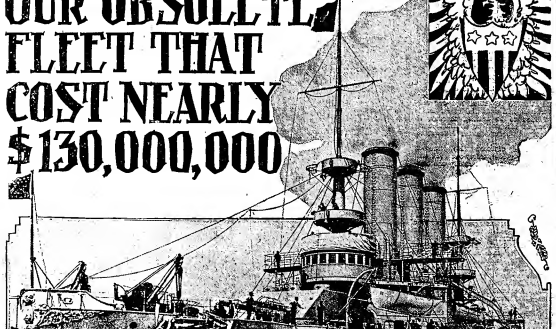
"You here?" he cried. "I thought you had gone back to New York."

"So I have been, but I am here again. Is your master able to see me?"

"I don't know. He's been very sick, and I've been told to keep away from him. But I'm glad to see you. I've been wanting to have a talk with you, and I'm glad you've come back. Can't you tell me how it all happened? Was it a fall or a blow? Was he found in the house or out?"

"Wait a minute," Sweetwater interposed, with a smile. "I'm not the one to answer your questions. Ask Mr. Brotherson himself, if you can get at him.

OUR OBSOLETE FLEET THAT COST NEARLY $130,000,000



The Indiana

The Iowa — Evans's Ship in Cuban Campaign

The Monterey

FIFTEEN years ago George Dewey stood on the bridge of the famous Olympia and won the battle of Manila bay, William T. Sampson from the bridge of the armored cruiser New York directed the operations before Santiago, and the pennant of Winfield Scott Schley fluttered from the mast-head of the beautiful three-funnel armored cruiser Chicago. The world acclaimed the commanders of the squadrons of which these vessels were the flag-ships, while all America joined in one grand hurrah for a navy that was admittedly one of the best on the seven seas.

The American navy is still among the best, but the ships that were fought by Dewey and by Sampson and by Schley are no longer figured in the line-up that makes the great fleet under command of Rear Admiral Badger one of the most powerful fighting organizations the world has ever seen.

Every one of the famous ships of 1898 is today officially admitted to be obsolete, and all of them put together would not be as powerful as is the giant superdreadnaught Wyoming, or the Arkansas or the Florida, or the Utah, any one of which would be a match for all the ships that fought under Dewey and Sampson combined, if such a test should be made.

Just a year ago the then secretary of the navy, George von L. Meyer, publicly called attention to the fact that the American navy had more than its full quota of battleships whose day in the first line had passed and the places of which would have to be taken by more modern ships of the Wyoming and Florida classes if the United States was to retain its position as the world's second naval power. The other day the chairman of the ex-naval secretary was recalled by a naval officer in New York, who took pencil and pad and, going back fifteen and twenty and twenty-five years, figured out just what the obsolete ships now adorning the naval lists originally cost the United States government.

It was an ridiculously easy, the computation of that total value of famous ships that are ready to die a naval death of old age. The result was astounding, and when at last the navy man wiped his brow and announced the result of that little mathematical test of his he had proved that the value of those ships, some of them still less than a dozen years old, reached the stupendous total of more than $100,000,000, or, to be exact, $129,323,816.

Of this $130,000,000 fleet that was, it is interesting, and in a way sad, to note that it includes the Saratoga, the name given Sampson's old flagship New York when her name was taken so that it could be given to the mighty superdreadnaught New York now nearing completion in the navy yard in Brooklyn. Schley's flagship, the Brooklyn; the Olympia, from the bridge of which Dewey uttered his famous order to Captain Gridley, "You may fire when ready, Gridley," the Iowa, that was "Bob" Evans' ship in 1898; the Indiana, and the Massachusetts, sister ships of which won fame and glory before Santiago, and the Oregon, which won the plaudits of an admiring world by her great run around the Horn, and which in her old age will probably be given the honor of being the first American war vessel to pass through the Panama canal in April of next year.

Then, of course, there was the old Texas, the ship that was commanded by the beloved Captain Philip, the vessel from the deck of which he offered his prayer of thanksgiving to God when Santiago's battle was ended and the Spanish ships had met their doom—the same ship from which Philip ordered his men not to cheer when the Vizcaya, the Cristobal Colon, the Maria Theresa, the flower of Cervera's squadron, were burning and sinking down into the grave to which the deadly shots of Sampson's gunners had consigned them. But the old Texas, which, like the New York, was renamed so that the name of the Lone Star state might adorn that of the new New York's sister, has long since met her fate.

Ripped, riddled and torn by the shells of the newer and more modern ships, to prove the mechansmship of whose men the Texas was destroyed, the hulk of that old ship—a sister of the Maine that went down in Havana harbor, and which gained imperishable fame—

BAD FIRE ON PRAIRIE SOUTHEAST OF TOWN

SOME GRAIN AND MUCH HAY DESTROYED LAST THURSDAY AND FRIDAY.

Last Thursday and Friday a destructive fire ran over much of the prairie country southeast of town and burned practically everything in an area of country several miles in extent. The burned area extends from Paul Schaumaker's place south on the east side of the N. P. tracks to the Duluth line of the Great Northern. Its extent east and west is also several miles. Mr. Schaumaker lost several stacks of oats and some hay and estimates his loss at $700. No other losses of grain have been reported, the country in which the fire ran being unsettled. However, much hay had been put up on the land and hundreds of the stacks were burned.

The fire is said to have originated from the camp of some people who had been putting up hay.

At about the same time there was a fire at the farm of Pearl Wagner, near Dorothy. Mr. Wagnehl lost considerable hay but the members of a threshing crew, working near, were able to put out the fire and prevent it from spreading.

The Serum Situation.

Hog cholera is usually most prevalent during late August, September, and October, but this year it has appeared a month earlier than usual and in sections of the state heretofore regarded as unaffected.

It seems hard that we should know the best methods of preventing this disease and yet be unable to put this knowledge to good use, but the legislature at its last session appropriated $10,000 a year for the next two years with which to supply Minnesota farmers with serum, but specified a price which is only about one-fourth of its actual cost. This means a heavy loss on all serum sold, and practically limits the output of the plant as it must stop the distribution for any given year when it has lost $10,000. When serum was sold at cost the plant was self-supporting and there was no limit to the amount of serum distributed except the capacity of the plant. Now that we must sell at a loss we must stop as soon as we lose a certain amount each year.

We have orders now on file for as much serum as we can produce during the next six months, and to make[illegible] our shipments are giving the preference to stock herds. We advise local veterinarians to procure serum from commercial serum plants, but they are also unable to fill their orders.

If the disease has not yet appeared in your herd, read up on hog cholera, especially as to how it is spread, and take every possible precaution to keep out infection. Do not allow visitors or neighbors to get into your hog pens or yards. Have one person designated to look after your hogs and do not allow him to go near a farm where cholera exists. At the first appearance of cholera in your herd, consult your nearest veterinarian. If you have none near you, get into communication with the Experiment Station, and place your order on file. You will be told when it will be possible to send you the serum, and when a veterinarian can be sent to administer it.—T. Preston Hoskins, Assistant Veterinarian, University Farm, St. Paul.

IT IS NOW GETTING A LITTLE WARMER

SIGNS OF APPROACHING CITY ELECTION ARE BEGINNING TO APPEAR.

Until within the past forty-eight hours there has been little to indicate that any one knew that there was to be a city election the first Tuesday after the first Monday of next month.

Several days ago E. G. Buse made known his intention to seek re-election as city treasurer and his petition has been circulated and filed. There is no opposition as yet of any opposition to his re-election.

Mayor I. Lemieux will be a candidate for re-election and Sam D. Hunt, alderman from the Second ward, and their petitions are being circulated. It is also reported that Leo Steinert will seek election as alderman from the Second ward, opposing Alderman Hunt.

It has also been reported that T. A. Crompe, alderman at large and president of the council, has reported Paul, alderman from the Third ward, will not seek re-election.

Just what the[illegible] about all—for the present.

BIG INCREASE IN STATE TAX LEVY

Tax Payers Will Have to "Fork Over" Money For State Purposes.

St. Paul.—(Special)—Perhaps the most interesting thing to the ordinary taxpayer of late is the announcement of the state tax rate for 1913, collectable a year hence. Decidedly interesting, too, when it is known that the taxpayers will have to fork over for state purposes nearly $2,500,000 more than they did a year ago and that on a valuation many millions of dollars in excess of previous years. The tax, as certified by State Auditor Iverson for 1913, is 5.03 mills on the dollar, or 3.03 mills per year will have cleaned up everything as far as your state obligations are concerned. The levy includes the usual 1.23 mills for the common school fund. Last year the total levy was 3.65 mills, so that this year's levy is an increase of 1.45 mills. The records show that it is the biggest increase in the state tax rate in years, but even though it may be regretted it is modified somewhat by the fact that one mill of the increase is for good roads. This additional tax, however, as the Dunn good road law, was a creation of the last legislature and the assurance of the increase is for the running expenses of the state. There are several other bills which call for the imposition of a fraction of a mill, but they are insignificant in so far as the grand total is concerned. The total assessed valuation of property in the state is $1,359,000,000. Last year it was $1,320,000,000.

As the old saw runs, "Those who dance must pay the fiddler," and it does look as if some fiddling has been done, judging from the price. Of course I know you are going to ask who is responsible for this increased rate. When the next campaign rolls around the increased rate will undoubtedly figure. Those for the governorship will likely attempt to "pass the buck" to the present incumbent, and the present incumbent and his friends will undoubtedly retort, "It is the fault of the legislature." Among the Rines-Nolan house organization. Any way you handle it the new rate is a good campaign cord, but, folks, don't let them stick you with that kind of stuff. We are all more or less responsible and the only way to prevent the tax rate is not higher. We cannot have these good times and not pay the state its clamoring for, without going down in our pockets; nor can we give our state institutions for this and that, which is a feature of every biennial session, and not pay the piper. Everybody is playing the hill in the end. We are paying the hill now and we will continue to pay it. Perhaps it might have been a few cents' smaller bill had we practiced economy, but we plain [illegible] more vigorously in the economic way before we went before him for approval, but after all the [illegible] of the governor's disapproval was behind the majority of the assaults and knowing this, as we did, a veto would be overridden a few later, he practically had to accept the blame for the increased rate of itself. Perhaps this is a wrong view to take of it, but it is the way the game is played and so far the voters have not seen it to select any one who will be differently. As the tax rate was announced the other day it was the talk of everybody in City daily, in chronicling the fact, made comment on the large increase up to the Rines-Nolan house organization. Legislative extravagance was the keynote of the article. And yet had you followed the editorial and campaign utterances of the publication during the legislative session you would have found a consistent cry with demands, every one of which was on account on the state treasury. Good record, isn't it?

Before I pass up this matter of taxes I want to say that this tax rate of better than five mills would have been much worse for the taxpayer, but politics kept it down. Politics and right here I might say if there should be, for two campaigns Mr. Iverson and the Hon. Joe Ray kept the revenue fund was kept so low as to excite comment and was responsible for many false stories having to do with a taxless state in the future. At the same time, however, few knew that the state was borrowing money and running expenses, but by a new and a pretty penny it paid in interest, too. Well, Mr. Iverson, from all appearances, is not so crazy about Governor Eberhart and the organization now and his hold gets to them so he had opposed him ,was that if he had a word out of them that he would run again.

The County Fair.

The state treasury was enriched to the extent of $4,000 last week and all because of a little strong arm work, and right here I might say if there was a little more of this strong arm work perhaps the tax rate might be a little smaller. The National Surety company was the victim and it parted with $4,000 only after Secretary of State Schmahl had said "coms across" and backed it up with a little nerve. Two years ago the state drainage board, of which Mr. Schmahl is a member, contracted for the construction of a ditch in Roseau county. The Standard Drainage company got the contract and failed. The Empire Surety company, which was on its bond, tried to complete the work and failed. The National Surety company bought the assets of the Empire company, but refused to assume its obligations. It was here that the strong arm came in handy. Mr. Schmahl refused to recognize the company in his official capacity until the amount was paid. Last week the $4,000 came across the counter and now the company is again in good standing.

Where some of the taxpayers' money is found is in the issuance of $100,000 in certificates of indebtedness by the state armory board. The certificates are drawn up by the school fund. The money is for the construction of armories in localities having companies in the national guard, but may not be generally known, but the state school fund is one of the big debtedness up to $300,000. The debt is for a period of years at the rate of $30,000 a year. The bonds were authorized by the last legislature.

State Insurance Commissioner Preus, in a statement to Governor Eberhart, announces his opposition to the creation of a rulemaking bureau covering fire and liability insurance as proposed by the last legislature. He does not think the scheme will work out as planned. Mr. Preus, however, says he is willing to have the subject investigated. Whether or not the present scheme of ratemaking is use is immaterial. The only proper course is open to discussion. At this time there is much complaint in the country, owners of rural and small town property contending that they are discriminated against in favor of the large cities.

Governor Eberhart has reappointed C. O. Bryne and A. G. Chambers members of the Duluth and Minneapolis boards of grain appeals. There were a number of applicants for the two positions, but his excellency refused to make any change.

Last week $350,000 in Tennessee refunding bonds owned by the state fell due and the money will be invested in Minnesota municipal and school securities. These bonds are held by the state for the past two years, and the state school fund 4½ per cent. The money will now be reinvested at 4 per cent.

The last legislature made $4,000 the annual salary of most of the heads of state departments and those favored now find that they will be subject to federal income tax. The $4,000 original receiving this sum will have to pay Uncle Sam the benefit of Uncle Sam. Under the law all incomes in excess of $3,000 for single persons and $4,000 for married persons are taxable.

To a man up a tree it looks as if certain ones interested in getting United States Senator Clapp scalp were preparing for business. As the powers see it he has served his time and the next election for United States senator will be around in 1918. In the other day and it was intimated taken as a declaration that he had retired from the Republican party at this time. His remarks were pounced upon with question and even at the Twin City dailies have been busy with his record. That Governor Eberhart is looked upon as a candidate for

CRAZED MULATTOS KILL 8; INJURE 20

SHOOT UP HARRISTON, MISS., BEFORE THEY ARE FINALLY LYNCHED.

MILITIA IS FINALLY CALLED

Soldiers Arrive in Time to Prevent Several More Lynchings—Terrorized Citizens Are at Last Calmed.

Harriston, Miss., Sept. 20 — Two drug-crazed mulatto boys, brothers, brean a reign of murder here that ended only after three white men, four colored and a negro woman had been killed, 20 persons injured and the two boys lynched.

A serious clash between the rocos was prevented by the arrival by special train of national guardsmen from Natchez.

The trouble continued intermittently twelve hours, when Walter Jones, the oldest of the two boys who started the firing, was lynched just after the soldiers arrived. His brother, Will Jones, had been shot and killed by citizens earlier in the day.

The Dead and Injured.

The dead include:- Sheriff G. B. Hammett of Jefferson county, white, shot while leading a posse to where the Jones brothers were hiding; Former Constable Frank Kinsolly, white, shot at his home after being called to the door; Claude Freeman of Fayette, Miss., white, shot at the railway station, while awaiting a train.

Johanna Allen, Tom Weeks, Jesse Thompson and Thead Grayson, negroes, were killed during the shooting.

Yeller Warren, Walter and Will Jones, lynched.

Orrin Gillis, former sheriff, white, was shot in shoulder; Sheriff William Kinsolly, white, was shot in hand; E. B. Appleby, white, conductor of the Yazoo & Mississippi Valley railroad, was shot in breast, leg and arm, dangerous; Ernest Crockett, white, was shot in hand; William Brooks, white, was shot in leg; and W. O. Bond, white, was shot in leg.

The shooting was started by Walter Jones, aged 20, in the negro quarter, where the negro woman and Thead Grayson were shot and killed. Walter then went to the home of his mother and aroused his 18-year-old brother. Together they proceeded through the main street of the little town firing at everyone in sight. Citizens, aroused from their slumber by the shots, poured out of the windows and then hastened to cover.

Call ex-Constable to Death.

The two boys, soon after leaving their home, went to the home of Frank Kinsolly, a former constable, and when he responded to their call, he was shot through the head by Walter Jones. Kinsolly's son, William, saw his father fall and reached for a gun, but before he could fire he received a bullet in one of his hands.

The Yazoo and Mississippi Valley depot is near the Kinsolly home and the two boys walked in that direction. A train had arrived from Natchez just a few moments before and Conductor E. B. Appleby was standing at the station talking to Flagman Bond. Without warning the boys fired on them and both fell. Then the boys directed their fire at Claud Freeman, who was waiting for a train. He was instantly killed. The negroes then fired into the train, terrorizing the passengers.

Boys Make Last Stand.

The crazed boys then made their way to a cottonseed house nearby, where they determined to make their last stand. Frightened citizens by this time had gathered and telephoned for Sheriff Hammett at Fayette. Summoning former Sheriff Gillis as a company him, Hinmett started for Harriston on horseback, arriving about 1 o'clock. A small crowd of men were firing into the seed house, but no one had ventured to load the posse to the place.

Taking a few men with him Sheriff Hammett, heavily armed, started towards the seed house, whereupon Walter Jones fled to a field nearby and, as Hammett approached, the negro killed him instantly. A shot from the seed house brought down Gillis.

By this time the countryside had been aroused and farmers came pouring in from every direction. A call was sent to Governor Brewer for troops.

Finding his hiding place too precarious, Will Jones started to run towards a cool chute, but had gone only a few steps when a bullet ended his life. A rope was placed around the body, it was strung up to a telegraph pole near the railway station and became a target.

Soon after Will Jones was killed, Walter Jones picked Tom Weeks, a negro, off the cool chute by his deadly aim. He was caught and lynched shortly thereafter.

EXPLAINS INTEREST OF U. S.

SECRETARY HOUSTON URGES BETTER ROADS.

Believes They Are More Necessary Than Trans-Continental Auto Highways.

Detroit, Mich., Oct. 1.—Secretary Houston of the United States depart ment of agriculture, in an address before the American Road congress, explained the interest of the government with reference to road building. He urged good roads for the farmer in preference to great transcontinental highways for automobilists and at the same time he said, he did not underestimate the valuable service rendered by automobilists in the propaganda for road building.

"The suggestion of great national trans-continental roads appeals to my imagination and to the sense of pleasure that I experience in riding about the country in my friend's automobiles," he said. "But that the essential to be done in the providing of good roads which shall get products from the community farms to the nearest railroad point is much more profitable, comfortable, pleasurable and certain to net a return to me, and it is obvious that the representatives of the people in congress are like-minded. For in making their recent appropriation of a half million dollars for good roads they stipulated that it should be used in improving the condition of post roads with a view to the economy and efficiency of postal delivery and for the transportation of farm products to the market.

"The first practical essentials in the planning of road legislation would seem to be the basing of operations by co-operation between the states and federal government, would leave with the latter the initiative in the selection of roads to receive aid and as much of the immediate construction and maintenance as would be practicable.

"It is also reasonably clear that there must be some automatic checks put into the demand to be made upon congress and that this should be afforded through the requirement that the states and the localities should contribute an amount both for construction and maintenance fairly equal to and possibly double that contributed by the federal government."

Other speakers before the congress included:

Logan Waller Page, president of the American Highway association; A. W. Campbell, state highway commissioner and canals in Canada; Col. William Sadler, chairman Massachusetts state highway commission, and Frank W. Bolton, state highway commissioner of Missouri.

Physicians state that it is necessary to administer spirites at frequent intervals during the day. His daughter, Mrs. Angell Hinsdale of Chicago, boarded the train for Ann Arbor.

MEXICAN CITY HAS REIGN OF TERROR

AMERICANS FLEE FROM PIEDRAS NEGRAS UNDER ORDERS OF CONSUL.

FEDERAL ARMY NEAR CITY

Wildest Panic Is Result—American Troops Rushed to Rio Grande to Keep Back the Insurrectos.

Piedras Negras, Mex., Oct. 2.—Terror has gripped this city, the provincial capital of the Mexican constitutionalists, with the victorious northward march of the federals and the arrival of hundreds of refugees from the surrounding devastated country.

Americans Flee Country.

Obeying the instructions of United States Consul Blocker, American residents of Piedras Negras began the exodus and hundreds of persons crossed the international bridge into Eagle Pass, many carrying their possessions on their backs.

Consul Blocker's warning to foreigners to quit Piedras Negras immediately was in anticipation of nothing should the constitutionalists be forced to abandon their provisional capital.

Fire in Their Wake.

As the rebel army is being driven northward by the government troops under General Maas, the retreating insurgents are setting fire to villages. Reports from the front last night were that the rebels were now closing in on the town of Sabinas, 30 miles south, the constitutionalists are expected to fall back, either on Monterrey or on the line from Monclova-ville, Texas, or on Piedras Negras.

United States troops are hurrying to Eagle Pass from San Antonio to reinforce the garrison there and it is understood that with the first attempt to molest the property of foreigners here an ultimatum will be issued.

Situation Is Not Anticipated.

Washington.—Officials of the state and war departments of the day received only meager reports of the developments at Piedras Negras and it was said that no orders had been sent either to consulate or army officers. At both departments confidence was expressed that there would be no serious trouble, even if the American soldiers found it necessary to guard the international bridge or to deal with refugees from the constitutionalist army.

Brigadier General Bliss, commanding the border forces, is using his own discretion in dealing with the situation and the troops sent to Eagle Pass, Texas, to reinforce the little garrison there, moved without orders from Washington.

'BUSINESS ROADS' ADVOCATED

Representative Shackleton Addresses American Road Congress at Detroit, Mich.

Detroit, Mich., Oct. 2.—Urging support of "business roads" as opposed to so-called "touring roads," United States Representative Dursey W. Shackleford, chairman of the house committee on roads, in an address before the American road congress, admitted he was "not in harmony with the dominant spirit" of the congress. He urged support for the "business roads" class, which, he said, aimed for "cheaper transportation and the means or cost of living."

The "touring roads" class, declared Representative Shackleford, "demands that the United States shall limit its road activities to the construction and maintenance of a few "means to ocean" and "lake shore" highways, built of great perfection and then leave the rest of the people to build their own roads, or do without, as they choose.

MINNEAPOLIS CHARTER LOSES

Proposed New Form of Government Defeated by a Large Vote.

Minneapolis—Citizens defeated the charter submitted for their consideration. Not a ward gave it the required fourteenth majority. Only one ward gave it a majority of all.

It is believed that the scheme would have required four-sevenths of all votes cast. It did not receive three-sevenths. In fact, the total vote given by those who wished to abandon the present government and accept what the commission offered was but a little better than two-sevenths. Estimating somewhat roughly, five per sons voted against it for every two for it.

The total vote cast was: Yes, 9,842; "No," 22,691.

"BIG DITCH" NOW ALMOST COMPLETE

Removal of Gamboa Dike Means End of Work Is Near.

WATERS OF OCEANS MEET

First Steps Are Taken Toward Destroying Big Embankment Which Holds Gatun Lake Out of Culebra Cut.

Colon, Panama, Oct. 1.—The climax of nine years of untiring work on the part of the men who have been building the Panama canal came today when the waters of Gatun lake were permitted to run for the first time into the Culebra cut. This evening operation marked the virtual completion of the great isthmian waterway.

The water was permitted to flow into the cut today through four 20-inch pipes extending through the Gamboa dike, which has held the waters of the lake back from the cut. This was done in order that there may be enough water in the cut to prevent any damage when the dike is finally removed.

The final destruction of the big dike is scheduled for October. 10, when charges of dynamite, placed in it already drilled in the dike will be exploded. The explosion of these charges will not completely destroy the dike, but will weaken it and loosen the dirt so that the force of the waters from Gatun lake will carry it away. Steam shovels will remove the remnants of the dike, leaving an open passageway from ocean to ocean.

Big Engineering Feats.

Although the canal will not be officially declared completed for some time, and the formal opening of the waterway to the commerce of the world more than a year distant, the canal engineers look upon the destruction of the Gamboa dike as marking the real completion of the canal. The big engineering feats have all been accomplished, the excavation work practically has been completed, the locks are finished and the Gaillard cut, the last section of the canal to be completed, is now ready for the first vessel to pass through it.

The first vessel to pass through the canal probably will be a boat of the isthmian canal commission, George W. Goethals, chairman of the commission and chief engineer of the canal, and his principal assistants. The final voyage through the canal is scheduled for some time during this month. Within another month it is expected the waters in Gatun lake will have risen high enough to bring the waters in the entire canal up to the deep water level required for the passage of the largest ships.

It is said that a few days ago as the entry part of August, assurances were given Washington officially that if the emergency should arise, the entire Atlantic battleship fleet could be put through the canal into the Pacific. The work has been hurried with that end in view, it is said, as no emergency has existed, but this assurance is an indication of the belief of the engineers that their work is now practically finished.

Culebra Cut Caused Trouble.

The excavation of the Culebra cut, into which the water has just been turned, has been one of the engineering feats connected with the building of the canal, and has caused the engineers more trouble than any other portion of the big "ditch." To Col. D. D. Gaillard, the engineer of the extravel division, is given the credit for carrying this gigantic piece of work through to a successful terminus.

The disastrous slides in the cut were discouraging to the engineers, but they never lost their courage and in many weeks, but Colonel Gaillard and his assistants set to work to remove all their work, and at last have conquered the treacherous banks of the deep cut. The carrying into effect of the danger of slides will be eliminated now that the water has been turned into the cut.

A little more than a month ago the giant steam shovels finished their work in the Culebra cut. Since that time the workmen have been busy removing the shovels, the railroad tracks and other machinery used in the excavation work. There is still some dirt to be removed from the cut before the channel is finished, but this work will be done by suction dredges floating on the waters of the canal. Dredges are now at work on the completion of the waterway by such boats as they will finish the canal through.

Immense Artificial Lake Created.

Gatun lake, the waters of which are now flowing into the Culebra cut, was the pivotal point about which the entire canal project revolved, and the creation of this lake, together with the construction of Gatun dam, constituted another great engineering feat in the construction of the canal. Gatun lake is an artificial body of water covering about 164 square miles and in addition it was created by the building of the immense Gatun dam across the valley of the Chagres, dotted with native villages and cultivated fields. Construction of the canal passes through this lake for a distance of 23 miles with a width varying from 600 to 1,000 feet.

At the northern end of the lake is the Gatun locks, a huge flight of six artificial ridges more than a mile long, which lift the canal from sea level an adequate idea of the magnitude of this dam. Nearly half a mile wide at its base, it rises 135 feet above the water' airface, and 100 feet wide at the top, the dike which many engineers predicted would never withstand the rush of the Chagres' waters is admitted now to be so strong that nothing short of an earthquake such as has never been known in the Central American region can harm it. The Gatun dam, Gatun lake and the Culebra cut, as gigantic as they are the proportions of each, dwarf the other engineering works of the canal that in themselves have challenged the admiration of the world.

World Gives Goethals Credit.

To Col. George Goethals, chairman of the isthmian canal commission and chief engineer of the commission and governor of the canal zone, the world will give the credit for the successful completion of the Panama canal." Colonel Goethals could—but have accomplished his task without the assistance of such men as Col. H. F. Hodges, Lieut. Col. David Du B. Ballard and Lieut. Col. William L. Sibert. Army engineers, who have had charge of various phases of the work, but Colonel Goethals is recognized as the real builder of the canal.

Under Colonel Goethals the greater part of the $375,000,000 which the canal will have cost when it is completed has been spent. It has been by far the costliest engineering project ever undertaken. Nearly three-fifths of a billion dollars has been spent in digging a 40-mile "ditch." This means that the Panama canal has cost the United States $10,000,000 a mile.

Over $16,000,000 of the total amount spent has been used to make the canal zone a healthful and sanitary. It has been suggested that this is an enormous amount of money to spend in cleaning up a place in which few people will reside permanently, but the engineers say that the sanitation of the canal zone was the chief factor in the success of the canal's reality. The failure of the French has been attributed to a large extent to the fact that the workmen could not resist the fever and pest ridden country.

The building of the great locks which raise a vessel to a height of 87 feet above the level at one end of the canal and lower it the same distance at the other end, has been in charge of two of Colonel Goethals' assistants, Colonel Hodges and Lieutenant Colonel Sibert. Colonel Hodges's work in installing the immense locks gates that form so important a part of the operating machinery of the canal, and his ability to overcome all obstacles had led Colonel Goethals to call him a genius. The building, pois ing and operation of the locks gates constitute one of the delicate problems of lock canal construction, and the proper handling of this problem has been Colonel Hodge's contribution to the task of construction of the canal.

Lieutenant Colonel Sibert has had charge of building of the great Gatun dam and locks at Gatun, in addition to other duties. He now has active service in the Philippines, and he is known in the army as a builder as well as an engineer. His fighting qualities have enabled him to carry through the great work for which he has had charge in the canal zone.

Realize Dream of Centuries.

Through the work of these men—all of them members of Uncle Sam's fighting body—the United States has been able to realize the dream of a truth the dream of centuries. In nine years these men have carried through an undertaking that was first thought of several hundreds of years ago. There is evidence that the idea of an isthmian canal was born as early as the sixteenth century. Historical records the fact that the inquisition declared such a project to be in the face of the earth to be impious and further discussion of the matter was forbidden by the pope. Charles the fifth of Spain, who was then ruler of the Panama canal zone, ordered a survey of the route.

The United States government first took definite action looking toward the construction of an isthmian canal in 1904, when congress voted for the building of a Nicaraguan canal. An expedition was sent to Nicaragua to make the preliminary surveys, and had the canal been given to Nicaragua the Panama canal would not be completed.

Os Leseps First to Dig.

The matter rested until after the war, when a negotiations for the canal commission was entered into by the United States government. Before anything had been accomplished the concession for a Panama canal had been given to Lucien Napoleon Banaparte Wyse, a Frenchman. His concession was sold to Ferdinand de Lesseps. The engineer in charge of the canal company organized with de Lesseps at its head was the first one to actually begin operations to dig the canal. Nine years da Lesseps struggled manfully with the task, but at the end that was ever was called upon to face.

Such was the history of the isthmian canal project for some 300 or 400 years, until the day in 1904 when the United States took hold.

In nine years the dream of the centuries has been realized.

EVIDENCE SHOWING WIFE MADE TRADES

MRS. SULZER'S PART IN 'FINANCIAL TRANSACTIONS IS SHOWN.

BROKER GIVES TESTIMONY

Says Governor Said Wife Was Interested—Executive Deposited Securities to Borrow Money to Pay Loan.

Albany, N. Y., Oct. 2.—Evidence that Governor Sulzer's stock transactions with the New York brokerage firm of Harris and Fuller were for the account of Mrs. Sulzer was disclosed at the trial of his impeachment. The testimony of the impeachment clerks that the governor made use of some of his unreported campaign contributions in these transactions.

Melville R. Fuller, head of the firm, said that the governor and his wife met the Mrs. Sulzer had a loan with the now defunct Carnegie Trust company of New York, and that in order to take up the loan for which he had given her note, he had deposited securities belonging to Mrs. Sulzer with Harris and Fuller, and received the money thereon to pay the note. Fuller said the governor had told him that the executive mansion in Albany on July 30 last when he had called there at Mr. Sulzer's request after receiving the subpoenas to appear before the Frawley investigating committee.

Fuller Is Questioned.

"Mr. Fuller, you know that these securities were Mrs. Sulzer's, don't you?" inquisitor asked him, according to the witness.

The broker said he replied in the negative.

"Well," said the governor, "these securities belonged to Mrs. Sulzer when I brought them to you," Fuller said the governor told him in the executive mansion in Albany on July 30 last when he had called there at Mr. Sulzer's request after receiving the subpoenas to appear before the Frawley investigating committee.

Fuller Is Questioned.

"Mr. Fuller, you know that these securities were Mrs. Sulzer's, don't you?" inquisitor asked him, according to the witness.

The broker said he replied in the negative.

"Well," said the governor, "these securities belonged to Mrs. Sulzer when I brought them to you," Fuller said the governor told him in the executive mansion in Albany on July 30 last when he had called there at Mr. Sulzer's request after receiving the subpoenas to appear before the Frawley investigating committee.

"I said to Governor Sulzer, 'That may be all right. There is no evidence of anything of that kind on my books and cannot be proven by me. If it is true, you have made a mistake in proving it as the books of the Carnegie Trust company must be a matter of record.'"

Account Opened in 1910.

The governor's account with Harris and Fuller, which the impeachment managers charge was a marginal or speculative account, on a loan account, was opened in 1910, according to the books of the firm which Fuller presented.

The Carnegie Trust company, it was alleged, was in financial difficulties that year and subsequently it failed. The account on which he showed a long series of borrowing on securities brought to the firm by Sulzer, but also the purchase and sale of other securities, calls for "margin" and other debits and credits of cash payments of stock in response to these calls.

The account began in June, 1910, when the governor deposited 100 shares of "Big Four" worth at the then market price of $200 and obtained thereon a loan of $5,000. The next day he deposited 100 shares, making the firm 100 shares of the same stock against which he gave no security except the equity in his "Big Four" shares.

Stock Took Tumble.

Then Big Four began to tumble in the market and the rest of the account was a record of efforts by Mr. Sulzer to keep up the "margin" as declared in letters. Harris and Fuller wrote to him using that term in declaring that the deficit in the account be made good.

Sixteen thousand dollars in cash, which the impeachment managers claim formed part of the governor's campaign contributions, was used in meeting these calls for "margin" according to his books. Finally, in July, 1913, Sulzer left the governorship of New York banker and a member of the governor's staff, paid off the account by paying off a debit balance against the brokers, $72,429 in stocks or cash and his bat loss, excluding the amount paid by Josephthal was $2,414.

The governor authorized Josephthal to close the account in a note to Harris and Fuller, produced in evidence as follows:

"Please deliver to Lieutenant Commander L. M. Josephthal the securities you are holding and in my loan upon the payment of the debit bal ance thereon.

(Signed "William Sulzer,
"for Mrs. Sulzer."

Japanese Treaty Talked.

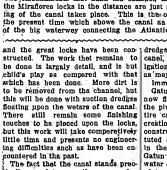
Tokio, Japan, Oct. 2.—It is understood here that Japan and the United States are engaged in a discussion of a proposed treaty of arbitration, a new commercial treaty between the two countries.

Jordan's Successor Named.

Stanford University, Cal., Oct. 2.—John Casper Branner was elected of the oldest members of the Stanford faculty, has just been inaugurated as the university's second president.

Troops Called to Protect Men.

Calumet, Mich., Oct. 2.—Minor disturbances occurred in the copper strike district again. Troops were called to the Allouez mine to disperse strikers, who, it is said, menaced non-union miners at work. Fifty mine guards arrived for the Centennial mine and they were escorted by cavalry. According to strike headquarters, 60 of the strike-breakers at the Quincy mine deserted their posts, leaving only a small number of imported men at work.



This picture gives a view of the great expanse of water now gradually filling the Panama canal, which is almost ready for the admission of the big ships. To the left of the picture may be seen the locks at the Pacific entrance. The embankments that flank the channel, the broad expanse of water and the Miraflores locks in the distance are all features of the great engineering of the canal taken place. This is the only photograph received up to the present time which shows the canal as it will appear at the spanning of the big waterway connecting the Atlantic and Pacific oceans.

MINNESOTA STATE NEWS

SERUM QUACKS ARE WORKING COUNTRY

PREY ON MINNESOTA FARMERS WHO FEAR HOG CHOLERA PEST.

DOESN'T PROVE EFFICACIOUS

Worthless Remedies Are Administered and Swindle Just the Same—Rural People Are Warned.

Appleton.—Hog cholera has brought out several quacks who are preying on the farmers. Reports from Swift and Renville counties tell of men who are going about offering to vaccinate hogs. Their so-called serums, are worthless. The farmers who pay for it find that their hogs die just as if they had never been treated.

Farmers Are Warned.

One such man operating in Renville county claimed to administer an antiseine that would make hogs immune or cure hogs that had been been attacked by the disease. This stuff he administered was not a serum at all. W. E. Morris, the county agent of Renville county, heard of the stranger's work and warned the farmers, and the man took flight.

In Swift county, Alfred Carlsted, county agent, says that one man took from the farmers of the county not less than $700 with concoctions just as worthless. There is no protection for farmers against this kind of quacks save their own common sense. Only licensed veterinarians are allowed to use the serum developed at the state experimental station, but the common cial serums may be administered by anyone so that if a man comes along professing to have a serum the farmer must be his own judge. The best way for farmers would be to appeal to their county agents or to licensed veterinarians. If they cannot reach such men they should appeal to the agricultural teachers of consolidated high schools or of agricultural high schools or to some graduate who will be informed on the subject.

Future Legislation Planned.

There is talk of legislative measures to protect the farmers in the future, but that will do no good now.

Renville county has a good corn crop and has suffered losses by the cholera. So the farmers there, as in Lac Qui Parle county, are planning to ship in cattle and feed them for profit. The plan of using silage as a starter for such fattening is also being considered, though this has made little headway in southwestern Minnesota as yet.

NORTHWEST CORN CENTER

Minnesota Town Believes It Holds This Position and Crowns This Queen Kating at Fair.

Madison, Minn., Sept. 27.—That "Corn is King" was clearly demonstrated yesterday on the opening day of the Lac Qui Parle county fair and corn carnival at Madison. Never had the fair grounds been so elaborately or handsomely decorated, and all with the central idea that Lac Qui Parle county is the center of the corn belt of the Northwest, and that it has the goods to prove all claims.

The central decoration was a heavy oval corn carnival, standing in the center of the grounds. This pyramid was 24 feet high with faces 16 feet wide. White and yellow Dent corn was used in building this pyramid of bounty. On one side appears in white corn on a background of yellow was the motto, "Corn Is King," and on another section, in the same lettering, were the words "Lac Qui Parle County." This pyramid of corn was the work of Professor J. S. Jones, agricultural teacher at the Madison High school, and four of his boy pupils.

Clothes "September Morn" for U. S. M.

Minneapolis.—A couple of days ago William Barney trekked to from the harvest fields of North Dakota. He had saved some of his hard earned cash to have "September Morn," in all her loveliness, tattooed on his forearm. Then he sought the nearby recruiting office in St. Paul to enlist. Lieutenant Henry Schmidt, in charge, saw this and said "Nay." Then Barney disappeared. Wednesday he returned and when he bared his arm, "September Morn" was garbed in loop petticoats that had been tattooed on. He was accepted.

Anti-Spoon Order Costly.

Minneapolis.—It pays in the city of Minneapolis park board more than $500 this season to try to enforce its standard of moral ideas upon young people who are wont to go boating on Lake Harriet. A conservative estimate puts the falling off in receipts in the neighborhood of $500 for the season, and it is not denied that the park board order as to the position in which young people should sit in a boat caused canoes and boats owned by the park board to be much less popular than they were before.

Winona Has New Lighting System.

Winona.—The city council has determined upon a radical change in the methods of city lighting, doing away with are electric lights except in the business district and using Nernst and gas lights in the residential sections.

To Excited to Escape.

Belgrade.—O. C. Reiquam, recently postmaster here, was instantly killed by a 500 fire passenger train in the Hewden yards. Eye witnesses say he stood in the middle of the track and was too excited to move.

BID FOR ILLINOIS FARMERS

Minnesota Hopes to Make Favorable Impression With Exhibit at Sucker State Fair.

When the gates of the Springfield, Ill., state fair are thrown open to the public, Minnesota will be represented with a very large and complete agricultural exhibit selected there by the Minnesota State Board of Immigration. This exhibit will consist of practically everything grown on Minnesota's farms, together with products from our iron mines and stone quarries, showing the natural and manufactured resources of the "North Star State." Corn, potatoes, clover, alfalfa and forbes will be prominent features of the exhibit and man in charge of the booth will make a strong effort to impress the people of Illinois with the fact that Minnesota is the son of the most splendid agricultural states in the union.

"We had splendid success at the Indiana state fair," said Fred D. Sherman, commissioner of immigration, "but I am inclined to believe that the Illinois fair will be even better. We have a much better location at the Springfield, Illinois fair than we had at Indianapolis, as we have a good space in the Dome building, which is the most popular building on the fair ground, and it is almost certain that everyone who visits the Illinois state fair will see the Minnesota booth." Two registers will be maintained during the entire ten days of the fair at the Minnesota booth, and it is expected that several thousand names of Illinois farmers will be secured in this way, which will be followed up with personal letters and literature. Every person that comes into the main entrance at the fair grounds will be handed a card inviting them to "Call at the Minnesota booth and get acquainted." The exhibit will be in charge of Fred D. Sherman, commissioner of immigration, and other attaches of the department.

The combinations for the office of president of the federation and vice president of the fifth district were unanimous. Mrs. C. D. Whitet announced her withdrawal as a candidate, except from Minneapolis, an act which won her many friends.

Girl Killed Under Auto.

Ada.—Alma Mettleson, daughter of Ole Mattison, living near Borup, was killed while driving her father's car after dark. She was alone, so the cause of the accident will never be known, but it is surmised she was driving at a high speed and lost control, the car then turning off the road. She was pinned under the seat with her face in the ground and the back of the front seat over her neck. It is thought she was killed outright.

Hastings Pioneer Stricken.

Hastings.—Judge Wood Wood, one of Hastings' old and prominent residents, died at his home Saturday after a protracted illness at the age of 86. He leaves one daughter and two sons.

Made Permanent Honorary Pres.

Brainerd.—Postmaster Ben Sanford was elected permanent honorary president of the Minnesota Federation of Women's clubs after an address which she made late Friday afternoon at the open house before the convention of the Minnesota Federation of Women's clubs. Mrs. T. D. Wilson, the president of the Women's club of Minneapolis, made the motion and it was seconded by unanimous applause, which was proof of the love and esteem in which the aged instructor is held.

AGED WOMAN LOST IN WILDS

LITCHFIELD SHERIFF RECIEVES SAD NEWS.

Canadian Mounted Police and Indians Conduct a Fruitless Search for Her.

Litchfield.—Sheriff M. Konahek, of this city, last week received a letter which has been a month in transit, informing him that his mother-in-law, Mrs. Mike Konahek, Sr., was lost in the wilds of the Peace River country, Canada. On July 17 Mr. and Mrs. Konahek left their claim by team to visit their son, Leonard, at Grand Prairie, camping en route. During the first night the horses which had been tethered nearby became frightened and bolted.

The next day the couple separated going in opposite directions, to search for the animals, and it is supposed Mrs. Konahek, who is 69 years of age, lost her way. All efforts by parties of men to find the missing woman were fruitless, although the whistle at the sawmill in the vicinity was blown at intervals night and day for 19 days, and the Canadian mounted police and a number of Indians were employed in the search. A reward of $500 was offered to anyone finding the aged woman.

THREE HURT IN SILO WRECK

Workmen Fall 36 Feet and Are Buried When Collapse Comes—One May Die.

Rochester.—Three men were near death Sunday on the Ralph Butler farm in Haverhill township, this county, when the top of a newly built silo collapsed while the fales work was being removed. The three fell a distance of thirty-six feet and were buried beneath a mass of wreckage. All received serious injuries and one may die.

Hans N. Nelson of Charles City, Iowa, is in a critical condition, sustaining a fracture of the right hip and internal injuries. C. C. Schiltz of Charles City received a fracture of the right arm below the shoulder, a bad scalp wound and injury to the eyes from dirt and dust. Earl McFadden of Altoona, Iowa, suffered a broken nose, and injuries to the left arm and back.

They were taken to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Willis Frost, who reside on the Belloy farm, and two trained nurses from Rochester summoned to care for them. Neighbors assisted in rescuing the men from their dangerous position beneath the wreckage.

The silo, which was of brick, had been completed Saturday and it was planned to fill it Monday. The men went to the top on Sunday to remove the fales work, and it was while performing this work that the top collapsed. It is believed the accident was caused by removing the scaffolding before the top had sufficient time to set.

ONE OF LARGEST PARADES

5,000 Catholics March on Streets of St. Cloud During Convention.

St. Cloud.—One of the largest parades ever seen in this section of the state took place here Sunday afternoon at the annual convention of the German Catholic Mutual Aid society and the seventeenth annual meeting of the Staats Verbandes, or Federation of Catholic societies of Minnesota, to be in session here for the next three days. Five thousand men marched through more than seven miles of the streets along the line of march. Fourteen bands from various towns took part. Seven special trains and regular trains and automobiles brought nearly twenty thousand visitors to the city.

The association embraces 134 societies and has a total membership of 11,388. John B. Grode of St. Paul was the first president and Willibald Grimm of New Ulm the first secretary. Mr. Elber has served continuously ever since.

Stuck Sale Held at Fair.

Clinton.—The Big Stone county fair was the most successful yet. The sale of thirty-three head of registered Shorthorn cattle, which were selected and shipped in here by County Agricultural Agent A. B. Lathrop, was well attended and the prices were likely. Every head was sold at a good price, which goes to show that the community is beginning to appreciate the value of good stock.

Olmstead Plans Teachers' Association.

Rochester.—The first teachers' institute to be held in Olmstead county for several years has been announced by County Superintendent W. L. Mercer beginning Monday, October 6, and continuing until October 11. The institute takes the place of the regular summer school, which was not held this year. According to the law passed by the last session of the state legislature every teacher in the county is expected to attend and receive full pay if all of the sessions are attended.

CANAL NEARLY READY FOR THE BIG SHIPS

This picture gives a view of the great expanse of water now gradually filling the Panama canal, which is almost ready for the admission of the big ships. To look at the picture one would think that the canal was finished. The embankment that flank the channel, the broad expanse of water and the Miraflores locks in the distance are just as they will be when the opening of the canal takes place. This is the only photograph received up to the present lima which shows the canal as it will appear at the opposite of the big waterway connecting the Atlantic and Pacific oceans.

TRIPLE VICTORY FOR GOV. SULZER

CHARGE OF CORRUPT POLITICAL BARGAIN WITH ASSEMBLY. MAN THROWN OUT.

OTHER CASES INCOMPETENT

Presiding Judge Cullen So Holds in Two Cases Instances at Impeachment Trial.

Albany, N. Y., Oct. 1.—Governor Sulzer has just won a triple victory over an account of the trial of his impeachment.

Presiding Judge Cullen of the high court, barred the introduction of evidence intended to prove that the governor had made a corrupt political bargain with Assemblyman Patrie ror Greene county and told that the line timony to show that he had made similar bargains with Assemblyman Seeber of Oswego county and Assemblymen Prime of Eunce was incompetent.

Nature of Legislation.

The legislation had to do in each case with highway and bridge improvements provided for in bills passed by the legislature in which the assembly men were desirous of getting the governor's signature.

In the Patrie case, however, no charges were brought in the articles of impeachment and the presiding Judge Cullen threw the charge out.

The Seeber and Prime cases were specified in articles of the impeachment charging that the governor had tried once and failed to bribe them. One assemblyman had failed to support the governor's direct primary bill, while the other had voted with him and the other did so after consulting Sulzer. All three managers objected.

Assemblyman Sweet testified that when he urged the governor to approve the bill the latter asked whether he had voted for the direct primary bill, which had been defeated in the regular session of the legislature.

"I told him I voted against it," said the witness.

The primary bill was to come up again at the extraordinary session in July and the governor wanted to know if Sweet proposed to vote at that time. Sweet said he replied, "according to the instrument and in the interest of my district."

LODGE NOT OUT OF DANGER

Senior Member of Massachusetts Congressional Delegation Undergoes Serious Operation.

Nahant, Mass., Oct. 1.—United States Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, senior member of the Massachusetts delegation in congress, who was operated on Friday for a gastric ulcer, is according to his physicians, "not entirely out of danger."

News of the senator's illness leaked out by accident. Then it was the intention his life had been despaired of.

Prominent Republican Ill.

Dubuque, Ia., Oct. 1.—Major Alexander McDowell, for 17 years editor of the Catholic Tribune, a representative and prominent in Republican politics, is seriously ill at his home here.

Death List Reaches Eleven.

Harriston, Miss., Oct. 1.—Another fatality due to Sunday's riot brought the death list up to 11, three white persons and eight colored. Homer Allen, colored, succumbed to wounds received at the hands of the two Jones brothers, who started the revolver battle which ended when they were lynched. The authorities advance the theory that the Jones boys were afraid to begin their murderous outburst and, in a drugged condition, readily acquiesced. Their mother has been taken into custody.

BOAT THROUGH GATUN LOCKS

TUG DRAWING TWELVE FEET OF WATER PASSES SAFELY.

800-Ton Leaves of Gates Perform Functions With Precision of Well Oiled Door.

Panama, Sept. 29.—The most important step thus made toward the operation of the Panama canal took place when the sea-going tugboat Gorgas, drawing 12 feet of water, was successfully passed through the Gatun locks and floated on the bosom of Gatun lake.

This was the first attempt made to operate the locks on the canal, and the result is highly pleasing to Colonel Goetzels, engineer of the canal commission, and canal officials generally.

As the vessel passed inside the lower lock chamber a mighty cheer went up from the thousands that lined the lock walls, the tug's whistle was blown loud and long, and all the whistles in the engine house at the end of the canal. The tug, gaily decorated, in the roomy lock chambers, appeared like a toy boat in a tub.

Then at 6:40 a. m. the last gate was swung, and, although the people might and fallen, the waiting crowd remained and watched the Gorgas glide on the placid waters of Gatun lake. This colorful demonstration of the fourth anniversary of the canal's opening was not marred by any accident, everything working with the precision and ideals well oiled machinery.

BRIDE SPURNS KING HUSBAND

Princess Augusta Victoria Refuses to Live With Former King Manoel of Portugal.

Munich, Sept. 30. — Reports that Princess Augusta Victoria of Hohenzollern, bride of Emanuel, King Manuel of Portugal, will refuse to live with her husband were given added credence when it was announced that the princess, who is ill in a local hospital, would return to the home of her father, Prince William, as soon as she is able to travel. An official statement was issued by the hospital physicians making this announcement.

The princess will remain in the hospital from two weeks to a month, it was stated. She is slowly improving.

The hospital authorities denied the princess and her husband were estranged, but at the same time announced that the latter had returned to Sigmaringen as soon as possible and that she would not go to Richmond Park, Manuel's home, near London.

REPORT SERIES OF MURDERS

Fourth Mystery in Four Months Baffles the Los Angeles Police.

Los Angeles, Cal., Oct. 1.—Except for some circumstantial evidence against Robert Ashaw, a negro, the police find themselves no closer to an account for the murder of Mrs. Reginald Ellis, Christine Lorenz precilllower, who was found dead Saturday morning in her down town office.

This was the fourth murder in less than six months which has baffled the police. As with the case of Charles E. Pentland, Miss Lorenz was a society favorite, who also was beaten to death in his office, the murderer apparently still is at large.

Fusion Candidate Opens Campaign.

New York, Oct. 1.—John Purroy Mitchell, fusion candidate for mayor, and other fusion candidates have just been formally notified of their nomination. Mr. Mitchell opened the campaign with an attack on Charles F. Murphy in connection with the Sulzer impeachment proceedings, told the audience that packed Cooper Union that Tammany in the issue the city faces, Henry L. Stimson, former secretary of war, and Seth Low, Timothy L. Woodruff, Norman Hapgood and others spoke.

Hospital in Box Car.

Chicago, Sept. 30.—A hospital in an ordinary box car, the first of its kind to be operated by a railroad, was put in commission here near the scene of a track elevation work by the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific railroad. It will be in charge of a surgeon, who not only will give first aid to the injured, but will lecture to employes instructing them how to aid themselves and warn them against carelessness. The car has a completely equipped operating room and a ward.

EXCELLENT HINTS TO CUCUMBER GROWER

The White Spine Type of Cucumber—The Most Popular Grown in America.

(By BESSIE L. PUTNAM.)

If the ground was well fertilized before planting the seeds, there will be but little trouble through plants dwindling in the hot weather, providing the soil is kept light.

Much of the trouble laid to drouth comes through plant starvation. The cucumber is such a rank grower that it exhausts the fertility of the soil very quickly, unless some reserve food is provided.

If you have not made due provision for this in the planting, it may still be easily done by digging a large hole between each four hills, and filling this with the fertilizer, mixing it as much as possible with the soil.

Rains will wash a part of the fertility down among the roots, and the plants will thus find a source of constant renewal.

This will keep them growing, and in vigorous condition throughout the season, and the fruit formed under these conditions will lack the bitterness which we are accustomed to expect from the August cucumber.

If the little striped squash bug appears, it can be hand-picked early in the morning, or late at night, but when the sun is shining it is always busy, taking wing at the slightest disturbance. Look for it in clusters on the under side of the leaves, and at the base of the branches.

It is most easily managed by capturing it. Cover a small bedding of shallow pan underneath to catch the beetles as they fall. They can then be transferred to a pail of water containing a little kerosene, and may be treated to remain there until one is ready to make a permanent disposal of them.

Two crops of this beetle appear during the summer, but the later brood, which does not appear until August, when the leaves have become comparatively tough, do no damage.

Pick the cucumbers regularly every day, being careful not to bruise the vines in the process.

If a crooked or deformed specimen starts, pick it when small and thus save the plant energy for a better purpose.

Keep the cucumbers picked, even if you do not have a market for them at all times. Later, there may be a demand, and if you quit picking the large ones will quickly sap the life from the vines.

It is questionable whether or not it pays to raise your own seed, with the professional growers furnishing it so cheap. The process of ripening a single cucumber is an exhausting one, and there are always some that escape until they are too large for slicers and one or two of these may be saved, the rest being promptly dispatched for sweet pickles.

If you find that the vines must be watered during the drouth, do it thoroughly. Surface watering only baffle the roots downward, where they are more quickly affected by the heat.

If diseased vines appear, spray with Bordeaux mixture in proportion of three ounces to a gallon of water. It is a large plant, and will be found the better way to fight the squash-bug, though where the pest is only for family use the hand picking is preferable.

When the first frost comes it will be well to protect the vines with pasteboard, straw or a rubber carpet, for usually after this initial frost there are some weeks of warm weather in which the vines will continue to bear.

SOW CLOVER SEED IN FALL IS BEST

If Ground Is Not Properly Prepared Failure Is More Than Likely to Follow.

(By H. UNDERWOOD.)

Some farmers think that fall is the best time to sow clover seed, while others are equally as sure that spring is the best. The right kind of a seed is a question, and the seed bed properly prepared, the seeding may be successfully done either in the spring or in the fall. If, however, poor seed is used, or the seed bed is not properly prepared, there is liable to be a failure, no matter when the work is done.

I have had success in sowing both in the fall and in the spring. I cannot see much difference. Fall sowing is usually preferable, because it can be done at a time when there is not so much rush work on the farm. This being true, a better job can be done, and, consequently, a better stand will be the result.

When I intend to sow clover in the fall I plow the ground in August, disc it August. About ten days after being plowed it is harrowed thoroughly and leveled with a long float. This float is made similar to a road drag, in passing over the fields it levels the ground very smoothly. Either the spring or fall seeding this float should be used.

The seed is sown after the ground has been harrowed and leveled with the float. It is worked again with the harrow, followed by a light planker. Then I sow the plat to rye, placing on about three pecks to the acre, and harrow the ground twice, once each way. After this is done, I sow the clover seed at the rate of fifteen pounds to the acre, and give the ground one light harrowing.

Farm Help.

The reason some farmers cannot afford to keep a hired man is because they do not know how to manage their business to make it pay. I have been busy with only 80 acres, who kept two hired men all the season and one the year around.

Then I have seen men who owned 160 acres scarcely able to afford to keep one. It's all in knowing how to make the soil give up every dollar of profit there is in it. I am a poor farmer who cannot pay a man $30 a month and take a dollar a day myself from his work. Some of them make three or four dollars a day.

Little Unseen Workers.

Earthworms have a splendid duty, and they perform it. The numberless millions of worms required for each wide, unseen and so obscure. They have created all the loam and all the arable land of the old globe. They pass through their bodies the fallen leaves and decaying vegetable matter and by their labor render cultivation and harvesting possible. Where one kills an earthworm an agricultural labor of the most respectable class is destroyed.

Make Better Feed.

By tilling the farming-mill for cleaning and grading, they will make better feed and a product for seed that will insure a pure crop of the best quality. This also works toward weed extermination by preventing any from being sown along with the grain.

Should Avoid Crowding.

Avoid overcrowding the lambs in the feeding quarters. They need a lot per room on account of their natural habit of crowding.

GETTING RID OF LAYING WORKERS

Plan Given as Result of Many Experiments in the Past Two or Three Years.

It is not difficult to cure a colony of laying workers if they are taken soon after they have begun their work—that is, within a week or so after the first eggs have appeared. If a brood is provided and the seed bed properly prepared, the seeding may be successfully done either in the spring or in the fall. If, however, poor seed is used, or the seed bed is not properly prepared, there is liable to be a failure, no matter when the work is done.

If there are any candidates for city office they are evidently to be congratulated for their charming modesty.

There is no reason why prescribed football should not be popular when all other fashions run to open work.

With the world's series on Harry K. Thaw's little game isn't given much space in the pink sporting section.

The death of the lacrosse kid in that the number of people who want to be moved to attempt to "dodge" it will be limited.

Most any congressman is liable to be convinced, after a half-thinking session, that, after all, the tariff is a local issue.

The old inhabitants, who were here at the time of the court house row, know just how St. Paul people feel when the union depot was burning.

These are democratic congressmen who will not go home to enthusiastic receptions, for there are local issues that should have been protected.

With Maxim's new silencer in practical local people will be freed from the nuisance caused by the N. P. trains rushing through town at all hours of the day and night.

Until after the conclusion of the world series few newspapers will take the time and space to refer to "Do your Christmas shopping early," so here's where the Gazette gets a good lick.

The big gig sails won't pass before the eyes of the people in the grand stand to cause a total eclipse of the base ball diamond until the conclusion of the world series. That's enough for the rah rah boys after that.

The administration's important acts are well timed. The tariff bill became a law just before the opening of the world's series and action on the currency bill will be delayed until the conclusion of the series.

The St. Illaire Spectator laments that northern Minnesota has not a candidate for governor. There usually being too many candidates for that office. It may be just as well if we do not have the privilege of rallying to the support of some favorite son.

Maxim is preferring a device, it is said, that will make it possible for one to live among much noise without hearing any of it. It is suggested that the inventor try his machine when the baby and the neighbor's dog are putting on a concert about 2 a. m.

There are a lot of young men throughout the country who haven't strength enough to saw wood or mow the lawn who have cherished good football players.—Virginia Virginian.

That's so, of course, but there is such a short time to get into shape for the big games, and wood-sawing isn't the kind of hucking needed.

Twin city women complain that during fashion week men monopolize the desirable positions in front of the display windows. The women should not overlook the fact that the occupancy of the said headed room has long been man's special privilege and that the final judge of the attractiveness of womans' wearing apparel is man.

Candidate Eberhart will talk about the consolidation of rural schools—and possibly about statewide control of public utilities. Candidate Eberhart will talk about good roads. Candidate Spooner will talk about his big stick. Candidate Lee will talk about economy and a business administration. But nobody's the county option candidate and who's going to whoop it up for a nonsense tax on iron ore?

CO-ADJUTORS' REMARKS.

Fergus Falls Journal: The governor is being warmly praised because he has decided not to call the special session of the legislature that he said he would call. Some people would praise a governor if he told them he was going to kick them and then changed his mind.

Albert Lea Standard: Governor Eberhart will not call a special session of the Legislature to consider a public utilities law, which is fine as well. In the meantime the people will become better posted as to the advantages of such a law, and the more they learn the more they will appreciate the need of it.

Albert Lea Standard: Former Congressman Tawney denies that he ever thought of resigning from the congressional boundary commission. An entirely unnecessary waste of breath. No one ever suspected that he would be guilty of such a thought.

Senator Clapp's reactionary vote on the tariff bill robs him of any semblance of progressiveness.—Fairmont Sentinel.

While the senator's vote is generally satisfactory to the rank and file of the G. O. P. his acrobatic stunts seem to think and fast that it is difficult to tell where we may find him. The Democratic Sentinel may be laughing but its face aches next week.—Blue Earth Post.

Sullbwater Gazette: Of course we all admit that children are only children and that hogs and cattle mean money, which is the reason men will expend money to buy medicines to prevent and cure cholera and other diseases that make big inroads on their profits, but to expend the same amount of money for the benefit of the children is shift for themselves. If the latter dies—well it is too bad, but there's too busy with the horses, cattle, hogs, etc.

Princeton Union: Some of the little creatures who for hire in years gone by maligned and lied over h-w, figuratively speaking, slobbered all over him. The Union has had no acquaintance or standing with John Lind, but we do not regard him as a demigod simply because President Wilson has sent him on a fruitless mission to Mexico. Mr. Lind was one of the wheel and best performers that has come our way and as it would not hurt our feelings, if, in the near future, he should return to private life in the sense of the United States.

GOT A FINE TITLE.

It Was Made to Order in Paris For the Miss From Boston.

"My grandfather," impressively said the elderly man in the green hat near the campfire, "used to say that the age long traditions of old world society were nothing more than soap bubbles, which any American might shiver with a snap of the fingers.

"He proved his assertion—to his own satisfaction, at least—by refusing a title—the equivalent of a friend, a nearby Massachusetts tourist, who was desirous of having present at court ball, but who lacked the costume. Military uniform or court dress was indispensable, and there was not time to procure either.

"The other favorable friends, in full rig, took leave of him at his hotel, with many expressions of regret that he could not accompany them. As soon as they were gone he proceeded to follow, and within an hour he made his appearance at the Tuileries, arrayed in all the glory of his best blue coat, white waistcoat and buff muskeen trousers.

"He was promptly invited by a horrified flunky, who, pointing at his sumptuous if partial, endeavored by word and gesture to convince him that his dress was not de rigueur, and that he must retire.

"My dress," said the American, with a gesture which comprehended in its sweep coat, waistcoat and trousers, 'is the same that I always wear in the general court at Boston!'

"No sooner were the words out than the door opened as if by magic, and the now obsequious minister of ceremonies, bowing low, was going before the American into the brilliant apartment, solemnly announced:

"'Monsieur le general court de Boston!' to the infinite amusement of all Americans present, and to the great delight of the new made general.

"All nationalities bow before the Cesarian democracy of America,' was my grandfather's invariable tag," concluded the story teller, with an amused smile.—Youth's Companion.

Three Great Things.

True character, good habits and iron industry are impregnable to the assaults of all the ill luck that fools ever dreamed of.—Joseph Addison.

A Tribute to His Beauty.

Joseph G. Cannon, ex-speaker of the house of representatives, was standing on the sidewalk in Pennsylvania avenue one day talking with a friend, in a elderly, dark complexioned man approached.

"Excuse me," said the elderly man, "but I've been watching you and wondering if I'd ever seen you before."

Mr. Cannon smiled in answer.

"Do you know?" continued the elderly man, "I've thought a lot of you ever since Joe Cannon."

They say that Uncle Joe and Uncle Shelby Cullom both look like me," repeated the ex-speaker.

"Well, I don't know about that," said the elderly man, "but I'll say this much for you—you're dum sight better looking than either of them."—New York Times.

Size For an Explosion.

It was children's Sunday, and the father of a growing family proudly led his interested offsprings up the aisle and to the baptismal font to have a long neglected ceremony performed.

"Abe," said the clergyman, rubbing his hands in delight; "a fine family, a fine specimen of a friend, a worthy object."

The proud father drew in a big breath and began:

"Clarence Wood-Burst, Helen May Burst, Frederic Gray Burst, Oscar Will Burst and Mary Kent Burst."

While the clergyman was running for air the proper of rain was heard on the church roof.

"Ah, sir," he said, "we're going to have a cloudburst."—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

CARE MUST BE USED IN FILLING THE SILO

Corn Should Be Put Away Before It Becomes Too Ripe.

SECURELY CLOSE ALL OPENINGS

Corn should be put into the silo when the grain has become dented and glazed but is still easily broken with the thumb nail, but it will make good silage even if it is past that stage.

If corn has become a little too ripe for the very best silage, especial care should be taken not to cut it in the field too far ahead and allow it to dry out before it is hauled in. There is probably less danger of corn which it is too dry than too wet and if it is cut too far ahead it will be a long time from the blower or elevator it may be advisable to add water by turning some into the silo. A much better distribution of water is obtained by running a small stream into the blower.

Especial care should be taken to keep the silage higher at the sides during filling as air is most likely to reach the outside portion and cause the silage to spoil. The whole surface should be more carefully tramped than is usual. If cut in hand much lengthen the silage packs better but more power is required to run the cutter. Some object also that the half-inch lengths tend to stand on end between one's teeth when eating corn stover, but, not be trouble of this kind is experienced at University Farm. If possible let the silage settle a few days after filling, then add as much more as possible in order to make use of the silo's full capacity. Most holes or other openings through or between stave or around doors may be closed with a little moist clay, as the silage reaches them during filling. A little care on this point will save a good deal of spoiled silage in silos that are beginning to open up.

BULLETIN TELLS HOW TO CONSTRUCT SILOS

Information for Farmers Who Desire to Build.

MANY SUGGESTIONS OF VALUE

Most Minnesota farmers who keep stock and grow corn should have silos and they want to build them either themselves from hollow clay blocks or concrete they should secure copies of Bulletin Types of Silos at Northwest Experiment Farm," in which Superintendent C. G. Selvig tells how silos were built of these two materials at Crookston. A brief article by Superintendent A. J. McGuire of the North Central Experiment Farm tells how a hollow clay block silo was built at Grand Rapids, while photographs show another in process of construction and later being filled at the Univ versity Farm dairy barn.

Although this bulletin undertakes only to tell how certain silos were built, and not to recommend particular methods of using these materials or to present full information on silos, a few suggestions are given for the location of the silo, the crop with which to fill it, and co-operation in securing the cutter and engine for filling. A table suggests the number of acres of corn required to fill silos of various sizes and how to determine how large a silo to build in order to feed a certain number of cattle 150 or 240 days.

Other methods of construction of these materials are stated in a bulletin distributed by the Experiment Station at Ames, Ia. Over 40,000 copies of the Minnesota Bulletin have just been distributed and about 20,000 are still available for later inquirers who may address the Office of Publications, University Farm, St. Paul.

LAMBERT (OKLEE)

We have been "shut in" of late on account of heavy rains on Saturday, Sunday and Monday. Threshing operations are suspended for a week.

Our people who attended the counter fair at Red Lake Falls were well pleased with the trip. The display of agricultural products being better than could reasonably be expected after such a dry season. Louis Fahrdesan's horse was like the face of on old friend and so far not a complaint has been heard.

The death of Tom O. Melby saddened the village people the past week. Mr. Melby was a pioneer in Oklee and was probably the best known to the general trade of any man in Oklee. He was but 39 years of age and leaves a wife and four young children to mourn the loss of a kind husband and father.

Miss Eugenia Bergeron was married to Mr. Peter Bergeron at the church in Lambert Tuesday morning and their wedding dance was held at the hall in Oklee Thursday evening where a large crowd gathered to see the young people the eight starz in life. Mrs. Bergeron is the oldest daughter of Joe Bergeron of Beltrami and has grown up a this town and is well known and liked by all. Mr. Bergeron is the eldest son of Nigel Bergeron of the same town and same the there is no blood tie between them. The young people are being showered with congratulations and bonebasque ing ih Oklee,where Mr. Bergeron has rented the business formerly run by Alphonse Paquin.——

Mrs. Thomas O. Melby and Family:—It has pleased God Almighty in his infinate wisdom to remove from among us to a better home above us, as we confidently believe, Mr. Thomas O. Melby, a wife, a mother and fellow-organizer of the Oklee Commercial Club.

We had learned to know and appreciate him as being strongly attached to his family and home, showing himself a true man in his kind and considerate treatment of wife and children.

We found Mr. Melby conscientious, upright and square-dealing in all his business relations, loyal and true in his friendships, always a ready and willing worker for churches, schools and other agencies that tend toward the upbuilding and betterment of the community.

Those of us who have been good fortune to be closely associated with Mr. Melby, meeting him every day on our streets and in his place of business, will long cherish in our memory a fond recollection of his exceptionally even temper and kind disposition, his cheerful and friendly greetings, and the many kind words that he spoke.

We, Therefore, the members of the Oklee Commercial Club, in special meeting assembled, desiring to express to the sorrowing widow and family our sincere and heartfelt sympathy in their great bereavement here,

RESOLVED: That the Secretary be instructed to present our condolence to Mrs. Thomas O. Melby and children, that a copy of same be spread upon the minutes of our Club and that the same be published in the Red Lake Falls Gazette and the Plummer Pioneer.

SYNOPSIS.

Gordon Anderson and wife are a remarkably looking man come out of the woods near the Clermont, Conn., home and attempt to break in the door and window. Constable attracts them to the Clermont, where he is attacked by the two and killed. Miss Challoner has fallen down the stairs and dies. Anderson and wife vanish like wraiths in the snow. The head constable declares him to be Orlando Brotherson, who is supposed to be dead, and who is charged with the murder of his wife and the constable. Grave, an amateur detective, and Gervase Fabian, a newspaper man, take up the case. Mr. Challoner is found to be murdered. Miss Challoner's body is found in a shrubbery under the name of Dunn. He is also charged with the murder. Brotherson is captured and identified as the man who shot Mr. Challoner in his bed. Sweetwater recalls the murder of Mrs. Brotherson, which occurred in which some details were brought out. Brotherson is tried for the murder of Challoner and found guilty. Before being executed he is put in love with Brotherson, the daughter of Brotherson. He asserts the innocence of both of his father and his wife. The Brothersons are released. Brotherson is found dead in his cell. He says that he is innocent. A girl sent to Brotherson's cell finds evidence which seems to prove that Brotherson is innocent. Brotherson declares that he is innocent. Brotherson's daughter goes to Doris Stone's home. Brotherson's daughter expects to come through one Doris Stone's window. Doris Stone is a girl who claims to be a detective. Brotherson's daughter is shot in the left side and calls the name of Bell. Mr. Brotherson, Secretary of State, sends a peculiar bill to the woods. He says, "I am not guilty." Brotherson's daughter takes the bill under the supervision of Doris Stone.

"I cannot tell; I do not know," said she. "Nobody knows, not even the doctor, what effect the news we dread to give him will have upon Mr. Brotherson. You will have to wait—we all shall have to wait the result of the revelation. It cannot be kept from him much longer."

"You have had much to carry for one so young," was Mr. Challoner's sympathetic remark. "You must let me help you when that awful moment comes. I am at the hotel and shall stay there till Mr. Brotherson is pronounced quite well. I have no other duty now in life but to assist him through his trouble and then, with what aid he can give, search out and find the cause of my daughter's death which I will never admit with out the fullest proof, to have been one of suicide."

"Suicide!"

"It was not suicide," she declared, vehemently. "I have always said that it was not; but today I know."

Her hand fell clenched on her breast and her eyes gleamed strangely. Mr. Challoner was himself greatly startled.

"I've not told anyone one," she went on, as he stepped short in the road. "Life unlikely to understand me, but I will tell you. Only, not here, not with all these people driving past; most of whom know me. Come to the house later—this evening, after Mr. Brotherson's room is closed for the night. I have a little sitting-room on the other side of the hall where we can talk without being heard. Would you object to doing that?"

"No, not at all," he assured her. "Expect me at eight. Will that be too early?"

"No, no. Oh, how those people stare! Let us hasten home or they may connect your name with that which we want kept secret."

He smiled at her fears, but gave in to her humor; he would see her soon again and possibly learn something which would amply repay him, both for his trouble and his patience.

But she evidently knew and she turned to face him in that little attitude-more—where he had paused a lower tier, he was conscious of a change in her manner which forbade these high hopes.

"I don't know what you will think of me," she ventured at last, motioning to a chair but not sitting herself. "You have had time to think over what I said and probably expect something real—something you could tell people. But it isn't like that. It's a feeling—a belief, I'm so sure—

"Sure of what, Miss Scott?"

She gave a glance at the door before stepping up beside. He had not taken the chair she proffered.

"Sure that I have seen the face of the man who murdered her. It was to a dream," she whisperingly completed, for grave eyes misery with awe.

"A dream, Miss Scott?" He tried to hide his disappointment.

"Yes; I know that it would sound foolish to you; it sounds foolish to me, just listen, Mr. Lieon to what I have to tell and then you can judge. I was very much agitated yesterday. I had to write a letter at Mr. Brotherson's dictation—a letter to her. You can understand my horror and grief when I made to hide my emotion. I was quite unnerved. I could not sleep till morning, and then—and then—I saw—I hope I can describe it."

Grasping at a nearby chair, she leaned on it for support, closing her eyes to all but that terrible sight. As breathless moment followed, then she murmured in strained monotonous tones:

"I saw it again—just as I saw it in the early morning—but even more completely, if that is possible. A ball—I should call it a ball, though I don't remember seeing any place like it before), with a little staircase at the side, up which there comes a man, who steps just at the top and looks intently my way. There is fierceness in his face—a look which means no good to anybody—and as he hand goes to his overcoat pocket, drawing out something which I cannot describe, but which he handles as if it were a pistol, I feel a horrible fear, and—and—" The child was staggering, and his hand which was free had raised her heart where it lay clenched, the knuckles showing white in the dim light.

Mr. Challoner watched her with distinct awe, the spell under which she spoke falling in some degree upon him. Had she finished? Was this all? No; she is speaking again, but very low, almost in a whisper.

"There is music—a crash—but I plainly see his other hand approach the object he is holding. He takes something from the end—the object is pointed my way—I am looking into—into the—I do not know. I can not even see him now. The space where he stood is empty. Everything fades, and I wake with a loud cry in my ears and a sense of death here." She had lifted her hand and struck at her heart, opening her eyes as she did so. "I—I—I—and who had been shot," she added softly.

Mr. Challoner shuddered. This was like the reopening of his daughter's grave. But he had entered upon the scene with a full appreciation of the ordeal awaiting him and he did not let his calmness be entirely shaken by his judgment.

"Be seated, Miss Scott," he entreated, taking a chair himself. "You have described the spot and some of the circumstances of my daughter's death as accurately as if you had been there. But you have doubtless read a full account of those details in the papers; possibly seen pictures—we could make the place quite real to you. The fact that you have described what is not always know what lies hidden within it—"

"I know it true," she admitted. "But the man! I had never seen the man, or any picture of him, and his face was clearest of all. I should know it if I saw it anywhere. It is imprinted on my memory as plainly as yours. Oh, I hope never to see that man!"

She pressed toward her that he might get her full attention, he waited till her eyes met his, then quietly asked:

"Have you ever sensed this man to yourself?"

She started and dropped her eyes.

"I do not dare to," said she.

"Why?"

"Because I've read in the papers that the man who stood there had the same name as—"

"Tell me, Miss Scott."

"As Mr. Brotherson's brother."

"But you do not think it was his brother?"

"I do not know."

"You've never seen his brother?"

"Never."

"Nor his picture?"

"No, Mr. Brotherson has none."

"Aren't they friends? Does he never mention Orlando?"

"Very, very rarely. But I've no reason to think they are not on good terms. I know of no correspond."

"Miss Scott!"

"Mr. Challoner."

"You must not rely too much upon your dreams."

Her eyes flashed to his and then fell again.

"Dreams are not revelations; they are the reproduction of what already has hidden in the mind. I can prove that your dream is such."

"How?" She looked worried.

"You speak of seeing something being leveled at you which made you think of a pistol."

"Yes, I was looking directly into it."

"But my daughter was not shot. She died from a stab."

Her lovely face, with its tender lines and girlish curves, took on a strange look of conviction which deepened rather than settled under his diligent, but penetrating gaze.

"I did not know it was ill till very lately. His last letter was a cheerful one and I supposed that all was right till chance revealed the truth. I came on at once. I was intending to come anyway. I have business here, as you probably know, Miss Scott."

She shook her head. "I know very little about business," said she.

"My brother has not told you why he expected me?"

"He has not even told me that he expected you."

"No?" The word was highly expressive; there was surprise in it and a touch of wonder, but more than all, satisfaction. "Oswald was always close-mouthed," he declared. "It's a good fault; I'm obliged to the boy."

These last words were uttered with a lightness which imposed upon his niece but slightly against her judgment. Mr. Challoner to frown and Doris to shrink back in indignation at the man who could belie in a sportive suggestion in presence of such fears, if not of such atrocities, as the situation evoked.

But an hour is late for further conversation. I have a room at the hotel and will return to it at once. In the morning I hope to see my brother. He will be going. Doris not knowing how utterly she was playing into the hands of detaining him, when there came the sound of a little tinkle from the other side of the hall, blanching the young girl's cheeks and causing Orlando Brotherson's brows to rise in peculiar satisfaction.

"My brother!" he asked.

"Yes," came in faltering reply. "He has heard our voices; I must go to him.

"Say that Orlando wishes him a good night," smiled her heart's enemy, with a bow of infinite grace.

She shuddered, and was hastening from the room when her glance fell on Mr. Challoner. He was pale and looked greatly disturbed. The prospect of meeting his brother was evidently not to his liking.

"It Is He! It Is He!"

Well, it was useless to reason forth any further. In all else, she was immovable so far as this idea was concerned and, seeing this, he let the matter end, preparing to take his leave.

This seemed to be quite ready for this. Anxiety about her patient had not been forgotten in her mind, and her glance sped constantly toward the door. Taking her hand in his, he said some kind words, then crossed to the door and opened it. Instantly her fingers flew to her lips and, obedient to this silent injunction, he took up his hat in silence, and was proceeding down the hall, when the bell rang, startling them both and causing him to stop quickly back.

"Who is it?" she asked. "Father's ... is being left alone with a man whom she had herself denounced to him as his daughter's murderer, might prove a test to his strength to which she had no right to subject him. Pausing with an appealing air, she made him a slight gesture which he at once understood.

"I will accompany you into the room," said he. "Then if anything is wrong, you may be sure I shall speak my name."

But Orlando Brotherson, displeased by this move, took a step which brought him between the two.

"You are badly advised here if she chances to speak. There's a point to be settled before either of you leave this house, and this opportunity is as good as another. Go to my brother, Miss Scott; we will await your return."

A flash from the proud banker's eye; but no demur, neither a gesture of consent. Doris, with a look of anxiety, sped away, and the two men were left alone.

"Mr. Challoner, do you know my brother?"

"I have never seen him."

"Do you know him? Does he know you?"

"Not at all. We are strangers."

It was said honestly. They did not even shake hands. Mr. Orlando was quite correct in his statement.

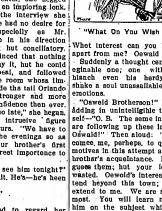
"Then sometimes overmapped who do not know each other. You knew that a Brotherson lived here?"

"Yes."

"And hoped to learn something about—"

"No; my interest was solely with your brother," he interposed.

"With my brother? With Oswald?



"What Do You Wish to Ask?"

What interest can you have in him apart from my own?"

Suddenly a thought came—an unthinkable one; one with power to blanch even his hardy cheek and make a man unassailable by all small emotions.

"Oswald Brotherson!" he repeated; "Oswald is interested in Miss Scott to—to—"

"To the same intitiel! They are following up those initials, Orlando," he said. "You cheat: It hardly becomes me, perhaps, to question your motives in this attempt at knowing your brother's acquaintances. I think I can guess them, but your time will be wasted. Oswald's interests do not extend beyond this town; they hardly extend to me. We are strangers, almost. You will learn nothing from him on the subject which naturally engrosses you."

Mr. Challoner simply bowed. "I do not feel called upon," said he, "to explain my reasons for wishing to know more about the circumstances of the death of my daughter's last act was the writing of a letter to Miss Brotherson of hers. Miss Scott was that protegee! In seeking her, I came upon him. Do you require me to say more on this subject? Well till I have seen Mr. Oswald Brotherson I am not prepared to do so."

Receiving no answer to this, Mr. Challoner turned again to the man who was the object of his deepest suspicions. In the light of the fact that one of that unimaginable thought, battling with his self-control, he succeeded in it and till without a word. Mr. Challoner was without clue to this struggle, but the fact that it was a struggle of it, drew him in extreme agitation. Orlando, though pale, appeared to have his self-command. He was not the man to betray his emotions easily.

"You remember that I said that my brother was not told you why he expected me?"

"Yes."

Orlando continued to regard her with a peculiar awakening gaze, showing that Mr. Challoner thought, more interest in her than in his brother, and when he spoke it was mechanically and as if in sole obedience to the proprieties of the occasion.

"I did not know he was ill till very lately. His last letter was a cheerful one and I supposed that all was right till chance revealed the truth. I came on at once. I was intending to come anyway. I have business here, as you probably know, Miss Scott."

NEW TARIFF LAW WILL MAKE MANY RATE REDUCTIONS

Synopsis of Measure on Which Special Session of Congress Has Been Working.

MARKED CHANGES IN THE AVERAGE DUTIES

Democrats Confident That the Country Will Be Benefited by the Alterations, and That Business Will Remain Unaffected — Ad Valorem Rate in the Bill Is From 27 to 29 Per Cent, in Payne-Aldrich Bill They Are 40.12 Per Cent.

Washington.—The Democratic tariff revision bill, first on the program of reforms mapped out when President Wilson came into office, advanced to its last congressional stage when it was brought back to the house from the joint conference committee with the unanimous indorsement of the Democratic conferees.

The measure, of course, has both its friends and enemies. According to the administration, it carries out four of the party promises. Tariff reform, reduction in the high cost of living, campaign against the trusts, is that duties have been taken off of many trust made articles, and that income tax.

The income, consequently, has a larger importance than that of a mere tariff reform bill and is the measure to be widespread, both on business and industry, and also in connection with politics. Democratic leaders are confident that business will suffer no untoward effect; that consumers will be benefited.

Changes in the Rates.

The bill imposes an average ad valorem rate of from 27 to 29 per cent. The average for the present Aldrich law is 40.12 per cent. The average for the Wilson-Gorman act was 39.45 per cent.

Duties generally have been reduced on all of the articles that enter into the necessaries of life, including the products of the farm as well as manufactured products.

Trust made products in many cases have been transferred to the free list or the duties at present imposed have been substantially reduced.

The income tax feature of the bill is expected to net some $80,000,000, and will call for a tax on net incomes of unmarried persons of $3,000 and upwards and on net incomes of married persons living together, where the wife or husband is dependent, of $4,000 and upwards.

Experts' calculations indicate a surplus of $16,000,000 over all expenditures at the end of the present fiscal year.

A rate of 40 per cent. is imposed on stockings and half hose valued at not more than 70 cents a dozen pairs. For stockings between 70 and $1.20 a dozen pairs a duty of 40 per cent. was agreed upon.

The conferees eliminated the provision inserted by the senate denying entry into the American market of goods manufactured by children under 14 years of age.

The final agreement provided that any person employed to collect the income tax may be relieved by the secretary of the treasury in the general service of the internal revenue bureau.

Larger Customs Revenues.

"The customs revenues will be larger for the current year, 1913-14," Senator Simmons said, "because the rates of the Payne-Aldrich law have been for the force quarter, and will continue in force on wool and woolen goods until January 1, and on sugar until March 1. When the next fiscal year begins, July 1, 1914, all the rates of the new law will be in operation and the tariff duties collected will be smaller.

The income tax which is collected for the calendar year can be collected for only ten months of the present year, as the law specified that collection shall not go back of March 1, 1913. The estimated decrease for the total expenditures of the government for 1914, $5,000,000, is based on the fact that smaller expenditures are expected for the army and navy estimates.

The balance of the total estimates, as given in the annual estimates, is made up of postal receipts, fraternal revenue receipts, sales of public lands, fee and tax, and other sources of federal income.

Agricultural Products and Provisions.

Cattle, sheep and other domestic animals, meats and fresh food, wheat and wheat products and eggs, have been transferred to the free list. Reductions have been made on oats, butter, beets, frozen eggs, peas, green fruits, beans made dried, vegetables and cocoa sweetened and extracts of malt. Rates on hides provided for the house. The rates have been increased over those provided in the house on broken rice, fish packed or not and ground spices. A rate of 20 per cent. ad valorem is placed on ground spices in addition to the specific rate provided by the house on unground. The senate receded from the reduced rate placed on flaxseed and its amendment placing a duty on buckeyes. The house classification on cocoa beans and other articles is accepted.

Metals H, Spirits, Wines and Other Beverages.

No changes of importance are made in this schedule. The rates on gloves are left similar to the house bill, slightly decreased on bottles containing less than one gallon, and pig iron. The senate receded from its amendment placing a internal revenue tax on grape brandy used in fortifying sweet wines.

Papers and Books.

The house rates have been reduced on common paper, hat boards, papers partly composed of rag, "all leaf" negatives and plain basic papers for the manufacture of sensitized paper stock. The rates provided by the house on uncoated papers and cards are increased covering boxes has been increased from 25 to 40 per cent. The senate amendments placing a specific rate of graduated according to thickness and size have been agreed to with several reductions in the rates provided. The rates agreed to are approximately equivalent to the ad valorem rates provided in the house bill. A specific rate has been placed on lithographic views of scenes and buildings located in the United States instead of the advalorem rate provided by the house. This amendment results in an increase in the rate of duty.

Roman, Portland and other hydraulic cements, limestone, rock asphalte, asphaltum, and bitumen have been transferred to the free list. The house rates have been reduced on lenses, surveying instruments, telescopes, microscopes, photographic and projection lenses, in increased on strips of glass for lenses and gauges, opera and field glasses. A new classification has been made for unmounted optical discs and a rate of 4 cents per pound placed on all valued at not more than 15 cents per pound, and 25 per cent. on that valued at more than 15 cents. This results in an increase over the house rate of 20 per cent; on the cheap glass of mics, costing less than 14 cents, and a reduction of all that is valued at more than 15 cents per pound.

Cotton Manufactures.

The senate classification of cotton cloth, according to the average number of the yarns contained therein, was accepted, instead of the house provision for the highest number. This slightly decreases the rate of some fancy weaves and novelty cloth, but on the greater bulk of cotton cloth the rate is not affected. The rates on bleached and dyed colored yarns are increased and on cotton, yarn and cloth made of yarn, from numbers 70 to 80. The rate on handkerchiefs or mufflers, not hemmed, have been deduced from 30 per cent., as provided by the house, to 25 per cent.

WORK DONE IN CONFERENCE

Alterations That Were Made From the Original Underwood Bill Passed by House.

A summary of the agreements informally announced from day to day during the conference, and shown in a comprehensive manner the following important alterations of the original Underwood bill:

The tax on incomes of more than $75,000 was increased by a graduated scale from three per cent. to seven per cent., and the exemption reduced from $4,000 to $3,000 for single persons. The new provision allowing a $4,000 exemption for a married person where the net only one deduction of $4,000 shall be made from the aggregate income of both husband and wife when living together.

Articles added to the free list include pig iron, ferro manganese ore cheap grades of iron; cattle and other food animals; wheat, flour, flax, hemp, rope making machinery, school text books, sand blast machinery, indigo dyes, morning glory flume, cement and asphalt.

House Rates Changed.

Through a reclassification rates will be slightly reduced from those fixed by the house on fancy grades of cotton cloth.

The tariff on automobiles, fixed by the house at 45 per cent. and radically cut by the senate, was compromised by a new three classification of automobiles valued at less than $2,500, for which a rate of 30 per cent. was fixed.

The 5 per cent. rebate in tariff made by the house bill on goods brought in American ships was retained, with the added provision that it should not "be so construed as to abrogate or in any manner impair or affect the provisions of any treaty" the United States has.

That portion of the house bill requiring foreign manufacturers or exporters to submit their books in connection custom agents was amended so that if the exporter refused to submit such examination an additional duty of 10 per cent. thereon can be imposed on his exports.

Section 8 of the Cuban reciprocity treaty, which provides that Cuba should have a preferential rate of 20 per cent. on sugar and that the general tariff of the United States should not be reduced below the figures of the Dingley tariff law of 1897, is repealed.

Washington.—According to estimates completed by the treasury experts, 425,000 American citizens must keep such accurate account of their incomes this year that they will be able to report to the income tax collector next spring exactly how much they owe the government under the new income tax law.

So far as the wealth of America is concerned, the income tax law is not practically to force against him. While the tariff law in which the law is embodied will not, be signed until next week, the first return on account of it will be made to the internal revenue collectors before March 1, 1914, as the law on the returns are made; they will cover the income of citizens from March 1, 1913, to December 31, 1913, the first payment of tax-bills for money received during the period.

Every single person (citizen or foreign resident) whose annual income exceeds $3,000, and every married person with an income above $4,000, is expected to report his or her receipts in detail to the government agents designated for the purpose.

To Produce $82,000,000.

The estimate completed indicates that the income tax will produce $82,298,000 from the 425,000 persons taxed. Those with incomes of $3,000 to $20,000 or more produced by the present corporation tax, which is continued as part of the law.

President Wilson, the federal judges of the District of Columbia, holding office and employes "of a state or any political subdivision thereof, and only persons specifically exempted from the tax by the new law. The exemptions in the income tax law are made exempt to escape any question of the constitutionality of the law, and their successors in office will be compelled to pay the tax.

First Rate and Other Citizen.

The general public is expected to give close study to the law, and for the next few months, as the first burden of the tax payment rests with the individual citizen, and his failure to report his income is punishable by a fine.

It is admitted that when first returns are made many false statements probably will escape payments, but with each year the government's list of persons with taxable incomes will be made more nearly complete.

Methods of Collecting Tax.

Two primary methods of collecting the tax are contained in the law. One is that the taxpayer shall make out for the citizen; the other the returns by corporations and other employers who pay their employes' taxes "at the source." Blanks will be sent out, it is signed by President Wilson next week, every large company employing labor will be compelled to report any regular salaries it pays in excess of the $3,000 figures, and will pay the taxes for its employes and deduct the tax from their pay envelopes.

This "payment at the source" will apply to salaries, rents, interests, royalties, dividends paid by trusts and other sources of income, and persons receiving such payments will be prepared to show that the money has paid the tax at the source.

In figuring up his net income for the taxpayer, the American business man, after deducting from his gross result, or $4,000, if married, will have the right to claim the following additional exemptions:

Necessary expenses of carrying on business, not including personal, living or family expenses.

Interest paid out of indebtedness.

National, state, county, school or municipal taxes paid within the year.

Losses, debts, or sums or fire losses, not covered by insurance.

Worthless debts charged off during the year.

A reasonable allowance for the depreciation of property.

Dividends from companies whose incomes have already been taxed.

Interest from state, municipal or government bonds.

Must be Under "Net Income."

It is a clear provision of the law, however, that the taxable person must make a return to the internal revenue collector for his entire "net income," and the citizen claimed under the law must be submitted to the federal officials for them to determine upon their reasonableness or legality.

The formula of the income tax, as finally agreed upon, follows:

From $3,000 to $20,000, 1 per cent.; from $20,000 to $50,000, 2 per cent.; from $50,000 to $75,000, 3 per cent.; from $75,000 to $100,000, 4 per cent.; $100,000 to $250,000, 5 per cent.; $250,000 to $500,000, 6 per cent.; above $500,000, 7 per cent.

A single man with an income of $15,000, for example, would pay 1 per cent on $17,000 and 2 per cent on $500, a total tax of $175. If married, the first tax of 1 per cent. would apply to only $13,000 of the income.

Ready to Answer Questions.

The treasury department is preparing for a flood of questions about the new income tax, realizing that this feature of the tariff bill about to become effective will be the collector one that the tax paying citizen than do the indirect taxes collected through the customs duties.

One of the first steps taken to get general information before the public will be to distribute income tax blanks through postoffices, internal revenue offices, and other federal agencies. Requests should be made by mail to receive a blank or a request to pay the tax will not exempt a taxable person from the penalties of the law.

Representative Cordell Hull of Tennessee, author of the corporation tax provision of the tariff bill which will soon become law, made public a detailed explanation of the tax plan as it will touch the individual citizen.

"The treasury regulations soon to be prepared will make clear to every taxpayer his requirements of the law and its application to income derived from the various kinds of business," Mr. Hull said. "Any person who keeps familiar with the business affairs, during the year should have no difficulty in executing his tax return.

Tax Rate Is Divided.

"The income tax is divided into two phases, the 'normal' tax of one per cent. on the whole income above $3,000, and the additional tax that begins with one per cent. on income above $20,000 and is graduated to six per cent. above $500,000. Wherever the income tax is paid 'at the source' by a corporation for its employes or is similarly paid, only the one per cent. normal tax is to paid.

"The individual has to pay any additional tax himself. The provisions of the law requiring the tax to be withheld at the source do not take effect until November 1, 1913.

"For the first year the citizen will make return to the local internal revenue collector before March 1, 1914, as to his earnings from March 1, 1913, the calendar year. The collector will notify him what his income will be owes and the tax must be paid by June 30. After next year the tax will apply on the full calendar year.

"If the income of a person is under $3,000, or if the tax upon same is withheld for payment at the source, or if he owes he to be paid, clergymen in the United States, affidavit may be made to secure this and thereupon no return will be required.

Income Provisions of Act Different.

"The tax covers all incomes of citizens of the United States, whether living in this country or abroad, and foreigners living in the United States, and the net income of every person, company or business carried on in the United States by persons living abroad.

"For the first year the citizen will income from salaries or any compensation for personal services; income from trades, professions, business, or commerce; from sales or dealings in real property; from interest, rent, or personal property; from interest, rent, dividends from securities.

"Bequests will not be considered income, nor will life insurance paid to widows, heirs or returned to the insured person as a 'paid up' or 'redeemed policy' be taxable. Interest on such property will be included as income, however.

"Losses that may be deducted from a total income includes the cost of carrying on business, actual bona fide depreciation allowances, and tax exempt or tax paid money. Living expenses cannot be deducted, nor can money spent for permanent improvements to property be.

Forms to Be Ready Soon.

"The form that is to be filled out by the taxpayer will be drawn up soon by the commissioner of internal revenue. The taxpayer will have to give his gross revenue and then specify and claim the deductions to which he feels entitled.

"Unless a man's income tax is 'paid at the source' he must hunt up a tax blank, fill it out, and see that it finds its way to the proper federal official in his district before March 1, 1914.

"Firms, corporations, and the like having the handling of interest, rents, salaries, or other portions of the income of any citizen are compelled to deduct that tax for the individual and pay it to the government. The individual then will receive a receipt showing he has paid his tax."

WEALTH IN MIDDLE WEST

Investigations by Commissioner of Internal Revenue Reveal Large Incomes.

The commissioner of internel revenue made public the estimates on incomes for the middle west.

The estimates show that far more wealth is distributed in Illinois outside of Chicago than in the city. The commissioner of internal revenue is inclined to believe the reports are so far from correct that he will not use them to any extent in his plans for the collection of the income tax.

According to his statement, 12,900 citizens of Chicago have incomes ranging from $3,000 to $20,000 per year, while 12,800 citizens of the Eighth district, which has its headquarters in Springfield, have incomes from $3,000 to $20,000. The annuals in the Fifth district, with headquarters at Peoria, are listed.

Likewise in Indiana there is a great variance in districts. The estimate for the Sixth district reported over 20,000 taxable incomes, and the collector for the Seventh district reported only 6,000.

Large Fortunes in Iowa.

Iowa's incomes will be largely taxed, the collector for that state reporting nearly 7,000 taxable incomes. Minnesota's canals has a few over 10,000, Michigan close to 12,000, and Minnesota about 4,000.

A feature about the Minnesota income estimates is that the collector declares there are 150 men in the state with incomes upwards of $100,000 annually, while in Chicago the collector reports only 85 persons with incomes more than $100,000 mark.

Large fortunes seem to predominate in Minnesota, for there are 1,000 men rated with incomes between $20,000 and $50,000, as against 600 in Chicago and 1,000 in the whole state of Illinois; 350 with incomes between $50,000 and $100,000, as against 175 in Chicago and 375 in Illinois, and 150 over $100,000, as against 85 in Illinois.

Indiana and Michigan are also reported as having large income bearing fortunes over the $20,000 mark.

Canadian Fox Industry.

Much money is involved in the Canadian fur industry. Figures at the opening of this season 219 lynx furse of valuable breeding silver grey, and 1,000 used at $230,000, have been shipped from Edmonton to points in eastern Canada and the United States for breeding purposes. Included in this lot were ten young black foxes which were sold to a New York firm for $30,000. Many young foxes are soon after captive. Several black pups have died after being sold for $1,500 to $2,500. A few of the cubs have been sold, however, to fur farmers in Alberta, where 40 foxes are already domiciled. A decided increase in the number of farms place in the prices paid for these animals, which is attributed to the large number which have been supplied from the government farms in Alaska, Yukon territory, and the northwest territories. The supply has been plentiful this year, the young foxes coming in fog out of their holes before they were able to escape. In a short time the young foxes will leave their dams and it will then be impossible to catch them otherwise than singly in traps, and the prices will probably rise.

QUEER ORNAMENT FOR EEL

Grave Assertion Made That One Captured in Delaware Wore a Dog Collar.

A giant eel with a dog collar on its neck was captured by John Ballaski of West Warren near Williamsville, Conn., not many days ago. The catch took place in the Quabbin river, a little below Williamsville. The eel was 17 inches long, as large around the body as the wrist of an ordinary steel man and weighed 13 pounds. Ballaski killed the eel in low water, and shortly having been caught in the pool where it was captured when the tide went out. The collar, of the sewed-over by a small dog, was securely locked about its neck, and so tight as to cause the skin to bulge out around the edge. The initials "W. H. C." and the name, "Prince" were engraved on a silver nameplate. This back was badly scarred, showing where it had been speared on various occasions. Four fish hooks with lines attached were found in the monster's mouth. It was almost impossible for Ballaski to hold the eel after he had grabbed it for it would twist and strain about in his hands with ease. He finally got it between two arms, and killed it. About the only thing it was good for was to chop it up and feed it to the chickens.

SEVILLE CATHEDRAL

Most Majestic and Important of All in Spain.

In Size It Is Next to St. Peter's in Rome—Only Place Allowed by Any Christian Church Occurs Here in December and June.

New York.—Of the 49 wonderful cathedrals in Spain, the Cathedral of Sevilla ranks as the most majestic and important, and it also is next to St. Peter's in Rome.

It is during the fiesta of the Immaculata Conception in December and on Corpus Christi in June that is presented in this noble church the only dance allowed in any Christian church in the world. It is also occasionally given during carnival time.

"La Danza de los Seises" is a rite of remote origin supposed to represent the dance of the Israelites before the Ark. Originally 12 boys participated in the dance, to which fact it owes its name—"The Dance of the Seises," as they danced in pairs six on a side.

In the sacraments century appreciation was raised to the dance by many persons of influence, but the people rose en masse in protest and petitioned the pope to preserve this favorite and charming function of his rites. At the request of the pope the "Seises" were saved to Rome that the pope's judge personally of its fitness. So pleased was he boliness with its simplicity and reverence that he gave permission for its continuance "so long as the centuries endure" or should test"—and he also decided "that the late might be given without any disrespect to the Virgin." As an costume to ever allowed to fall in total allowance, the elastic was used in avoiding the termination of this unique and attractive ceremony of which it is the surviving for an indefinite time.

For this purpose velvet, made of the massive pillars which inclose the altar and choir are also hung with the same rich color, lending a wealth of tone to the great interior. Blue being the color of the Virgin, all coverings are of this pure color, as are the magnificent gold embroidered vestments worn by the clergy.

The dance is given in the Capilla Mayor at the foot of the high altar, and as the Seises take their positions the archbishop and clergy enter and kneel during the entire time, as do all who witness it, as it is held in great reverence.

Clad in striped costumes of blue and white satin of the time of Philip III., and carrying white plumed hats, the boys commence the dance to the music of the orchestra begins the quaint music, written early in the seventeenth century, played on ancient instruments and held unpublished, the boys kneel and sing a hymn to Mary as the Virgin, afterward singing in their clear treble voices the ancient church melodies, minor in key and plaintive in style, the dancing their beta, the dance commences.

This so-called dance is in reality more of a stately walk with the waving in and out of several graceful figures, leading in a straight line at the end of each of the three parts. The easiness with lightly played part of the measure. At the close of the dance the boys make their final obeisance and ascend the steps of the altar, followed by the archbishop, his long crimson train borne by the page from top to bottom.

Never was a more perfect or effective picture than this: The glistening silver, softly glowing wax lights and the Ark filled with sweet incense. The climax is reached when the archbishop rises, which is attributed to the large folds about him and stretches out his arms in benediction. At the same moment all the bells of the Giralda tower, which in joyous unison, the great tones of the organ pealing through the cathedral and the orchestra joins in the chorus, and the ancient melodies, dance music, and this fascinating finale is ended.

MOREAU-ROWEN WEDDING.

Well Known Young People Married at Terrebonne Tuesday.

A wedding of much local interest took place at Terrebonne Tuesday morning. The parties to the happy affair were Miss Mina Moreau, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Moreau of Brooks, and Mr. Thomas Rowen of Thief River Falls. The ceremony was performed at St. Anthony's church, Terrebonne. Rev. Father Fleck officiating. Mr. and Mrs. Rowen will reside at Thief River Falls, where Mr. Rowen is employed as train dispatcher for the Soo Railway company.

Mrs. Rowen has frequently visited in Red Lake Falls and has many friends here who will wish her much joy in her new home.

Afford a "Ford."

We have it upon good authority that a Crookston man returned home late the other evening after "a night" with friends and upon awakening at the home stumbled upon the baby carriage in the hall way. His good wife heard him give the vehicle a push and exclaim: "Damn it, you can't go anywhere without running into one of those little Fords."—Crookston Times.

FIRST HOME GAME SATURDAY AFTERNOON

FOOT BALL CONTEST BETWEEN FOSSTON AND RED LAKE FALLS TEAMS.

The first at home foot ball game of the season will be played on the grounds west of town Saturday afternoon, Oct. 4. Teams representing the Red Lake Falls and Fosston high schools will do battle.

Though the local boys were defeated in their game with Thief River Falls last Saturday they have not lost any of the "fighting spirit". It was the first game in the experience of most of them. Though they were nervy, they also were nervous and could not stop the heavy "Thieves" in the early part of the game. However they quickly recovered and played their opponents to a stand-still.

Though the local team is light, the showing made last Saturday indicates that they will make a creditable record for the season and on Saturday will give the fast boys from Fosston a real "scrap."

The game starts at 2:30. Get out and root.

L. B. PADDEN KILLED

Former Red Lake Falls Resident is Victim of Auto Accident at Virginia.

Louis B. Padden, a former resident of Red Lake Falls and brother of J. J. Padden of the Red Lake Falls Milling company, died Sunday at Virginia from injuries received in an accident Saturday night, when an auto in which he was riding collided with a train.

The members of the automobile party were driving about a mile from Virginia when the accident occurred It was a dark night and there were no lights to warn them of the danger of the railroad crossing. The train with which they collided was made up of logging cars. They are low and the driver of the automobile did not observe that a train was going over the crossing until he was almost upon it, and was not able in present the auto from hitting the train with much force. It is probable that Mr. Padden, who was in the front seat with the driver, did not see the train in time to make any effort to save himself. He was thrown over the front of the automobile and under the wheels of the train. His right arm and right leg were badly mangled and he received internal injuries. His injuries were so serious that the physicians gave out no hope of recovery.

Mr. Padden is survived by his wife, two sisters, one residing in Virginia and the other in St. Paul, and one brother, J. J. Padden of Crookston.

VOTING ALIEN CITIZEN

Supreme Court Holds That Foreigner Recognized at Polls is American.

A foreigner who has voted for a long period of years in presumed good faith as a citizen, according to a Supreme Court opinion handed down last week.

School districts in Isanti and Anoka counties wished to consolidate. Some Somlestke, Anoka county, signed the petition. Without his name there would not have been sufficient signers, and it was alleged that he was an alien.

It appears that Samlestke was born in Germany in 1865, and came to Wisconsin with his father in 1872. His father is known to have taken out his first papers, but there is no record of a second instrument. Despite this, Samlestke has voted since 1888, when he became of age, and never gave the matter of citizenship a thought until the present suit was instituted.

The Court held as follows:

Proof that a foreign-born resident has voted, when voting without naturalization is a crime, raises a presumption of naturalization; and this presumption arises through the participation of the one voting. Upon him the naturalization of his father.

Applying the law stated to the evidence it is held that a resident of the state, born in Germany, who has voted many years in this country, was a citizen, is justified.

OFFERED A CONTRACT.

Ed. Kelfenheim May Pitch for the Virginia League Team.

Ed. Kelfenheim, the local ball artist, may break into organized base ball for next season. He has a contract from the manager of the Virginia team of the Northern League with an offer of $125 per month for the season. He has advised the manager that if the salary offer is increased to $150 he will sign.

The Virginia team was hopelessly the "mix-under" for the season recently and should Kelfenheim, if he signs, will have an opportunity to win fame by pitching the team into first division.

THIEF RIVER DEFEATS HIGH SCHOOL

LOCAL BOYS HOLD HEAVY OPPONENTS TO TWO TOUCHDOWNS.

In a driving rain and on a field ankle-deep in mud the local high school played Thief River last Saturday and suffered defeat 12 to 0. Both attempts to kick goal were failures.

It was the boys' first game of the year and under the conditions, they played good football. Outweighed thirty pounds to the man, they were unable to hold the heavy Thief River backs and on two occasions were scored in each of the first two periods. During the second and third quarters the team took a decided brace and prevented any further scoring. On the offensive the Red Lake boys made several nice gains, one forward pass gaining fifteen yards. Marshall broke through left tackle and ran a clear field but stumbled and lost the opportunity for a touchdown. Few penalties were inflicted and the game was cleanly played throughout.

The lineup:

Batteson	l. e.	Cyr.
Falk	l. t.	Helm.
Brund	l. g.	Gerlach.

MAN KILLED AT CROOKSTON.

Unidentified Man Met Almost Instant Death.

The afternoon, at 3:15, an unidentified man was killed on the Great Northern tracks in the east part of the Great Northern passenger depot. He had been standing in the passageway between the passenger and freight depots, and when an east bound freight pulled by, he made a run for the train. He stumbled and missed his footing, was dragged a few feet, when he lost his grip and fell beneath the wheels, which cut off one arm at the shoulder, cut the man's throat from ear to ear, and gashed his forehead badly.

Dr. O. L. Bertelson and Dr. J. S. Kjelland were summoned and while the former was examining the mangled remains, the latter, who was entirely unconscious, and death ensued within a few minutes.

Chief Sek arrived on the scene at once and took charge of the body, turning it over to Gustavus's undertaking establishment, in the absence of Coroner Nelson.

No search of the man's clothing can be made until after the arrival of the coroner or deputy. A small notebook which he had contained the address, "Frank Trowbridge, Billie, 420 Calhoun," and is supposed to be an address near Lake Calhoun, Minneapolis.

The man is of average height dressed as a laborer, dark complexion, and 35 or 40 years of age.

As far as is known there is but one eye witness to the tragedy, a railroad employe, whose name could not be learned, who saw the man shake the run for the train, and fall under the wheels.—Crookston Times, Friday.

The Car That Sells By the Trainload

Buick

THE B-25 SELF STARTED
$1125 f. o. b, Red Lake Falls

The 1914 Buick B-25 is a car we're proud of. It's a car that has all kinds of "pep," a car that is good to look at, a car that rides easy, and a car that will take anybody anywhere he wants to go and bring him back again.

BIGGEST AUTOMOBILE CONCERN IN THE WORLD BACK OF THIS GUARANTY

The Buick overhead valve motor is guaranteed to develop more power and to give more mileage per gallon of gasoline than any other motor of its size, either American or foreign make.

Every 1914 Buick is Delco self started. And the Delco starter starts. Everything is left side drive and center control.

The motor is the same type of overhead valve to which has been largely attributable Buick success.

There are six pleasure car models this season, ranging in price from $1025 to $2030, the last being a six-cylinder touring car that has made and will make 17½ miles per gallon of gasoline.

No matter what you're driving, we can make you better pleased.

Riley at Home.

An Indianapolis lawyer, with a friend, motored down to Greenfield, Ind., the birthplace of James Whitcomb Riley, the Hoosier poet. They had dinner at the hotel and thought they would like to see the home where Riley lived. So they asked the hotel man:

"Where is the Riley home?"

"I don't know any hotel by that name," he replied; "though there may be some such boarding house here."

"I mean the James Whitcomb Riley house," said the lawyer, thinking his host had misunderstood.

"I don't know him. You may be able to find his name in the city directory."

"I guess he's moved," said the lawyer as he aimlessly thumbed the directory.

"Probably," the hotel keeper commented. "Some of them Irish don't stay long in a place!"—Saturday Evening Post.

"Nobody Knows It!"

"Nobody knows it!" Well, what it it's true
That nobody knows your transgressions
but you?
If you've sinned the time's coming you'd
For the power to forget what you know of yourself.
In the favor of kings you'll then find little worth,
Though your praises should ring to the ends of the earth.
Life ever and ever there's some one-it's self.
There is somebody knows it besides you and God.
Was there ever a secret that nobody knew
Outside of its guilty possessor? Has ever
Are allowed the illusion and ignorant sense?
Like ostriches hiding their heads to the sand?

"Nobody knows it!" That treacherous friend
Has wrecked human lives beyond count or belief.
The roar of those breakers, once given control,
Drowns the sound of the bell buoy of conscience or peril.
"Nobody knows it!" Ah, wormwood and gall!
Chatted to an act you can never undo.

Tempering the Water to a Lamb.

There is a certain lawyer in New York whose income from his practice is nearer $50,000 than $50,000. He is known as the keenest and readiest of cross examiners and a man of profound learning as well as common sense. Yet he confesses that it took one year for the fact to flash upon him that he had been the victim of a most egregious piece of simple trickery. This, his colloquy with the clerk in a haberdashery store, will explain it:

Eminent and Brilliant Lawyer—I want to buy a bathing suit.

Small Clerk—Yes, sir. Shirts out several. All are of ordinary woolen except one. This, by far the most expensive, is of a heavy knitted kind Lawyer remarks that he is to spend summer in Maine.)

Eminent and Brilliant Lawyer—Why is this one so heavy?

Small Clerk—That is for bathing in climates where the water is very cold, sir. We sell many to persons who go to Maine.

Eminent and Brilliant Lawyer—Ah. It's lucky I learned this! I'll take the heavy one. (Buys suit and walks out. One year later the truth flashes on him.—New York Post.

ASKING FOR A NEW BRIDGE

MOVE STARTED FOR MORE DIRECT CONNECTION BETWEEN PARTS OF TOWN.

A petition is being circulated asking for a new bridge across the Upper Red river and also for a change of a street that will more closely connect the parts of the city on either side of the river.

Those back of the movement propose the improvement of First street, the street on which St. Joseph's church fronts, and that it be opened to connect with the Terrebonne road on the east side of the river. This if done would necessitate the construction of a bridge at a point on the Clearwater river near the present location of the railroad pump house and "Frenchman's bridge."

Such an improvement is pleasant to contemplate, though its cost at the present time may be prohibitive. Nothing could be done that would add more to the picturesqueness of this beautiful little city or that would tend to draw it closer together and give it the appearance of completeness which it certainly and unfortunately doesn't have now.

Stand on the crossing south of the Scandinavian building and look across. Pleasant prospect of a beautiful city street, surely—if it wasn't for the cost. It is unfortunate that the crossing was not made there originally. It is the "shortest cut" and the rent of the hill could be avoided by a much more gradual "pull." A bridge could be constructed at considerable less cost than at the location now in extreme, because it could be much lower and probably much shorter.

But, of course, it would be unwise to abandon the present crossing and those who seek to have the new one established have not offered figures to show that the city can stand the expense of two crossings. But as stated before it is a prospect pleasant to contemplate and it is an improvement that will no doubt be made—some time in the future.

Council Proceedings.

Special meeting of the City Council held at the Council Rooms, September 22nd, 1913, at 7:30 o'clock P. M., all members being present.

Meeting called to order by President Oronga.

Alderman Hunt offered the following resolution and moved its adoption, seconded by Alderman Hennessy:

Whereas, W.D. Lovell has completed his contract for installing a system of water works in the city and the same has been accepted by the Council on due recommendation of J. E. Carroll, the Consulting Engineer in charge of the work. Now Therefore,

Be It Resolved, that his claim for $1,875.00 as balance due on his contract be, and the same is hereby audited, allowed and ordered paid, and further, that the bill of sale of W. D. Lovell of $188.00 for extra pipe, concrete and labor be, and the same is audited and allowed and that $188.00 out of the City Clerk and Mayor are authorized to draw the warrant of the city on the Treasurer thereof for the total sum of $2,063.00 payable to said W. D. Lovell in full settlement of all claims to date.

Upon call of Yeas and Nays the following members voted Yea—Paul, Pfeiffer, Hunt, Hennings, Oronga and no members voted Nay. Whereupon the president declared the resolution duly adopted.

Alderman Hunt offered the following resolution and moved its adoption, seconded by Alderman Pfeiffer:

(Here follows resolution to hear testimony and ascertain damages to property by reason of construction of sidewalks, published elsewhere.)

Upon roll call the following members voted in favor of the motion, Paul, Pfeiffer, Hunt, Hennings, Oronga and no members voted against it. Whereupon the president declared the resolution duly adopted.

On motion meeting adjourned.

EMPHATIC RESENTMENT.

Thresher Deliberately Shot Farmer Who "Cussed" Him.

Late Friday afternoon Thiron Webster, who says his home is at St. Hilaire, Minn., was driving a threshing shot and seriously wounded Ingwald Hanson, a threshing engineer, on a farm in the township of Reiner, near Borup, very close to the county line between Clay and Becker counties.

Webster was driving a separator for the arrival of Dr. J. T. Shelland of Ada, who dressed the wounds and ordered the wounded man to the Ada hospital at Crookston, where he is still hovering between life and death.

The trouble between the two men arose when Hanson is alleged to have spoken slightly to Webster about his bringing in bundles faster and it is said Hanson used some ugly words.

Webster apparently went on with his work quietly, but when he went to the barn for feed he said to the unbitched a horse from a wagon, jumped on its back and rode to a farmhouse about a mile away, secured a gun, and on returning shot Hanson. The shot entered the abdomen over a hip and bore to the vicinity of the groin.

Webster was taken before Justice Torson, on Saturday, and charged with shooting Ingwald Hanson with intent to kill, but pending the outcome of the assault, the case was adjourned until Oct. 11.

A message to Sheriff Wesley this morning from Dr. Norman of this city, who is in charge of the case at the hospital, was to the effect that Hanson was as well as could be expected, but it must be conceded that the wound from which the patient is suffering is very serious one and there is good hope for recovery unless unforseen complications arise. It may be that another operation may have to be resorted to, but a few more days will have to elapse before that can be decided. Webster, the assailant of Hanson, is safely locked in the county jail at Detroit, in all probability awaiting set for Oct. 11 by Justice Torson will be further adjourned.—Crookston Press.

SOME JOKE ON THE VISITORS

ILLINOIS LEGISLATORS COMING TO MINNESOTA TO STUDY ECONOMY.

St. Paul—(Special)—Here is tonesting news, and all the way from Springfield, Ill., at that. The legislatures of that state is interested in economy and efficiency in its state government and a committee has been selected to go to Minnesota and secure a few pointers. Wisconsin is also to be visited for the same purpose. Both states, a dispatch from Springfield says, are understood to be strong on the economy and efficiency end of the game. As the old saw runs, "One has to go away from home to get the news," and this story about Minnesota being a model in economy and efficiency in a governmental way is sure some news. Perhaps it makes you laugh; it certainly did make some of the folks at the state capitol smile when they heard of it and get come to think of it, the visit, if it is made on the proper publicity genius, may not be without good things to follow. It may mean a little light on a few things we know and may give little attention to. It is not a

HE COULDN'T MAKE THE TURN

GO JAG SITTING ON STEPS ROLLED OFF WHEN TRAIN ROUNDED THE CURVE.

Because he couldn't make the turn a man who had taken on a generous load of "booze" rolled off from the southbound Great Northern train as it was rounding the curve just before pulling into town at noon today.

However, after alighting from the train rather unceremoniously he made several turns very successfully.

The man boarded the train at Thief River Falls and seemed much offended when the train crew would not permit him to ride on the steps. As the train officials were announcing Red Lake Falls he slipped out to the steps for a little fresh air and then he slipped off. He didn't fall off. Being drunk he just "nachly" rolled. Mimself up into a ball and rolled off and he continued to roll for more time than the passing in contact with solid ground.

He was probably uninjured. The last seen of him he was doing the trats a rather resentful adieu.

GEORGE TANDBERG.

Fine Tribute Paid by Official Colleagues and Pupils.

(From the Cavtions.)

George Tandberg had not an enemy in college. Nobody ever met him on the campus without receiving a cheerful smile and a word of friendly greeting. His good nature and friendliness were so contagious that it was impossible not to like him. Optimism and cheerfulness were habitual with him. Even in his last conscious moments, just before his death, he smiled and chatted pleasantly with his most intimate friends who were gathered at his bedside.

College students seldom make a serious mistake in their judgment of a man. Those who understand college men know that no more significant compliment can be paid a man than this: "He is a regular fellow." That is the unanimous opinion Cavtion men expressed yesterday of George Tandberg. That statement implies that he was clean, and square, and honest and "worth while."

Cavtion needs such men as Tandberg and his death is a real loss to the college. He will be missed for his classmates, who knew and trusted him, to adjust themselves to Cavtion life in his personal absence.

DEMOCRATIC TARIFF BILL IS NOW A LAW

PRESIDENT WILSON SIGNS IT AND SCHEDULES BECOME EFFECTIVE AT ONCE.

EXECUTIVE USES GOLD PENS

These Given to Underwood and Simmons—Law is First One Enacted by Democratic Since 1894.

Washington, Oct. 6 — President Woodrow Wilson of the White House signed the Underwood-Simmons tariff measure, the first one to be passed by the Democratic party since 1894.

Simultaneously, customs collectors throughout the country were notified by the treasury department, putting the measure into actual operation.

President Wears Smile.

Surrounded by the leaders of united Democracy and friends, who encircled his desk, the president, with a smile, affixed his signature with two gold pens.

He presented to Representative Underwood the pen that had written the word "Woodrow" and the one which had completed his name to Senator Simmons, both of whom bowed their appreciation.

After an impressive silence the president delivered the first pen to one an extemporaneous speech that brought prolonged applause.

Second Step Currency Reform.

The president declared that the journey of legislative accomplishment had only been partly completed, that a great service had been done for the rank and file of the country, but that the second step in the emancipation of business was currency reform.

He earnestly called upon his colleagues to go "the rest of the journey" with fresh impulse.

"Gentlemen, I feel a very peculiar pleasure," said the president, "in doing what I have just done by way of taking part in the completion of a great piece of business. It is a pleasure which is very hard to express in words which are adequate to express the feeling, because the feeling that I have is that we have done the rank and file of the people of this country a great service. It is hard to speak of these things without seeming to go off into campaign eloquence, but that is not my feeling. It is one very profound, a feeling of profound gratitude that, working with the splendid men who have carried this thing through with studious attention and due deliberate all around, I should have had part in serving the people of this country as we have been striving to serve them ever since I can remember.

"I have had the accomplishment of something like this at heart ever since I was a boy and I know men standing around me who can say the same thing—who have been waiting to see the things done in order that they might be order in the United States.

A Solemn Time.

"There is a solemn moment that brings such a business to a conclusion and I hope I will not be thought to be demeaning too much of myself or of my colleagues when I say this, great as it is, is the accomplishment of only half the journey. We have set the business of this country free from those conditions which have made monopoly not only possible, but, in a sense, easy and natural. But there is no use taking away the conditions of monopoly if we do not take away also the power to create monopoly, and that is a theorist rather than a merely commercial and economic power.

"The power to control and guide and direct the credits of the country is the power in the last analysis by which we shall set hold up the industries of the country, in which direction they shall be built and if we shall destruction they shall not be built. We are now about to take the second step, which will be the final step in not time the business of the country free. That is what we shall do in the currency bill which the house has already passed and which I hope in the almost confidence the senate will pass much sooner than seems pessimistic individuals believe."

Additional Troops Are Ordered.

Detroit, Mich., Oct. 6—Governor Ferris announced, after a conference here with Adjutant Geoers' Gardner took, that he will instruct General Asher, in command of the state troops in the Calumet strike zone, to order three additional militia companies to be prepared for service in case their presence is deemed necessary. Governor Ferris criticized the manner in which local authorities, according to reports, are enforcing the law in the copper country. He said he would keep troops in the district for some time.

"Attorney's License" is Pica.

Chicago, Oct. 8.—Arguments that Daniel J. Donahoe, attorney for John C. Heaning in his allocation suit for $75,000 against Clarence S. Darrow, acted within "attorney's license" in procuring the case and was not liable for conspiracy for which he was indicted to win the case for his client, marked the opening day of his trial before Judge Pam in the circuit court. A report that Mr. and Mrs. Heaning are virtually separated and will live apart at the conclusion of the trial was started in the criminal court building.

Suffragettes Interrupt Services.

London, Oct. 7.—Because the clergy do not include women in their prayers a party of suffragettes interrupted services at Westminster Abbey by chanting a prayer for the women now in prison. The party rose as the litany was being recited and ignored a request to desist from singing. At the conclusion the women left the abbey quietly. Outside, one of them said: "This is nothing to what will happen unless women are included in the clergy's prayers."

SPOKANE WRECKED; ALL SAFE

"S. O. S." CALL BRINGS RELIEF TO FOUNDERING VESSEL.

Reports From Wreck Are That Passengers and Crew Are Saved From Death.

Portland, Oct. 6.—Shipping circles were much excited all along the North Pacific coast when wireless stations picked up "S. O. S." calls from the steamer Spokane. Further messages were received from the Spokane after many ships had responded to the calls for help, that the vessel was wrecked off the coast of Cape Lazo, B. C.

The Spokane is a passenger vessel plying between Portland and North coast points.

The steamer La Touche, of the Alaska Steamship company, was one of the first vessels to answer the distress call and in a few hours was standing by. Fifteen minutes later she began taking off the passengers of the Spokane.

"Taking water fast; send all assistance possible," was one of the flashes received at the wireless stations almost immediately after the first distress call.

The steamer Dolphin and the steamer Minnesota answered the message.

The Spokane is a vessel of 2,036 tons and was built in 1890. She left Skagaway, Alaska, on the return trip September 30.

Seattle, Wash.—The passengers and crew of the steamship Spokane took to the life boats after being picked up by the steamship La Touche. The steamship Alki is standing by and is believed there has been no loss of life.

DIRTY MONEY TO CIRCULATE

Scarcity of Paper Causes United States Treasurer to Pass Out Much Used notes.

Washington, Oct. 8.—For the first time in many years the United States treasury is circulating dirty and time worn currency. The treasury's supply of paper for the printing of money is deficient by 60,000,000 sheets as the make $40,000,000 notes with a probable value in excess of $1,000,000,000. Because of this fact the new paper Treasurer Burke gave orders that no paper money, however dirty should be destroyed. This seems a curious situation as there is a demand for paper money like during the crop moving period.

The failure of the paper washing machine to effect as great e saving as was anticipated and guild can be responsible for the dearth of paper.

YOUNG RYAN ADDS TO SULZER CHARGE

SAYS IMPEACHED EXECUTIVE SOUGHT AID OF LEADER MURPHY.

WANTED HIS TRIAL "KILLED"

Witness Says That Executive Promised to Make it "Right"—Sarecky Takes Blame for Much.

Albany, N. Y., Oct. 9.—Governor Sulzer recently attempted to negotiate a bargain with Charles F. Murphy, leader of Tammany Hall, to have his impeachment trial "called off" was Allen A. Ryan, son of the New York financier and traction magnate, testified.

If Murphy was willing to get "his following to vote that the assembly had no right to impeach him," the governor, according to Ryan, "was willing to do whatever was right."

Sarecky is Called.

The testimony preceded the calling to the defense of Louis A. Sarecky, the governor's campaign secretary, and other witnesses.

Sarecky, a youth of 27, shouldered the blame for omission of unreported contributions from the governor's campaign statement, confessed he had imitated the governor's signature to declaration of candidacy, admitted that he, an alien, born in Russia and never naturalized, had been promoted from the position of the governor's stenographer to the head of the deportation bureau of the state hospital commission.

Ryan's story of the governor's alleged effort to make peace with the leader of Tammany Hall was the second recital of an attempt on the part of the governor to obtain political influence to stop the trial.

Ryan's Previous Testimony.

Ryan testified Monday that Sulzer had asked him to persuade United States Senator Elihu Root to get a New York Republican state chairman, Timothy Barnes, jr., to influence the Republican members of the court of impeachment to vote the impeachment charges.

The letter testimony was immediately stricken out by a vote of the court—32 to 18—but, on motion of Elon R. Brown, the senate's Republican leader, the court, in executive session, reconsidered its action and, by a vote of 41 to 14, decided to admit the testimony and open the door for the remainder of the young financier's story.

Ryan asserted that Sulzer had asked him to obtain the offices of Delancey Nicoll, attorney for the elder Ryan, as "go between" while proposed negotiations with the Tammany leader. This request the governor made, the witness said, in the belief that Ryan had asked him to intercede with Senator Root a week before the impeachment trial began and in the governor's New York office.

Governor Tells of Strength.

The governor said, according to the witness, that he controlled 19 Democratic votes in the court of impeachment. As in the case of the governor's request that he see Senator Root, Ryan said that he made no effort to see Mr. Nicoll.

Ryan did, however, make an effort to see, he said, "to sound out the Republican sentiment."

This he did, he testified, through a "friend."

It appeared from his testimony that this friend had seen Chairman Barnes and obtained a statement that the "Republican members would vote right on the impeachment."

The governor's counsel made no attempt to cross-examine the witness, the latter testified, with apparent reluctance. William Travers Jerome, personal attorney of the witness, sat by James Van Cleave, while the examination was being conducted.

Much Cussing of Wacks.

Sarecky, much heralded as the governor's star witness, took the stand after a couple of weeks and a half of interest.

He received either from Tammany Hall or from the secretary of state," said Sarecky, "a blank form in which a statement was to be made out of receipts and expenditures of campaign funds.

"Did William Sulzer have anything whatever to do in the work of preparing that statement?"

"No, sir," Sarecky declared, emphatically.

"Why did you leave out any moneys?"

"Because I did not have any record before me at the time I made up the statement to cover the items I omitted. I used part of the money that I deposited to my own credit in rattling a suit out West that had been brought against Mr. Sulzer during the campaign."

Danounce National Prohibition.

St. Louis, Oct. 9.—The National Germans-American Alliance at its convention adopted a resolution condemning in the strongest to secure the enactment of a national prohibition law. Between September 1, 1913 and August 31, 1913, there were 39 burglaries or attempted burglaries of banks, which are members of the association, and 100 burglaries of banks outside.

YOUNG RYAN ADMITS 20 MURDERS IN TEN YEARS

Chicago, Oct. 8.—Of the 19 murders Henry Spencer, slayer of Mrs. Mildred Allison Rexroat, swore he had committed, the police, after investigating his alleged crimes in various cities, were able to tie upon him only one besides the murder of Mrs. Rexroat.

Captain Halpin, chief of the detective bureau, declared his experience that Spencer, in giving his long, circumstantial confession of crime, was a consummate falsifier.

Of the murders he says he committed were perpetrated while Spencer was in the Illinois state penitentiary at Joliet. Of 12 of the alleged murders the police in this and other cities have no record.

"His imagination; stimulated by drugs, proved one time of the most fantastic tales of murder that has ever come from a man whose mind is given to dreams of crime," said Captain Halpin yesterday.

Captain Halpin declared that he has complete proof that Spencer murdered Mrs. Rexroat, and is almost equally confident that he murdered Mrs. Annabel Wight.

Mrs. Wight's house was robbed Dec. 4, 1912, and she was beaten so badly that she died on July 13, 1913.

The body of Ida Oliver, recovered from the drainage canal May 24, 1912, may correspond to the foreign woman whom Spencer said he lured along the canal and killed after robbing her.

Spencer was in the penitentiary when Policemen Pennell and Devine were killed, Aug. 11, 1902. He also was in prison in 1908 when Night Man Thompson was killed and when Sergeant McChesney was killed in September, 1911.

Details were received from police in other cities mentioned by Spencer that many of the boasted crimes were confirmed.

Complete identification of Spencer as the murderer of Mrs. Rexroat came from several different sources.

NOME DESTROYED BY FIRE AND WATER

MEN AND WOMEN BATTLE ALL NIGHT WITH FIRE, WATER AND FLAMES.

DAMAGE IS OVER $1,500,000

No Lives Are Lost, so Far as Reported —United States Revenue Cutter Goes to Scene to Aid Sufferers.

Nome, Alaska, Oct. 8.—Following a disastrous storm and the invasion of the sea on Sunday night, flames began out Monday morning at 1:30 a. m. Front street was soon a seething, flaming mass of wreckage into which seas broke, while hundreds of homeless persons repaired to save the household effects of life.

Debris Carried Away.

Receding seas soon carried away the contents of wrecked houses and stores as well as parts of wrecked structures.

None of the buildings on the Sandpit remain standing and many of the leveled structures there burned. This portion of the community is cut off by the turbulent stream.

City Almost Destroyed.

In fact, Nome has been almost destroyed by the storm that beat in from Behring sea and the flames have added horror to the ruin. The main side of Front street is washed clean of buildings and the business district is no more.

The storm was the worst that was ever known here. Men and women worked all night in the icy waters to save their household effects. The electric light plant was wrecked and telephone service cut off.

Loss is a Million and a Half.

The loss is estimated at $1,500,000. There will be much suffering as a result and outside help will be required. Winter is at hand and it will be impossible to get in supplies needed.

The steamship Victoria and Corwin, which were lying in the roadstead, rose to the open sea and escaped damage. All the small boats on the beach were destroyed. Five hundred houses have been demolished and more are falling in.

Nome, the famous gold camp on Behring sea, the most northerly city in the world, was built on a sandy seabeach. In front of the town there is no anchorage for ships, but steamers do not make a landing. Cargoes and passengers are landed at an aerial tramway erected by lighters.

Principal Part of Town.

The principal part of the town, which a dozen years ago had a population of 20,000, is on the east side of Snake river, with a long finger extending to the west along a narrow strip of land. This part was rich in gold dust and the early settlers built their cabins there.

Nome has produced more than $35,000,000 in gold dust. Some years the yield has been as high as $8,000,000. This year the production will not exceed $3,000,000, owing to lack of water.

The summer population is about 4,000 and in the winter 2,000 remain. The white population on steamships that leave lats in October. Ons steamship is yet to leave Seattle for Nome.

Commissioner is Cut Off.

VERIFY IDENTITY OF ROBBER

OFFICERS CERTAIN CORPSE WAS THIEF RIVER OUTLAW.

Veggman Declined to Be Leader of Trio—Name Kept Secret—Long Crime Record.

Bemidji, Minn., Oct. 9.—That the dead bandit was stretched out in the county morgue here was one of the things men who actively participated in the Soo Line train robbery at Thief River Falls appeared to be established beyond question, as the result of information received from Cass Lake.

Officers declare that the robber who was tracked from Cass Lake to Thief River Falls and that the dead man bore not only was the leader of the fleeing theft, but that he was a desperado with a trail of crime extending from New York to San Francisco.

These assertions are made despite the fact that the dead man had taken the most gorgeous precautions to hide identity by stripping himself of everything that would permit the ordinary investigation to establish his identity.

The list of burglar tools and note book containing the name of "Anthony Comstock" led to the dead man's identification. But it was Cass Lake men this identification was made still more positive just before by Constable Lawler of St. Paul at once investigated the murder and sought Cass Lake where that the dead man was the leader of the Thief River robbery, although the means used to make public the dead bandit's name.

State News of General Interest

CO-OPERATIVE PLAN BEING PERFECTED

SCHEME CONCEIVED BY GOVERNOR TO IMPROVE DAIRY STOCK OF STATE.

COUNTY AGENTS AS NUCLEUS

These Representatives Will Organize a Farmers' Pool in Each County for the Purpose of Buying Cattle.

St. Paul.—Minnesota is about to put into effect a general co-operative scheme which will have as its result the increase in the number and improvement in the character of the dairy stock of Minnesota. The plan has been conceived and is being inaugurated by Governor Eberhart as part of the general farm improvement scheme which he has had in mind. The plan involves little or no financial risk to the farmer and can be successfully carried out will mean added millions to the agricultural and dairying wealth of Minnesota. It is one of the most important plans ever inaugurated for the benefit of the farmers of the state.

Governor Calls a Meeting.

The governor called a meeting of the prominent bankers and business men from various parts of the state and some days ago to confer with him in the Capitol. With them were Dean A. F. Wood of the State Agricultural college and Prof. A. L. Haecker of the Department of Animal Husbandry is the same institution. Two county agents were also present at the conference. Governor Eberhart briefly outlined the tentative plan which he had in mind, and the plan met the hearty approval of Dean Wood and was enthusiastically endorsed by the bankers and business men who conferred with him. It was decided to put the plan immediately into effect in one or more counties, and already the preliminary plans have been arranged to bring this about. The idea is to work it out in one county so that an example may be held before other counties in the interest of beneficial results.

One Purpose in View.

It was decided at the meeting that it would be well to confine efforts along this line to the one particular purpose of bringing improved dairy cows into the state by means of a co-operative plan, and not to allow any diversion along other lines which would naturally suggest themselves but which would militate against the success of the plan through a scattering of effort. Just as soon as the co-operative plan of working is made a success, other things will be taken up, like the importation of sheep to northern Minnesota for the purpose of aiding in clearing the land, and other co-operative plans of similar character.

County Agent Is Nucleus.

As at present outlined, the nucleus of this proposed co-operative scheme will be the county agent. At present there are twenty-four of these county agents in as many different counties of the state. Working through these county agents, it is planned to have the farmers organize a co-operative pool, and if they have not the money to put into the pool, they can make arrangements with the local banks at a reasonable rate of interest to buy one, two or more cars of cattle in accordance with what the farmer is able to pay. The county agent or some other competent person is then deputized to buy the cattle and ship them into the county entity for distribution among the different farmers who wish to buy them. The actual expenses of this man's trip and the freight are charged up to all the cattle bought and pro rated accordingly. Under this plan there will be no difficulty about securing the money, as the local banks would loan the local farmers to make the purchases on their own note, and when the division of the cattle is made, the farmer can arrange with the local bank for the amount he will need for his particular share of the cattle.

Go a smaller scale the plan has already been successfully tried in Big Stone county and in others, and has been found extremely successful.

Virginia.—Louis B. Fedden, proprietor of a barber shop, was fatally injured when an automobile collided with a logging train on the Canadian Northern.

Farmers Fooled by Agent.

Litchfield.—Many Meeker county farmers have been bunkoed, they say, by a St. Paul man who sold them bull and tornado insurance. Fifteen cents a hundred for insurance looked reasonable, but policyholders are now informed that they must pay an assessment, a fact not mentioned by the agent, and which will amount to more than the amount bunkoed. Farmers who held $4,000 policies are notified to pay at once $40. The matter has been taken up with the state insurance commissioner.

VIRUS MAY SPREAD CHOLERA

IMPROPER VACCINATION HELD CAUSE IN SWINE HERDS.

Danger in "Virus" From Infected Hogs, Says Minnesota Bulletin.

Minneapolis.—Startling statements in the official bulletin on hog cholera issued by the extension division of the university's department of agriculture have new interest in connection with the recent declaration by James J. Hill that hog cholera possibly was being spread by the very treatment given to prevent it. The bulletin states:

"A herd may be infected by improper vaccination methods, and instead of immunizing the hogs it may actually infect them with cholera, if not carefully and judiciously used." And again:

"The experiment station, will not furnish virus with serum unless a veterinarian from the station or from the state live stock sanitary board is going to use it, because of the possibility and danger of creating a disease when used by inexperienced persons."

The two terms are explained by the university as follows:

"Virus" and "Serum."

"Hog cholera serum is the clot free blood obtained from a hog that has been rendered very highly immune against cholera by one of several methods now in use. It takes from one to two months to work a hog to the point where the blood will contain enough protective substances to make a small amount of it if injected into another hog the latter will be rendered immune.

"Virus is blood taken from a hog that is very sick with cholera and injected to die. It is mixed in the case producing blood and contains the actual living germs of cholera and must be handled cautiously."

Of the circumstances whoo serum and virus are used in these words both serum and virus should be, the bulletin states:

"Well hogs may be treated (vaccinated with hog cholera serum so that they will not take the disease if exposed later. Such treatment is called immunization. This is a reasonable treatment (serum only) for herds recently infected. From experiments we have learned that it is not a good plan to use serum in herds where the disease has prevailed for a long time, or where a large part of the hogs have died, or where many are sick.

"The double method (both serum and virus injections) may be used in herds in which cholera has just appeared, or in healthy herds to a locality where cholera has made its appearance."

MURDER AND ASSAULT CASES

Jury Acquits the Slayer of Two Men —Believe Defendant's Story.

Grand Rapids.—District court here has been busy with cases involving murder and assault charges. The first was that of the state against Dalton Norcross, accused of murdering Mike and Steve Vokobrotovitch at Deer Lake in August.

It was alleged he went down the road from the Wranich boarding house with them and when the bodies were turned and fired, killing them. Norcross admitted the shooting and he testified this was all there was to the matter. The prisoner with the two jumped upon him, one taking him by the throat and the other grabbing him by the shoulder and biting him.

At the same time one of them said, "Give us your money or we will kill you." The defendant testified he was frightened and turned and fired, killing both. The jury believed his story and acquitted him.

The second case to be tried was the state against Pauline Bergeron, accused of assaulting Charles Johnson, former of the Bennett mine at Bovey with the evening of Aug. 27. He asserted self-defense and the jury acquitted him. It appeared in the evidence that the plaintiff did the assaulting. The girl sends a record-breaking decision, returning a verdict of "not guilty" to four minutes.

Mike Pavlosheka, a Chippewa Indian of Bena, who was accused of illegally killing a deer on the reservation last fall, was tried and acquitted. He shot the deer and did not deny it. H. W. Warren, who is in charge of Indian affairs at Bena, testified that the defendant was an Indian and the court then held that he was not amenable to the state game law.

MURDER ADDED TO ROBBERY

BODY IN BEMIDJI, MINN., MORGUE MAY BE BANDIT.

Bullet Is Two Fugitives Blew Partner and Took Loot.

Bemidji.—The most brutal murder, Sheriff Andrew Johnson of Bemidji believes, has been added to the list of crimes of two of the three robbers who held up the "Boo" ticket agent and baggageman and escaped with $7,500 last Tuesday at Thief River Falls.

In the coroner's room here lies the body of a man with a bullet-pierced brain. The body of the man, who clearly was murdered, was found between Pinewood and Berlimer on the "Soo" line, 62 miles southeast of Thief River Falls and 13 miles from Bemidji.

A complete robbery kit, consisting of 14 keys, file, a leather pouch containing cartridges, a necktie bearing the trade mark of a Minneapolis firm, and a note book of the first fifteen pages of which was written, "Anthony Cumming, R. S. W.," were among the things found in the dead men's clothes when the coroner's surgeon made a description of one of the three robbers sent out from Thief River Falls a week ago in that he is 5 feet 5 inches tall, weighs about 160 pounds, had brown eyes and was wearing a dark gray coat. A request for detectives working near Thief River Falls to come to Bemidji to attempt to identify the body as one of the robbers was wired.

The dead man was about 50 years old, had bushy brown hair, a bald crown of his head, straight, unbrushed eyebrows, clean, new overalls, a red vest over a blue and-white striped sweater, and over the woolen vest of good grade, a pair of black shoes too light for a laboring man or one accustomed to walking in the tie.

A bullet hole, around the center of which black powder had burned a circle one inch to diameter, to the middle of the forehead, told the method of his death.

FERGUS FALLS HAS FIGHT

Mayor Reverses Himself and Aldermanic Contest Seems Likely to Reach the Courts.

Fergus Falls.—An aldermanic contest that is likely to reach the county bee hoco started here. Alderman J. C. Meyer resigned three months ago and under the charter the office council is empowered to elect his successor. The council submitted the question to the voters of this ward informally at a hotly contested school election and by a vote of 2 to 1. Nelson had a large majority of the popular vote. At the next meeting of the council four of the aldermen voted for Mr. Nelson, while three voted for the defeated candidate. The mayor ruled that a majority consists of eight members, as the charter says that an aldermen shall hold office until his successor is elected, and that five were necessary to elect. The same vote was taken two or three other occasions with the same rullog.

At a later meeting four of the aldermen who had voted for Nelson on one or two previous occasions, joined in with the three who had formerly, and four votes were cast for Fred E. Hodgson. The mayor announced that he had changed his mind about five months ago and that he had elected Mr. Hodgson duly elected.

The authorities of Emerson tele phoned the sheriff that the men had been taken into custody, and that they answered the meager description of the bandits, as furnished by the depot employe who were held up. These are the first arrests that have been made in the case.

Different Arrangements of High Coiffure

NOW that the high coiffure is certain of success, hairdressers are evolving many attractive arrangements, each making its bid for popular favor. It is certain a new order of things is coming. There is to be more elaborateness in styles for the coming season than for a year past, more pretty curls and ringlets about the face, and the return to a modest pompadour at the front. This is something to be thankful for because it is immensely becoming to most women.

The coiffure, the very plain, styles are well enough for youthful wearers. But older women require more intricate designs. The new high coiffures are stately and a great advantage to them. Little variations adopt them to youthful wearers—like the puff extending out at each side and covering the ears.

In all the new styles shown so far the ears are concealed, as in those worn during the past season. There are several pretty new arrangements of the hair both in the front and back of the coiffure. That showing the Psyche knot at the crown of the head or a little higher has been most quickly adopted, perhaps because this style is always good and never quite disappears.

In the style shown here the hair about the forehead is curled in short ringlets. Below these on each side a strand is parted off and rolled into a puff. All the remainder of the hair is brought up to the top of the head, except that portion which is at the front to cover the pompadour. A small bair roll or support will be needed for the pompadour.

When the back hair is brought up the head loosely and pinned into position, the short hair roll is pinned in across the top of the head. The ends of the hair which are brought over the pompadour are fastened under the coil at the top of the head. Then the hair is brought down at each side and turned back near the temples and above the puffs which cover the ears.

A short fringe of hair about the face is curled and parted at the middle. When the hair is not long or thick enough it is necessary to use a small switch to form the coil at the top of the head.

Very little wave appears in this coiffure, although there are models in which a long loose wave is employed. But the waving of the natural hair is very natural looking. Just enough to keep it from being quite straight and about like that which appears in the short switch shown here.

A switch of this kind may be used for many different styles and arranged to a braid or chignon or coil. It is the easiest of places to adjust.

VOILE AFTERNOON GOWN THAT COSTS ONLY FIVE DOLLARS

COTTON voils and challies come in beautiful colors and designs, and make up into the prettiest of inexpensive gowns for afternoon and evening wear. Besides the plain weaves, there are the printed varieties which are so attractive to themselves, and make possible combinations with the plain colors or other fabrics that are artistic and effective. This may be achieved by the use of fisher materials.

The voils afternoon gown shown here has a dull olive green ground, over which sprays of sweet peas are scattered. The blossoms are in shades of brown and tan, growing into a pink and pinkish lavender, with the brown tones prevailing. This coloring worn over a slip in light leather brown is very effective. The slip may be made either of silk or mercerized muil.

The design chosen for materials of this kind should be simple. In this gown the skirt is laid in narrow plaits at the back near the waist line, to flare out at the edge fullness when it is finished with a deep hem.

The waist is gathered at the neck and has a yoke of the material, which is outlined with a band of the brown and tan. The sleeves are in bishop style, with a band of the brown and tan at the wrist. The girdle also is of the dark brown.

The authorities of Emerson telephoned the sheriff that the men had been taken into custody, and that they answered the meager description of the bandits, as furnished by the depot employe who were held up. These are the first arrests that have been made in the case.

DAIRYMAN SHOULD KEEP MONEY MAKERS

Eminent's Beau, a Jersey Cow, With the Best Record for Milking.

(By N. M. KENYON.)

The man who has made two blades of grass grow where but one grew before has been looked upon as a public benefactor. But the man who has succeeded in producing one blade at less cost has worked out a more complex problem.

Increased production does not always bring an increased profit. Increased profits from the dairy herd cow must, to a measure, come from more economical production.

To make economical production we must have cows that by thoroughbreeding and individuality are adapted to our needs. For the butter and cream producing dairy, the Jersey and Guernsey cows have a certain advantage because of the character of their milk, which contains a higher percentage of butter fat.

The Holstein and Ayrshire cows are compelled to elaborate more solids to produce the same amount of fat. The is a breed characteristic.

On the other hand the Holstein and Ayrshire cows give more milk solids more economically and are better fitted for the production of cheese and market milk.

Whether the dairy breeds we find a greater difference between individual cows then between the breeds. We have Holstein cows that give 40 pounds of milk daily, and we have Jersey cows that produce but 20 pounds. Some are eating up the profits made by the 40-pound Holstein, while profits from the good cows to balance the loss from the poor cows.

The first step toward reducing the cost of production is weighing and testing the milk from each cow. Only the herd often enough to keep a good line on what she is producing.

Weighing the milk for one day each week and testing it once each month will give practically the same results as weighing and testing each milking.

By taking these weekly and monthly records and making a yearly average it is easy to determine how much milk and butter each cow has produced for the year.

This is but one-half the question. Some cows are fairly large producers but not economical producers. Others may produce less milk or-better yet be more economical producers.

A tight feeder may digest her food perfectly and be an economical producer. We should not keep a record of each cow's feed one day each week and its market value, in connection with the weighing and testing of the milk.

This will show what a pound of milk or butter costs from each cow in the herd.

Sell the cows that produce butter for twenty-five cents per pound and keep all that produce a pound for fifteen cents. The scales, the Babcock test and profit and loss will assist in weeding out the unprofitable cows from the herd.

The illustration shows Eminent's Beau, a Jersey owned by Reynolds farm, Sidney, Ariz. Her record under the supervision of the Michigan State Dairy Association is: Production of 18,783 pounds of milk, testing 1,132 pounds, 6 ounces of butter.

The achievement of Eminent's Beau exceeds the record of Jacoba Irene, heretofore the world's champion of the Jersey breed, by 1,525 pounds of butter fat, at the same time exceeds the record of Spottswood Daley Pearl, the world's champion Guernsey cow, by 179 pounds of milk.

LEARN THINGS BY FEW HARD KNOCKS.

Better Crop One Gets for Plowing Little Deeper Pays Well for Crop of Wheat.

(By L. M. BENNINGTON.)

Some cows are fat about any thing milk at this season of the year. There are the cows you and I do not want. Feed them up and get cows that will hold out to the end of the season.

Have a little dressed wheat than you did for corn. The earth may be drier now than it was in the spring so that you will need a stronger team on the beam, but the better crop you get for having deep will pay for the extra labor.

It is a mistake to put off fitting the wheat ground till the last minute. Have it all ready when the time comes for seeding. The amount of fertilizer used per acre should be governed by the kind of soil, whether it be clay or sandy. The latter needs a liberal dressing of fertilizer rich in potash and phosphoric acid, while the former does not require so much.

The kimono waist is fastened to surplice style, lapping from right to left at the front. The waist has a high, corrving slightly upward at the back.

A polish of silk or velvet ribbon to greet two inches wide is all the decoration needed for the simple combination of a bit of colored parsementerie or embroidery at the front of the collar. The sides a bit of color in coral, blue, brown and green, with a little touch of gold. A half yard is enough to provide this finish in the model. This is very large and full.

To make such a gown in material a two yards wide you only four yards at most. The skirt is narrow, with little drapery. The slip of muil required about the same amount of material as the outer dress.

For women who must hire the sewing done the expense will mount up to double the price of the material. But anyone who can sew fairly well should be able to put together a simple affair of the kind.

JULIA BOTTOMLEY.

Mourning Frock of Serge.

A simple street frock for mourning and morning wear this fall is shown here. The little yoke, which, by the bees. It had a plain peasant blouse. The little yoke, which by closing with a row of dull let buttons, takes on the effect of a waistcoat, is made of dull black taffeta. This is outlined by two ruffles of the same. The turnback cuffs of taffeta are finished in a similar manner. The skirt, which is slightly draped below the hips, is particularly well adapted to this material and produces a charming, dignified effect. The girdle also is of the black taffeta.

PRACTICAL HINTS FOR AUTUMN WORK

All Machinery and Implements Should Be Placed Under Cover for Winter.

If you must buy feed for the cows, buy it by the car or compact for it. Cheaper than later.

Put every disused machine and tool in its place under the shed.

Then paint them.

Spread all the stormy apples to the stock—but don't have any next year. Better save the calves bumping if they are intended for baby beef.

The hogs will drink as much clean water as the sweet is taste—if they can get it.

Let the young chickens the run of the place.

Grooved plowed for wheat? Do it now.

Pretty late to cut old blackberry and raspberry canes, but not too late.

Burn the potato vines and all trash in the fields to prevent rot next year.

Keep after the insects on the late cabbage plants. Kill every one you see.

Good time to bank-brace the cribs.

If your poultry house has a dirt floor dig it up and scrape out the loose dung to make room for fresh soil.

This is a good season for ditching.

Grass set early this month will hatch chickens that will bring big money at Christmas.

Every sprout will bail you can find on the corn stalks.

Keep your eye out for the choice ears of corn for seed.

Nasty job in making up and harvesting cockle-burrs, but it must be done this month.

Get the barrels or boxes ready for the apples next month.

Cover the strawberries at the latter part of the month.

Give the cow barn a coat of whitewash inside. Ditto the poultry house.

Lawn rather poorly? This is the month to sow seed and again in March.

The "windfall" apples are "hogfall," and must be quickly disposed of.—C. M. S.

Mange in Horses.

Mange in horses is much more difficult to treat than scab in sheep or common mange in cattle. Prevention of infection with the disease is safer and more satisfactory. There is no well allowing treatment, even for lice on stock. The class of stock, their bad condition of the animals and season of the year determine the kind of treatment most advisable.

Feed for Dairy Herd.

No complaint can be made of rouge crops is needed to supply the dairy herd with succulent feeds on the modern stock farm where corn, clover and alfalfa thrive.

Building Up the Farm.

One of the surest and best ways to build-up a run-out farm is to keep a good herd of cows and to put every pound of manure back on the land.

Hatch is Not All.

It is easier to hatch chickens than to rear them, but both are easy if you go at it right.

Successful Dairyman.

The dairyman who is good, knows and applies ordinary business principles in his work.

Fed a Variety.

It is better to feed a variety than to feed heavily on one kind of grain. Ground corn, oats, wheat, bran and flax or cottonseed should give good results.

Rattle in Throat.

A mixture made of one part spirits of turpentine with four parts linseed oil, is recommended for rattling in the throat. Administer ten drops daily.

Preventing Cracked Heels.

Keep the mud clogged off the horses' legs, and they will not have cracked heels.

Good Cow Feed.

A pail of scalded bran is a good "eye opener" after standing.

Feed Variety.

Variety in feed is necessary to keep the appetite keen.

Cattle Fattening.

Cattle fattening should be kept quiet.

Feeding Calves.

Calves should be fed regularly.

SITUATION COMPLICATED.

There have been interesting developments in the politics of the state during the week. State Auditor Iverson has announced his candidacy for the republican nomination for governor and in a rather lengthy formal statement speaks emphatically for economy in the transaction of public business and rigid law enforcement and a systematized close relation between the heads of the various state departments as a means of bringing about intelligent economy and efficiency. He assails the "invisible government" and says that the thing, whatever it is, should not longer be permitted to operate in its place or sibling.

Almost simultaneously the governor, as if he had been preparing to respond to the first broadside, issued an important public statement. The governor has appointed a commission composed of twenty-five citizens of the state to prepare a plan for a complete reorganization of the various departments of the state government. The governor suggests a change in the making of appropriations of public money from the grab bag to the budget system—that is, of having the needs of each department outlined by the head of the department and prepared in detail that the legislature may act intelligently. It is, of course, a good suggestion and the commission may be able to propose some very valuable changes.

The commission will report to the next legislature, after the next election. The governor will have the privilege, naturally, in his next campaign, of standing on the record that the commission is going to make.

The two announcements read so much alike that one might suspect that there were detectives on the job, though his excellency does not say anything about law enforcement or mention specifically the "invisible government." And it is probable that all candidates for the republican nomination for governor are going to say about the same thing, for that is about what the "field of candidates" has been saying for some time past and everybody is keen for reforms just now.

If there are anxious times for the candidates there are no anxieties to some trying moments, days and weeks ahead for the horde of leaser lights who whom being in, at the finish is very much as a reunion if not a job. To another lot of people, a large number of intelligent voters are of course, those who are not particularly interested in anybody's "political welfare," the situation is decidedly interesting.

Heretofore the fight in state politics has been one of the field against the governor, with the governor having the advantage because of the divided opposition. The political friends of Governor Eberhart are naturally presumed to be also the political friends of Iverson. With both of them in the race with very much the same "thunder" as that used by the opposition to the governor the political situation in Minnesota, can be very correctly described as complicated.

It was an uneven fight, for Tammany is only a name, after all—an "artificial being."

If Auditor Iverson was a part of the "Eberhart machine" it is evident that he has "jumped a cog."

Another Installment.

There is said to be "honor among thieves." That may explain the motive for Tammany "going out of business."

Pity the poor mail clerk who must handle the parcels post packages—and do your Christmas shopping early.

What are the progressives to do when conservatives like Eberhart and Iverson steal all of their thunder?

The announcements of Governor Eberhart and Auditor Iverson are as if each had just been waiting for the other to strike first.

Of one thing we may be sure, all of the candidates for the republican nomination for governor are going to be very, very "progressive."

Another Elwell, the "father" of good roads, is liable to find that while the roads are improving there are many rough places on the highway that leads to the state house.

The fellows who are talking about beef steak at one dollar a pound may have the welfare of the public in mind. People who presume to know say that people eat twice as much meat as they should.

CO-ADJUTORS' REMARKS.

Sandstone Courier: Several states are making a success of introducing the honor system in their state prisons and allowing the inmates to work on the highways in citizens clothes. Minnesota should try the plan, as it is said to be very beneficial to the inmates, and the roads in this state can certainly stand the improving.

Virginia Virginian: The stage history public taste, and just as long as salacious plays sell out at every performance, just so long will they be produced. It is up to the people.

Princeton Union: Every auditorium should see to it that the 1-mill road drag tax is properly extended upon their tax lists. The 1-mill drag tax is one of the best provisions in the new road law.

Cambridge Star: A St. Paul man trying to telephone to the police department from an ambulance for an injured man, was, after a 15-minute wait, given connection with a prominent brewery. Why the 15-minute delay?

Anoka Union: The national dreammakers intent on dress reform, could do nothing which would relieve and bring humanity more than to discard the hook dress. They would be blessed by the average husband, that's sure.

Cambridge Star: The new antibrewery ordinance went into effect in Duluth last week. No more brewery-owned saloons in that city to set city in the state. Things certainly do move in those days. It seems but a few years ago that it will be the law all over Minnesota.

Red Wing Republican: Eminent professors from the University of Wisconsin, the University of Michigan and Columbia University are active as special advisors to the Chinese republican government in framing the constitution and getting the various departments into operation. With the aid of such efficient and disinterested Americans the new republic is sure of the best advice available.

SOME JOKE ON THE VISITORS

Word comes from the Progressive party leaders in Minnesota are figuring on either Senator C. F. Gunderson of Lanesboro or Congressman C. A. Lindbergh of Little Falls as their gubernatorial candidate next year. That either of them will make the try is doubtful, though it is said that if the two were to permit it it would be more likely Lindbergh. Senator Gunderson has not been in the game to try new lands. Congressman Lindbergh did have the gubernatorial fever about two years ago, but he soon got over it.

Though repeated warnings have been sent out to holders of passenger and freight receipts in Minnesota on which refunds are obtainable not to do business with railroads, it is said that fully $500,000 worth of receipts have been picked up since the rate decision was made. One Minneapolis firm, railroad and weed house commission has been informed, has picked up receipts calling for nearly $250,000 in refundments and for the collection of the same will write receipts amounting to nearly $50,000. Many speculators have picked up receipts for practically nothing.

Governor Eberhart is taken up the cause of the Norwegian residents of Minnesota in the matter of trying to aid them in raising sufficient funds to provide Minnesota with proper representation at the Ghent exposition centennial to be celebrated at Christiania next year. He has interested a number of prominent Minnesotans in the movement. The movement. At the last session of the legislature Governor Eberhart sent the message, urging the appropriation asking attention to the centennial and recommending the appropriation of $15,000, but he was turned down. The senate passed the bill, but it failed in the house. One of the reasons given of it all was that the Norwegian residents of the state were opposed to the defeat of the appropriation. They voted against it to a man.

What is one man's meat is often another man's poison, something many chants and employers over the state are learning to their sorrow in view of the workmen's compensation law, which went into effect Aug. 1. The whole thing is pie for the insurance companies, who have been reaping a harvest in premiums, and employers, who use led to believe that the act would be a panacea for many ills, is learning to his cost that it is he who will have to pay the bills. I gather from some of the complaints that more than one legislative campaign will be waged in the state on the material modification of the act.

Attorney General Smith has ruled that where commission governments are elected in cities of the state the voters cannot vote for more than one candidate for city office as a primary held to name the necessary candidates. This ruling was made in response to a communication in St. Paul, where it had been planned to crowd the regular city election out of the primary fight.

SYNOPSIS.

George Anderson and wife are a remarkable looking man come out of the woods near Dorcas, Minnesota, and visit the bank in the general store. Cashier Commodius attracts them to the Callender, where it is found that the daughter of Edith Challoner has fallen dead. Anderson and wife claim to be the first to reach the body in the snow. The local manager declares him to be Oswald Brotherson. Philpots is the first detective to arrive. He questions Brotherson and Anderson, and Brotherson, after a brief talk up to the car. Mr. Challoner arrives. He is told by Philpots that a dying woman's words, signed only "E. C." All are here with a except one, which shows that the letter was dictated. The letter was signed by Orlando Brotherson. Anderson tells Challoner that Oswald Brotherson, who is engaged to Edith, is employed under the name of Dunn. He is an inventor. Brotherson tells the coroner Miss Challoner was engaged to him and that he offered to marry her secretly. Brotherson tells the coroner of a quarrel with his brother, in which some details were given. Brotherson tells Challoner that Edith's two daughter were not on good terms. Brotherson, it was revealed, left home in consequence of Edith's love affair. Brotherson's rooms were a peculiar but in the woods near Dorcas. Edith's letter, written to Brotherson, called him to the bedside of the supervisor of Dents. Scott. Dents rule Challoner's son refused Edith. The letter told Brotherson that Edith had died before the arrival of her friend. To avoid disturbances, she requests an interview with Brotherson. Edith's maid testifies to a private meeting. Philpots tells Challoner that he has fallen in love with Doris.

CHAPTER XXX—Continued.

"This, I make no apologies and expect in answer nothing more than an unequivocal yes or no. You tell me that you have never met my brother. Can that be said of the other members of your family—of your deceased daughter, in fact?"

"No."

"She was acquainted with Oswald Brotherson."

"She was."

"Without your knowledge?"

"Entirely so."

"Corresponded with him?"

"Not exactly."

"How, not exactly?"

"He wrote to her—occasionally. She wrote to him frequently—but she never sent her letters."

"Ah!"

The exclamation was sharp, short and conveyed little. Yet with its escape, the whole aspect of this man's hold upon life and his own fate went down in the indistinguishable chaos. Mr. Challoner realized a sense of havoc, though the eyes bent upon his countenance had not wavered, nor the stalwart figure moved.

"I have read some of those letters," the inventor finally acknowledged. "The police took great pains to place them under my eye, supposing them to have been meant for me because of the initials written on the wrapper. But they were meant for Oswald. You believe that now?"

"I know it."

"And that is why I found you in the same house with him."

"It is. Providence has robbed me of my daughter; if this brother of yours should prove to be the man I am led to expect, I shall ask him to take that place in my heart and life which was hers here."

A quick recoil, a smothered exclamation on the part of the man he addressed. A hand up and then fallen in this simple statement which had reached some deep-hidden hurt or unsuspected spot in Brotherson's breast, horrible spot he'd never been pierced before. It was a sight no man could see unmoved. Mr. Challoner turned sharply away, in dread of the abyss which the next word he uttered might open between them.

But Orlando Brotherson possessed resources of strength of which, possibly, he was not aware himself. When Mr. Challoner, still more affected by the silence than by the dread I have mentioned, turned to confront him again, it was to find his features composed and his glance clear. He had conquered all outward manifestation of the mysterious emotion which for an instant had laid his proud spirit low.

"You are considerate of my brother," were the words with which he reopened this painful conversation. "You will not find your confidence misplaced. Oswald is a straightforward fellow, of few faults."

"I believe it. No man can be so universally beloved without some very substantial claims to regard. I am glad to see that your opinion, though given somewhat coldly, coincides with that of his friends."

"I am not given to exaggeration," was the stern reply.

Nothing which had yet passed showed that this man realized the fact that Oswald had been kept in ignorance of Miss Challoner's death. If these brothers were to meet on the morrow, it must be with the full understanding that this especial topic was to be completely avoided. Had in what words could he urge such a request upon this man? Orlando suggested themselves, yet he had promised Miss Scott that he would insure his silence in this regard, and it was with this difficulty and no other he had been struggling when Mr. Brotherson came upon him in the other room.

"You have still something to say," suggested the latter, as an oppressive silence swallowed up that lay sentence I have already recorded.

"I have," returned Mr. Challoner, regaining his courage under the exigencies of the moment. "Miss Scott is very anxious to have your promise that you will avoid all disagreeable topics with your brother till the doctor pronounces him strong enough to meet the troubles which awaits him."

"You mean—"

"It is not so unhappy as we. He knows nothing of the affliction which has befallen him. He was taken ill—The rest was almost inaudible.

"Do you think I should be apt to broach this subject with anyone, let alone with him, whose connection with it I shall need days to realize? I'm not so given to gossip. Besides, he and I have other topics of interest. I have an invention ready with which I propose to experiment in a place he has already provided for me. We can talk about that."

The brave, the hardy self-possession with which this was said struck Mr. Challoner to the heart. Without a word he wheeled about towards the door. Without a word Brotherson stood, watching him go till he saw his hand fall on the knob when he quietly turned and said his only reply:

"Unhappy truths cannot be long concealed. I shall make that the latest I think my brother can bear these inveritable revelations?"

"I think so. Assuming that if his patient were as well tomorrow on his present condition given promise that he might be told in another week."

"Then nobody else should be trusted with so delicate a task."

"Not by the nurses!"

Mr. Challoner looked up, surprised at the feeling with which this request was charged.

"As his brother—his only remaining relative, I have that right, I think. I think that Dor—that Miss Scott, can be trusted not to forestall that moment by any previous hint of what awaits him?"

"If she so promises. But will you exact this from her? It surely cannot be necessary for us to say that your presence will add infinitely to the difficulty of her task."

"Yet it is a duty I cannot shirk. I will consult the doctor about it. I will make him see that I both understand and shall insist upon my rights in this matter. But you may tell Miss Dorcas that I will sit out of sight, and that I shall not disclose myself unless my name is brought up in an undesirable way."

The hand on the door-knob made a sudden movement.

"Mr. Brotherson, I can bear no more tonight. With your permission, I will leave the question to be settled by others." And with a repetition of his former bow, the bereaved father with drew.

Orlando watched him till the door closed, then he too dropped his mask.

But it was on again, when in a little while he passed through the sitting room on his way upstairs.

No other day in his whole life had been like this to the hardy inventor; for this to both his heart and his conscience had been awakened, and his self-control was severely tried by the events of the day.

CHAPTER XXXI.

What Is He Making?

Other boxes addressed to O. Brotherson had been received at the station—boxes of the appearance of shed in the woods; and now, with closed and lifted top, the stalwart brother contemplated his stores and addressed himself to work.

He had been allowed a short interview with Oswald, and he had indulged himself in a few words with Dorcas. But he had left those moments behind with other and more serious matters. Nothing that could undermine his hand or weaken his insight should enter this spot sacred to his brother's memory. Here he was himself wholly and without fear—even with his grief on a mysterious level by means of which he would soon rule the world.

"Dead!" He Shrieked Out.

And he began work on the other characters in this drama. Oswald's sudden, shattered for a short time by his brother, had flown eastward again, in silent love and longing; while Doris, with a double dread now in her heart, went about her daily tasks, praying for strength to endure the horrors of this week, without betraying the anxieties secretly devour ing her.

She trembled and looked behind her. She had not recognized his voice. Had another entered? Had his brother dared—No, they were alone; seemingly so, that is. She knew—no one better—that they were not really alone, that witnesses were within hearing, if not, within sight.

Doris? The urged again, and this time she turned in his direction and with a shrinking gasp. Her voice were strange, what of the face which now confronted her. Two years of sickness had been marked, but they were nothing to those made in an instant by blasting grief. She was startled, although expecting much, and could only gaze into his eyes while she waited for the question he was gathering strength to utter. It was simple when it came; just two words: "How long?"

She answered them as simply:

"Just as long as you have been ill," said she; then, with an attempt to break the inevitable shock, she went on: "Miss Challoner was ill, too, and you were taken down with typhoid so the staff seems days."

"Struck dead!" was all he could say. "Struck dead! she, a young woman. Oh, Doris, do you not dare? My darling has been killed in an accident?"

"They do not call it accident. They call it what it never was. What it never was," she repeated, as she met his look with frightened hands, as he stood up, "Miss Challoner was—is not dead. How nearly the word shot had left her lips. How fiercely above all else, in that borrowed moment, she resisted the desire to fling the accusation of that word into the face of him who listened from his secret hiding-place to the words of her confession! Was he the man she loved, and declared in-Miss Challoner was struck by a wound; how given, why given, no one knows. I had rather have died myself than have to tell you that. Oh, Mr. Brotherson, speak, sob, do cry-something!"

She started back, dropping his hands as she did this. With quick intuition she saw that he must be left to himself if he were to meet this blow without succumbing. No body must have freedom if the spirit would not be quenched in despair. Even the most conscious, of his reisons from her restraining hand, albeit pushing it with he staggered to his feet, murmuring that word of doom: "Wound! wound! my darling died of a wound! What kind of a wound?" he suddenly thundered out, as all her self-command and presence of mind failed in the confused surveillance of a man who has so frequently, and with such evident sincerity, declared his innocence!

"I do that. If he's as guiltless as he says he is, my watchfulness won't hurt him. If he's not, then, Mr. Challoner, you have let out your strength with my patiences. That man is the one great mystery of the day, the most unusual fact for detection at least, there's the way.a detective looks at it."

"May heaven help your efforts!" was the solemn response, was tha dry rejoinder. Sweetwater was by no means blind to the difficulties awaiting him.

CHAPTER XXXII.

Tell Me, Tell It All.

The day was a gray one, the first of the kind in weeks. As Doris stepped into the room where Oswald sat, she felt how much a ray of sunshine would have encouraged her and yet how truly there lender skies and this dark atmosphere accorded with the gloom which soon must fall upon this hopeful, smiling man.

He looked up, and not answering because she did not hear some unusual remark of his, she took her stand by his side and then slowly and with her hands on his knees sank down upon her knees, still without speaking, almost without breathing.

"Doris, what is the child?" So wearv, eh? Nothing worse than that, I hope."

"Are you quite strong this morning? Strong enough to bear such big troubles; strong enough to bear your own if God see fit to send them?" was the answering from her lips as she watched the effect of each word, in breathless anxiety.

"Troubles! There can be but one trouble for me, and his unexpected reply. "That I do not fear—will not fear in my hour of happy recovery. So long as Edith is well—Doris! Doris! You alarm me. Edith is not—not ill?"

The poor child could not answer with her sympathetic look and her halting, tremulous breath; and these signs, he would not, could not read, as his words had made such an appeal in his ears.

"Ill! I cannot imagine Edith ill. I always see her in my thoughts, as I saw her on that day of our first meeting, a perfect, animated woman with the joyous look of a glad, harmonious nature. Nothing has ever clouded that vision. If she were ill I would have known it. We are so true now to that—Doris, Doris, you do not speak. You look at me with eyes of terror, the terror of my thoughts. Is Edith ill?"

The eyes gazing wildly into his, slowly left his face and raised themselves aloft, with a sublime look which he understand! Yes, he understood, and the cry which rang from his breast was the moment the beating of more than one heart in that little cottage.

"Dead!" he shrieked, and fell back fainting in his chair, his lips still murmuring in inarticulate agony, "Dead! dead!"

Doris sprang to her feet, thinking of nothing but his wavering, slipping life till she saw his breath return, his eyes rolll with light.

But the rest must be told; his brother started it and so did the alarmation. Further waiting, further bidding of the truth would be insupportable after this. But oh, the bitterness of it! No wonder that she turned away from those frenzied, wild-upbraiding eyes.

"Doris!"

She trembled and looked behind her. She had not recognized his voice. Had another entered? Had his brother dared—No, they were alone; seemingly so, that is. She knew—no one better—that they were not really alone, that witnesses were within hearing, if not, within sight.

The words were plain enough, but the stricken listener did not take them in. They carried no meaning to him. Her own friends gave her idea she sought to impress upon him by this seemingly careless allusion was an incredible one. She found it a fearful task to tell him the hard, bare truth.

"Your uncle," she said, "was devoted to Miss Challoner. He never wanted to marry her. I cannot keep back the fact. It is known everywhere, and by everybody but you."

The name produced its effect. He paused. made no effort to check, repeated Lenox over to himself; then suddenly lost his hold upon the idea which had been slipping from him again for it, seized it in instant of weakness and shouted out:

Poor Doris, frightened to hear very loud, looked blindly about for help but she did not quit his side; she did not dare. She had had no time to be opposed; the continuity of his thoughts had returned. He was himself, he repeated Lenox over to himself; then suddenly he had him

ADMINISTERING SANTO DOMINGO FINANCES

Statue of Santo Domingo over Columbus Tomb

W.W. Yick

The Old Cathedral of Santo Domingo

Portion of the Tomb of Columbus Within the Cathedral

By selecting Walter W. Yick of New Jersey as receiver-general of the customs of the Dominican republic President Wilson assigned him the task of confusing a novel experiment in national finance. Bankruptcies and receiverships are common enough in commercial enterprises, but the Dominican experiment is the first case in which a nation after being plunged into involuntary bankruptcy has accepted a third party, another nation to act as receiver of its revenues and stand between it and its creditors during the settlement of its outstanding obligations.

The soundness of this commercial practice as applied to governments is shown by the fact that today the Dominican republic has more money to spend for proper purposes than ever before, besides paying the interest on a loan and setting aside each year a sum for the payment of the principal. When the receivership is terminated Santo Domingo is likely to enjoy the distinction of being the only Latin American government not saddled with a burdensome foreign debt.

The United States government is the custodian of the Dominican revenues, and stands sponsor not only for the conservation of the public funds but also for the settlement of the republic's debts. This arrangement has lasting force by virtue of a treaty between the United States and the Dominican republic, in which the conditions of the receivership are set forth. Under this treaty it was that President Wilson appointed Mr. Yick as the representative of the government of the United States to administer the receivership.

Mr. Yick is not technically speaking, in any way connected with the Washington government. His salary is paid by the Dominican government. The same is true of all the expenses of the receivership. These include the salaries of a number of Americans who serve as his assistants. His own salary is $6,500 a year, and he also gets living quarters.

Mr. Yick is regarded as exceptionally well qualified for the place. One of the advantages supposed to lie in the American receivership is that the customs revenues are by it removed to neutral hands and are no longer to be spent upon by aspiring revolutionists or grafting officials. From 1905, when the first temporary arrangement went into effect, until 1916 Santo Domingo had its first long period of freedom from revolution and internal strife. The installation of the customs receipts has been regarded as the cause of this peace in the turbulent republic. In 1912 there was continued political disturbance, but even during the revolution the custom houses remained unmolested by either faction to the struggle. It will be Mr. Yick's task to continue this absolute security of the customs receipts and maintain perfect neutrality toward all the comedoffice political factions in the island.

European intervention in Santo Domingo seemed a certainty when President Roosevelt announced in behalf of the republic. The Dominican government was saddled with a floating debt domestic indebtedness amounting, with interest, to about $25,000,000. Far from paying the interest the Dominican government was increasing the debt by about a million dollars a year. As a result of centuries of misrule the revenues were being dishonestly dissipated. A succession of revolutions had reduced the government almost wholly to a course of graft for which many factions were contending. In this situation the European creditors in 1904 demanded a settlement, and were prepared to take over the revenues of the government if their demands were not granted. As the Dominicans were unable to do what they asked, European intervention seemed certain.

The United States then negotiated the modus Vivendi, which was to hold in force while a treaty was being negotiated. The treaty, under which the receivership is now conducted, was ratified by the United States senate and the Dominican congress and went into effect July 8, 1907. Meantime under the modus vivendi there had been issued bonds of the Dominican government to the amount of $20,000,000. This was for the purpose of making a settlement with the foreign creditors and paying for certain public improvements necessary to the utilization of the island resources. Though the nominal debt was $20,000,000 it was scaled down by the United States in making allowance for fraud and dishonest claims to about $17,000,000.

The bonds bear interest at 5 per cent, making the annual charge for the service of the loan $1,000,000 a year. It is provided in the treaty that each month the American receiver-general shall pay to the Guaranty Trust company of New York, the fiscal agent of the loan, the sum of $100,000. When $500,000 in excess of the annual $1,000,000 required, and the balance is applied to the amortization of the bonds. In addition it is provided that whenever the collections for any year shall exceed $2,000,000, half of the surplus shall be applied to the amortization of the bonds.

Highly satisfactory progress has been made toward the repayment of the principal of the $20,000,000 loan. Already a number of the republic have been nearly doubled under the American receivership. After the expenses of the receivership have been paid and the bond interest charges and sinking fund taken care of the Dominican government gets what is left. Far from being a hardship, the effect of the receivership has been to give the Dominican government more money for its own purposes than it ever had before, even in the days when it did not pay a cent on its indebtedness. The first real roads in the republic, outside of the towns, have been built with funds supplied by the receivership, and other public improvements have been made possible.

What the receivership has really done for the Dominican government is shown by the fact that whereas the customs receipts were only about $2,000,000 a year before the receivership, the receipts for 1912 were $4,542,891. This is the highest figure ever attained, and collections for the first four months of the present calendar year indicate that the total receipts for 1913 will exceed $4,000,000.

W. E. Pulliam, Mr. Yick's predecessor, effected many reforms in the administration of the Dominican customs which will assist Mr. Yick materially when he takes charge. It was found that one reason for the small receipts was in the dishonesty of the collectors. The men whom the American receiver expelled from the service found difficulty in understanding why they should be any objection to their modest peculations. Frequently, it was found that either men in the customs service were grafting by permitting goods to enter without duty upon payment of tribute to them. This, of course, many importers were only too glad to do.

One of the remedies for these acts of the effects of the receivership is that receipts were increased through the reduction of the customs dues. A cut of 50 per cent was made in the export duties and a reduction of 10 per cent in the import duties. The result was to increase both exports and imports.

The former receiver-general found that while such articles as champagne, silks and automobiles, which could be spared, were being admitted practically duty free, the cotton cloths, which are the staple garments of the poorer people classes, were being taxed almost 100 per cent. Mr. Pulliam induced the Dominican government to reverse this arrangement, with satisfactory effect both upon the condition of the poorer people and upon the state of the revenue.

Though Mr. Yick will be the head of the only non-political government department in all Latin America as custodian of the customs receipts; he will really be a tremendous factor in the political stability of the republic. With the American minister he is the personification of the pledge of the United States that the Dominican government shall conduct itself honorably in its financial obligations to foreigners. The office of the receiver-general and the American legation in Santo Domingo city are the bulwarks of Dominican stability, peace and good government.

As a result of this peculiar relation of the United States to the Dominican republic the Washington authorities have been obliged to take a friendly interest in the settlement of the Dominican political troubles. The rebellion which followed the tyrannical rule of Ramon Victoria and his dictator-like nephew, Alfredo Victoria—the latter a soldier who got into power in the confusion following the assassination of President Caceres—was really settled through the intercession of the United States. A commission, of which Brig. Gen. Frank McIntyre, chief of the bureau of insular affairs of the war department, was one of the members brought about the compromise by which President Victoria and his nephew retired from the government and the prelate of Santo Domingo, Archbishop Nouel, came in as temporary president, to hold office until general elections could be held. This compromise was effected last December, but a few weeks ago Archbishop Nouel relinquished his task and went to Europe in search of lost health. With out any turmoil or disorder the republic's congress elected Jote Bordas, a woman who had joined in the rebellion of 1912, to succeed the latter. Only the influence of the United States kept more trouble from breaking out upon the withdrawal of the archbishop.

The city of Santo Domingo, the capital of the republic, is full of historical associations. It was the site of one of the first settlements made in the western hemisphere by Christopher Columbus. At the entrance to the harbor stands the ancient stone fort and castle erected by Nicholas de Ovando, whom Columbus made governor of the colony. Half a mile further up the Ozama river stands a cathedral in the great trunk of which tradition says Columbus lies in state.

Just around the corner from the office which Mr. Yick will occupy are the ruins of a church established the first stone church ever built in the western world. Near by is the old plaza of Santo Domingo, stands the new cathedral, itself centuries old. In it lies a metal casket said to contain the bones of the great admiral. The Spaniards thought they took the bones of Christopher Columbus to Spain, but evidence that they took those of his brother, the former governor—

AT THE OPERA

"There were about 4,000 persons out to hear Farrar in the night I went," remarked Mrs. Grim to her husband.

"Is that so?" responded Grim "I didn't know there were so many dead people in the country."

"What are you talking about?" demanded his wife.

"One thousand people slightly dead, not alive, neither dead, dead and nothing dead."

"I don't see the point yet. 'Painful' isn't for dead people, though; parts of it are, rather horrid."

"Dullness is really an advantage at any of Wagner's hiswords. But what's the use? There are at such places of entertainment there is always a good deal than 10 every times or four persons who can hear."

"I'm sure I don't object in the least to the dead people being there. But I do object to the people who go there with the dead people. There always is a quarrel over the division of the spoils things to the dead person. The explanations are unsatisfactory, and the audience is perhaps a sort of protection against them.

"The last time I went to hear the opera I paid $5 for a seat. I was told that I was lucky in that if I was going and then every one always looked expectingly when I said no, as if I were changing my mind and went. Having paid so much for a seat, I wanted to hear the singing.

"Heaped in an old easy chair on a post and rich an ocean divan, with his chin right behind me, there were four friends with half a dozen fat ladies to her. I think she owned the theater, because was no objection to the mechanics on the part of those who were with her.

"The old lady couldn't hear a thing! Everything had to be repeated three or four times. Then then there was some one else she never did hear. I got interested in the game and wanted to take a hand. At one stage they were all trying to hand to get her to comprehend that I could hardly stand it. They didn't know how to talk to a deaf person. They didn't enunciate clearly. I was always good at elocution.

"At last, when they were all talking together, unable to get the old lady to understand, and either through stubbornness or meanness, I rose, elaborately took my seat and listened and heard them.

"'Excuse me,' I said, 'but can I be of assistance? Let me try.'

"With that I placed my two hands around my mouth and shouted loud and clear.

"'They say your dress is coming open in the back!'"

ASSAY OFFICE TO GO

Tomb of Nuptial Rings to Make Way for Progress.

Colo. ! Murray Tells of Visitors Bearing Heirlooms to Be Melted into Bullion—A Landmark of Wall Street.

New York.—A home of tragedy and high hope is going the way of all places where suffering and sorrow have centered their day. The United States assay office, after 70 years in Wall street, has to make way for the onward march of modernity.

The doors that have swung open to admit the gray visaged stranger with the shadowy purse or the" haugant stranger with the eager smile will be closed forever.

Col. John A. Murray, for 50 years the good genius of the picturesque old building, with its air of ancient dignity, is always eloquent on the romances caught in the cobwebs of its crumbling walls.

"I will say about the women, that pass its portals," I begged the colonel. "Never mind the men."

The jovial knight of Superintendent Murray jarred the sensitive scales in the weighing room.

"Well, they come with everything from a broken breastpin that belonged to their grandmother to a bag of ore," continued he of the ready tongue. "Sometimes it's a sheet song tragedy and again it is a satchel of blankets.

"Do they ever bring their engagement wedding silver to be melted after the court has decided the private affairs to the satisfaction of the parties concerned?"

"Yes, they do. Sometimes the ring is brought in right and put into condition. And owners anxious to part with wedding rings an awful shock. To believe friend husband once gave fond himself loose from the price of an eighteen carat golden circlet, only to be told it is brass disguised under a thin layer of the precious metal, is enough to make you glad you showed the gang the nothing the quickest way out.

"I will always remember the timid little woman with the faded blue eyes and the quaint gown who fluttered in one afternoon just before closing time. Out of the frayed yellow lace of her handkerchief she took a miniature, the living likenese of a handsome boy in the uniform of the '60s.

"I want you take away the gold frame, but be careful of the miniature. It's all I have left."

There wasn't enough money in the world to make the man bear with that job.

"You see, we have the sighs with the smiles, but they all go to make up a picture of life," continued the poet.

Colonel Murray says fifty years isn't such a long time.

An Abnormal Appendix.

Philadelphia.—An appendix ten inches long, believed by surgeons at the Germantown hospital here to be the longest ever removed from a living human body, was taken from Paul Hatch, 13, of Newton Center, Mass., Monday. The appendix was three times the length of the ordinary organ.

TAKING FROM RICH

How a Newly Wealthy Pittsburgh Man Was Fleeced.

Mr. Murdock Met Affable Stranger Who Published Autobiographies, and in Due Course of Time Is Separated from Much Money.

Pittsburgh, Pa.—It was in the late 80's that Pittsburgh suddenly found itself plutocratic. Iron had drawn into town from the ore fields, changed into steel in the blast furnaces, and, by a happy modern miracle, finally as gold, branded to the credit of thousands of surprised, half delirious citizens. Trade was stimulated beyond belief, spending was ruinous, beads were turned. Pittsburgh became the capital of gold.

Of course, following prosperity like Nemesis, in trooped the vultures of civilization. Crooks of all the known varieties swarmed through the town for a decade, reaping the fat harvest with an ease and a daring that were clamored half way around the world—and in particular the underworld.

The police could do much to suppress crimes of violence; it was not so simple to thwart the vultures who preyed upon the gullibility of the newly rich. Confidence games were successfully worked in as many forms as there were confidence men to invent them. I do not believe that any police officer in the world was ever confronted with as many preposterously obvious methods of separating honest men from their money.

The case of William Murdock is in point. Mr. Murdock was a pillar of the community, a man whose business ocnce had helped make Pittsburgh what it was. On a certain Saturday afternoon he emerged from a throng of barber shop and was accosted by a pleasant looking fellow outside.

"Why, Mr. Murdock, how do you do?" cried the gentleman, holding out his hand.

The benevolent financier paused, adjusted his spectacles and tried to place the young man's face. He failed, but being a firm believer in sociability, as well as the other institutions of Pittsburgh if he fell into the stranger's pocs, ventured a remark on the weather and jumped both that topic and his companion's footsteps until they reached the third street, a part of the town fairly unfamiliar to him.

"Upstairs I've got the finest history of Pittsburgh and its prominent citizens that has been written," said the tempter at that point. "Your name and your picture come first in the book. I've been looking for you for a week. Don't want to sell you the book, you know—it is not a commercial venture. Only we need another dollar or two apiece to cover cost. Won't you step up and see the proofs?"

The old gentleman wrestled with alacrity. They learned from a youth in the office that the proofs had been sent to the binder's, but were one short hour before. The conversation, extended now to three, was good, however, and continuous. Mr. Murdock had come to learn to leave before the talk drifted to lotteries, speculation and the like—a fascinating subject of which Mr. Murdock prided himself that he know no mean amount. The two men walked on to suppertime, a contraption of the chuck-a-luck variety, which Mr. Murdock was presently round himself whirling with something nearer the gambler's passion than he had known it since his tactics career.

Nothing daunted Mr. Murdock had won $5,000. The winnings in large part, at that, were due to his own safe and spread before him on the table.

"But of course we can't pay that over to you," said one of the men, "until you have some one to say that we would not have lost our money if the game had gone the other way." Five thousand dollars—not a check, you know, but the kind of bills that lie there on the counter—is no guarantee of good faith."

One of Pittsburgh's smart business men considered a moment, then patiently started out to assure the gentlemen of his character. The bank he succeeded in obtaining four $500 bond certificates and a check for of $1,500 in bills of $50 and $100 denominations and another $1,000 package of greenbacks of the same size from a gaping cashier, causing a hurried replenishment of the bank's cash from a neighboring institution. Mr. Murdock dumbed his new friend waiting for him at the bank's entrance, and together they went to the office of the Grant street office and the gambling house.

The fascinated old gentleman played again and again. Ten thousand dollars of his hard earned money—the savings of the stranger's money were the stakes on the table—in less than an hour. Mr. Murdock was informed that the cashier of the bank had failed and had deprived him of the rightful ownership of some of his deposits, and that of his $10,000 guaranty of good faith.

NOT A STORY OF TRAGEDY

Reads Like a Clipping From "Dare-devil Dick," but the Sequel Is Not an Unhappy One.

The grim, muscular looking man eyed his victim malevolently. "I have been looking forward for a long while to the time when I should have you in my power," he said relentlessly. "You probably thought yourself safe, because I kept away from you so long. You didn't you?" he went on sneeringly. "But all this while you were living in fancied security I have hided my time, knowing that sooner or later I should get you where I wanted you. And now that I have you, you are going to die and you know it!"

His voice rose, harsh, raucous, incisive. "To die! And you dare not! I purpose that others of your family shall die with you!"

He paused and regarded his victim gloatingly. The latter spoke no word nor showed signs of shrinking from the fate threatened him, although one might have fancied that he could an appealing glance at another man who stood not far away. But although the latter must have been cognizant of what was going on, he showed no disposition to interfere. Rather, he looked on with an amused, cynical expression.

"I shall waste no more time talking to you," resumed the first speaker vindictively. "I am too impatient to put an end to your miserable existence for good and all. I have you, wouldn't try to resist," he added contemptuously.

Only eight people have signified their intention to be candidates for city office in the election to be held Tuesday, Nov. 4—and Saturday is the last day for filing.

Hunt is a candidate for re-election as alderman from the second ward and will be opposed by Leo Steinert.

FALL PLOWING.

Many Advantages in Doing the Work In That Season.

No rule can be laid down for plowing that will hold for all conditions and kinds of soil, but with very few exceptions fall plowing will be followed by better crops than spring plowing. The action of the frost in disintegrating the soil particles is favorable in producing available plant food. The compacting of the soil by freezing and thawing is likely to give better moisture conditions except on extremely wet soils. Fall plowing destroys many of the weeds starting from seeds germinating early in the fall, besides destroying the nests of many injurious insects. These factors all bear on the yield of the crop.

Quite as important a reason, perhaps, for getting all the the plowing possible done in the fall is the better distribution of the labor on the farm. The planting season is short and if seeding must be held back in the spring while plowing is done, late seeding results, and in a hurry, plowing is likely to be poorly done. Late seeding on poor spring plowing means a small crop and smaller profits. Fall plowing, even as late as November 15 will save time in the spring, and is almost sure to result in better crops.—Address Boss, Agriculturalist, University Farm, St. Paul.

HOW IT WAS DONE

Minnesota Though the Agressor Lost to Nebraska—A Surprise.

Lincoln, Neb., Oct. 20.—Nebraska sprang a surprise in the football world Saturday by taking the Minnesota eleven into camp in their annual contest on Nebraska field, this afternoon, 7 to 0. The victory of the Scarlet and Cream was unexpected and few indeed were there who had the nerve to bet that they would even score.

Two beautiful forward passes brought the Scarlet and Cream victory in the third period. After the ball had exchanged hands several times, Nebraska came into possession of the ball on Minnesota's27 yard line, after 3 attempts at the Gopher line a pass, Howard to Hellgren placed the pigskin on Minnesota's 4-yard line. Another forward pass beautifully executed, Towle to Beck, gave Nebraska her score. Beck caught the ball and fought his way over the line for the only score of the game.

Minnesota gained twice as much ground as Nebraska and her defense with the exception of the-third quarter when the two forward passes were successfully executed,more than equalled, that of the Cornhuskers. Twice during the game the Minnesota backs started processions down the field toward the Cornhuskers line, only to lose the ball, once on downs and once on a costly fumble, in the shadows of the Nebraska goal posts.

Saturday's victory was the second one scored by the Cornhuskers over the Minnesota Gophers in thirteen years. The fruits of victory therefore are especially sweet to the players. The last time a Nebraska team triumphed over a Minnesota aggregation was on Northrop Field in 1902, when the score was 6 to 0.

BAND CONCERT MONDAY, NOV. 10

EXCELLENT PROGRAM BEING AR RANGED FOR FIRST INDOOR CONCERT.

The first indoor band concert of the season will be given at the Lyric theatre on Monday evening, Nov. 10. Director Brunelle is arranging a fine program for the event. Besides the usual band numbers, there will be some solos and duets, some vocal music and one or two other special stunts. There is no doubt that the program will be worth much more than the price to be charged for it.

Those people who have generously taxed themselves for support of the band will be provided with tickets. All others may get reserved seat tickets at 25 cents. Tickets will be on sale at Schreiter's drug store on Thursday, Nov. 6.

LOST TO CROOKSTON

Lost Game at Crookston Results in Defeat for Local High School Team.

The local high school played its last game of the 1913 season at Crookston and lost by the score of 45 to 0. The game was well contested during the first two periods, only two scores being made, but in the third and fourth periods, Crookston ran up the score. The playing of the local boys, with few exceptions, was not up to the standard of the previous games with Preston or Thief River Falls. For Red Lake Falls, Monette on end and Holm on the defensive excelled.

As only one man on the team graduates this year, the chances for a winning team for next year are bright.

ARISTOCRATIC BOVINES BOUGHT BY J. J. HILL

John C. Shaw is in receipt of a letter from his brother, Thomas Shaw, who is now in Europe purchasing thorough-bred cattle for James J. Hill, giving the information that many aristocratic bovines will be added to Mr. Hill's herd. The very best which can be found across the water are being selected, and the question of price is not entering into the matter to any great extent, as $2,000 has been paid for a bull, and others are being bought at correspondingly high prices.

The letter states that twenty-eight shorthorns and twelve Aryshires have been purchased, and that the writer was visiting many herds before buying the shorthorns, as he was determined to get only the best. He continues: "I am positive that we have bought the best herd of shorthorns that ever left England. The average price for them was $700, and for the Ayrshires, $250. One of the bulls cost $2,000, and was a 4-year-old at that. No one can tell us that purpose cattle cannot be bred. The highest priced cattle in England are the dual shorthorns. They bring $10,000 worth of milk per year, and at the same time produce the best of beef steers. I have secured twenty-two Oxfords and twenty-two Shropshire sheep, and Mr. Hill has cabled me to get three Angus bull, and I am starting tonight for Aberdeen, Scotland, to get them."

Before returning, Mr. Shaw will visit Holland for the purpose of obtaining a herd of Holsteins, and from there will go to France to buy French dairy cattle, a breed little known in this country.

Mr. Shaw was for several years head of the agricultural college at Guelph, Ontario, and was afterward an instructor in the University of Minnesota. He is the author of fifteen works on agriculture, many of them being used as text books in the different colleges, and is designated by James J. Hill as one of the best—if not the best—agriculturalist in America.

NARVESON GETS CHANCE.

Pitcher Well Known Here Gets Try-Out in Big League.

Alfred Narveson returned home this week from the coast, where he has been occupying the pitcher's box with the Victoria team. Alfred has been doing some very fine work, and will have a try-out with the Cincinnati team of the National League in late spring. We are glad to learn of Alfred's ability in the line and have no doubt but he will make good with the Cincinnati team.—Mcintosh Times.

COMING TO MINNESOTA.

Those Seeking Good Farms Find the Opportunity.

Minnesota is attracting thousands of homeseekers this year. The bulk of these come from the states of Iowa, Illinois and Indiana. The influx to Minnesota exhibits at the state fairs of Illinois and Indiana were particularly attractive to the framers of those states and daily people are visiting Minnesota in search of moderately priced lands, who received their first inspiration to seek a home in the North Star State, by visiting the Minnesota exhibits during their state fairs. At Illinois last week thousands of names of prospective Minnesota homeseekers were given out at the men in charge of the Springfield exhibit and literature setting forth Minnesota's great advantages as a place in which to acquire a home at moderate cost, will be mailed to them from the State Board of Immigration office at St. Paul. The people living on the territory of high priced $175 and $225 an acre land in the states above mentioned, are looking for an opportunity to secure a home where it does not require so much cash to make a start, and with an a short time there will be a large increase in the movement toward Minnesota and the moderate priced lands. In Illinois last week, at the State Fair, hundreds of farm renters and factory men visited the Minnesota exhibit booth and stated freely that they were going to take a trip to Minnesota in the near future with a view of taking advantage of the opportunities offered here for home building. All of them have some means but not enough to start a home within 160 acres of high priced lands. Commissioner Fred D. Sherman of the State Board of Immigration, who was in Illinois has shown in favor of Minnesota at the Illinois State Fair far exceeded any and all expectations.

BOAT STRUCK ICEBERG

Brave Sailors Went to Bottom—Up to Chins—But Saved All on Board.

Peter Sharkien's schooner, "Mary Ann", Fred Cyr captain and A. E. Cyr mate, about seven miles down stream, it seemed for a moment that which doesn't would be took. Then what thinking thoughts and seeing beautiful visions of dandelions and sunflowers on his lawn when he was stirred to action by the command of his superior officer. From that moment every man on board played the part of a hero and as the boat gradually settled faced the inevitable without a crease or a quiver. The brave officers owe their escape from an ice-watery grave to the fact that both are experienced navigators—expert swimmers. With their toes on the ground and their noses stuck hautily in the air they made their way to the shore and a little bit more—they tarley-trotted to shore.

Though you may get a plain "hawth" at Nelson's "tonsorial parlors," he has quit talking enthusiastically about the delights of a cold plunge.

MAYOR LEMIEUX WANTED TO KNOW

HINTED AT POLITICS IN MEETING OF THE MUNICIPAL LEAGUE.

AND HEATED DISCUSSION AND LIVELY TIME WAS THE RESULT.

(St. Paul Dispatch.)

Politics disrupted the quiet efficiency program of Minnesota League of Municipalities at its first annual session yesterday at The Saint Paul in spite of warnings by President Jenks and others. The particular bugaboo which rose up to cause consternation was the public utilities question.

At the end of his address in reply to the welcome by Mayor Herbert P. Keller, President J. R. Jenks of St. Cloud turned the members of the league against injecting partisan politics into the program.

"The life and efficiency of this organization," he said, "depends on keeping it free from partisan politics. The executive committee in arranging for speakers has requested them to discuss political questions only from the broad standpoint of public interest and civic efficiency. This is true of our program for tomorrow on public utilities."

As soon as the president had finished Dr. I. Lemieux, mayor of Red Lake Falls, securing recognition, said: "Why is it that each delegate to this convention, has received this morning a letter from the Homefield league asking us to attend one of the meetings to discuss the proposition of state control of public utilities?"

The letter was read by the chair. "This letter," said Mr. Jenks, "is sent out by W. O. Clure, secretary of the Home Rule league. It shows the partisan bias on the printed letterhead by a direct attack on Governor Eberhart. I think it is wise for the delegates to ignore the request, and let the Home Rule league take care of itself."

This was followed by loud applause.

City Attorney O. H. O'Neill of St. Paul was not content, however, to let matters rest there.

"I do not think this can be construed as an interference with the plans of our organization," he shouted. "Word has been received from Thief River that the team representing the high school of the upper city has disbanded for the season.

The shrewd "down easters" who flocked to Ohio in the early days made such good use of their wits that they were constantly suspected by their neighbors of being engaged in trickery, says Mr. Hulbert in "The Ohio River." One day one of them overtook a Dutch farmer riding to mill with a bag of grain. In one end of the bag was all the corn; in the other, to balance it across the saddle, was a stone.

"Why do you carry the stone?" asked the Yankee.

"To make a bag balance schteady," replied the Dutchman.

"But it is needed for that. Throw it away and put half the meat in each end."

"Good!" said the Dutchman, and away went the stone.

Soon afterward the other rode on ahead, and the Dutchman was left to his own musings. Ha became suspicious.

"Now, how it iss?" he asked himself. "Efterdey arranged here in de glass garrics dair grain so, mit a stone in de back. De feller has got some grain in dem. It vas a Yankee trick someveres."

Thereupon he stopped his horse, hunted up another stone and jogged contentedly on to the mill with the grain all in one end of the bag.

GAME IS CANCELLED

Thief River Falls-Red Lake Falls Contest Cancelled for Saturday Called Off.

possible it would be wise to bank only the corn needed for inside feeding.

Stockers and feeders can be very successfully fed on bundle corn. Such cattle followed by the breed sows or other stock hogs make use of the entire corn crop without waste, when fed in this form. Fattening hogs can husk a good proportion of the corn field and make good gains at the same time. They can be allowed to run in the standing corn they can profitably be finished on bundle-corn. They will waste the stover to some extent, but a portion of this can be picked up by cattle, sheep or cattle, the corn stalks are converted into manure by being worked over and trampled by the stock. While there may be a small waste of feed, there is a large saving of labor in handling the crop in this way. The problem should be studied carefully by the man who has stock to feed and if the saving in labor is greater than the loss in feed, the husking should be avoided. —Andrew Boss, Agriculturalist, University Farm, St. Paul.

FOSSTON CLAIMS THE CHAMPIONSHIP

HIGH SCHOOL FOOT BLL HONORS FOR NORTHWESTERN MINNESOTA CLAIMED.

After the Fosston high school foot ball team defeated the Thief River high school team last Saturday by a score of 72 to 0, an announcement was made claiming championship of northwestern Minnesota for the Fosston team. The Fosston boys had previously defeated Bemidji 7 to 0 and Red Lake Falls 22 to 0.

However, Fosston has not yet defeated Crookston and the Crookston boys will probably resent the claim to the championship, at least until the have been met and defeated.

HOPES TO SCARE THE OTHERS OUT

SAID TO BE REASON FOR IVERSON'S EARLY ENTRY IN RACE.

St. Paul—(Special)—With State Auditor Iverson's hat in the gubernatorial ring the sweetie pies are bothering the slingmakers is, "Who's next?" Not that they haven't a bunch, but who will actually try honors with Mr. Iverson is the thing that worries them. Sam Iverson, says a close observer, has probably learned by this time, announced his candidacy for the Republican nomination for governor some days since, and as it might be said the campaign of 1914 is launched. That Mr. Iverson might not have a monopoly of the spotlight Governor Eberhart and his backers immediately borrowed his campaign slogan of economy and efficiency and in a statement carrying the governor's endorsement announced the appointment of a committee for the reorganization of the state government along efficient and money saving lines. Both cases out simultaneously and were accorded the publicity way by the Twin City papers; each, however, according to the author's standing with the several publications. If anything his excellency had the best of position so far as "top of column next to pure reading matter" is concerned, and such is likely continue during the campaign to come. All round it was certainly a gala day for Iverson and yeast in the game is to stay out. But will they stay out is the question. In administration circles announcements by W. E. Lee of Long Prairie, James A. Peterson of Cannon Falls and Senator Elwell of Minneapolis, and even L. G. Spooner of Morris are expected. Most of course, would provide Governor Eberhart and his backers with just what they want, and still the silent little your best judgment permits you to believe that Governor Eberhart and Iverson will not be the only ones in the field. Four named would want to risk their good money on a race for something that precedents has shown them is impossible under the conditions. Perhaps this accounts for Governor Eberhart's haste.

As looked at in the nick of the woods no matter how large the field the fight for the governorship next year will be between Governor Eberhart and Mr. Iverson and it will be a fight to a finish. Governor Eberhart and Mr. Iverson and it will be a fight to a finish. Governor Eberhart is the slogan of both, with his excellency preparing to go at it in a practical way, and Mr. Iverson campaign slogan at that. Mr. Iverson, in the matter of campaign funds probably a trifle the best of it, as he is the custodian of the state books and figures will have to be at his finger ends; still Governor Eberhart is by no means weak in this respect, as he great messages have called frequent attention to the needed economy and retrenchment. As for the others the best I can figure out in their case is to do the follow the Democrats will be content to compelled to fall in line, as economy and efficiency is the war cry and the man who lands will have to adopt it as an issue. Another thing which makes Mr. Iverson the big end of the opposition he his long connection with the stockholding game. His admits to thirty-three years of public life and he has covered offices from postmaster to his present position as state auditor. Yes, it is going to be some scrap, with the big end of the wins divided between his excellency and Sam.

You fellows who bankar for Governor Eberhart's scalp, did you ever stop to think what you are up against, what you have to do, the cost and how the other fellow has the best of it at that stage of the game? Did it ever occur to you that fully one thousand persons in Minnesota hold commissions on the governor's staff, the state treasury by the grace of his excellency? Did it also ever occur to you that each of these ons thousand persons has some measure of pull or prestige in his district and that such pull will be exercised in behalf of the man who issued him his staff favor, did it ever occur to you that in Minnesota at the present time there is an organization as strong as it was in the days of yore and that organization is for the man who is in? And this is not all. I can not exactly remember but I think I can and take part for the privilege of contesting Governor Eberhart a year ago, but is was

ONE PLEASANT THING

In the work of publishing the Gazette is the fact that such a large proportion of the hundreds of subscribers keep their subscriptions paid up and many of them paid in advance.

At This Season of the Year

Statements of subscription accounts are being mailed, as is the usual custom. All those whose subscriptions are past due are urged to make remittances. While the subscription accounts are presumed to be paid in advance, that is a matter about which we do not wish to be unreasonably exacting and if there are any subscribers whose accounts are paid to date and it is not convenient for them to make the advance payment at this time, credit for a limited time will be extended.

A WORD TO DISTANT SUBSCRIBERS

The work of mailing 200 or 300 papers, each wrapped separately, to all parts of the country and in Canada, is a profitless undertaking at the best and when the accounts accumulate there is sure to be an actual loss. While it is gratifying to have so many former Red Lake county people still interested in the old home paper, the Gazette is forced to the conclusion that the only way to handle this part of the circulation is on a strictly paid in advance basis.

It is not often that an announcement like this appears in the Gazette and it is hoped that the reasonable suggestions made in the announcement will be acted upon.

LINER BURNS AT SEA ;136 PERISH; 521 ARE SAVED

Searchlight Reveal Indescribable Horror—Carmania Leads Fleet of Steamers in Work of Saving Passengers.

Liverpool, Oct. 14—One hundred and thirty-six women, children and men lost their lives when the Uranium line steamship Volturno, leased from the Royal line, caught fire in mid-Atlantic on Thursday and burned to the water's edge on Friday.

Survivor Tells Story.

The only survivor that has yet told his story says the English captain and his English officers behaved gallantly in the face of death, but declares the German and Bulgarian crews acted cowardly.

The carnonia, with one lone survivor of the Volturno aboard, arrived too rough to stop at Queenstown and is proceeding direct to Fishguard. From that survivor, however, comes a thrilling story of the burning of the steamer, of the terror, the struggles for the boats, the death of those who went over the sides and who even desperately fight for life.

Ten big liners, led by the Cunarder Carmonia, Captain Barr, stood by the sixteen ship and battled for many hours in a fierce gale to rescue the passengers and crew, but were able to take off and pick up only 521 persons.

Rescue Long Delayed.

While hundreds of passengers aboard the rescue fleet crowded the rails spellbound with horror, the captains maneuvered in desperate attempts to get alongside the Volturno, but were unable to do so until daybreak Friday.

Captain Barr then ran a lifeboat under the stern of the Volturno and took off eleven passengers. Other captains followed, and the survivors taken from the Volturno as well as those picked up in the only two Volturno lifeboats that got away during the fire were distributed among the rescuing liners.

From Thursday noon the Carmania stood by, helpless, on account of the terrific storm and mountainous waves, until early Friday. The last of the surviving passengers and crew were taken off at 9:30 a. m. Friday. The Carmania was alone with the burning liner until the Orcoser, Puret and Solidelis came up about 4 p. m. Thursday. The other seven rescue ships arrived shortly afterward.

Four Lifeboats Smashed.

While the Carmania's passengers looked on, frantic and helpless, four lifeboats lowered from the Volturno were smashed against the side of the heavily rolling ship and their passengers, including women and children, were drowned. A broken propeller of the Volturno had so fouled the tackle of the lifeboats that only six could be lowered and only two got away.

As darkness fell, the Carmania kept its powerful searchlights playing on the waters around the burning boat, looking for possible passengers that might have taken to the sea in their desperation. Captain Barr also fired our burning buoys all night to light the ghastly scene. Their light played on the poop of the Volturno and showed plainly the hopeless women, children and men huddled there throughout the night.

At midnight there was some hope aroused when the fire appeared to be dying down. Captain Barr made another attempt to get a boat to the ship, and when this failed he ran the Carmonia head-on at the port end of the Volturno's stern. It was impossible, though, to get a line aboard the wreck.

Volturno Sinks.

The fire broke out fiercely in the after engine room before dawn and when daylight came it was seen that the Volturno was sinking by the head.

The gale had abated by then and lifeboats from the rescue fleet were run alongside the burning liner, taking off the last of the survivors.

The Volturno was abandoned at 9:29 p. m. on Friday and sank a few minutes later.

The 136 missing passengers were burned to death, drowned in the assaulted boats or jumped overboard.

Officials of the Uranium company declared early that those on board included 24 cabin and 540 steerage passengers, with a crew of 92.

International Balloon Race On.

Paris, Oct. 13.—Balloons and pilots representing England, Belgium, Germany, Switzerland, the United States and France sailed away from the Tuileries Garden today in the balloon race for the International cup. France, the present cup-holder, was represented by Maurice Blenaime, Lebaine and Jean Saint-Saens. The United States was represented by H. H. Upson and Capt. H. E. Honeywell, both of whom have been making preliminary flights in their balloon for a couple of weeks.

One Killed in Auto Mishap.

Kansas City, Mo., Oct. 14—John H. Howell, a prominent real estate operator of this city, was killed, and his wife and three small children were injured when their motor car ran off a small bridge near here. Mr. Howell lost control of the car as he was ascending a steep incline approaching the bridge. The car was overturned in a creek, pinning him beneath it. Mrs. Howell and the children were thrown clear of the machine and none of them was seriously hurt.

LAST EFFORTS TO DEAL WITH HUERTA

PRESIDENT WILSON SENDS A NOTE OF DISAPPROVAL TO MEXICAN "CZAR."

MESSAGE STRONGLY PHRASED

Secretary Bryan Dispatches Message Inquiring About Safety of Imprisoned Deputies.

Washington, Oct. 18.—The United States government informed Provisional President Huerta that it looked with abhorrence and amazement upon his assumption of both executive and legislative powers in Mexico and that, in view of his course, could not regard as constitutional the election planned for Oct. 26.

Two notes, the one strongly phrased and written by Secretary Bryan, inquiring about the safety of the recently ousted members of the Madero congress, and the other drawn in formal language by President Wilson, himself, are said to constitute practically the last efforts of the Washington government to deal with the Huerta authorities by diplomatic means unless there is a decided change of spirit on the part of the officials in Mexico City.

Fair Election Hoped.

The negotiations through John Lind had proceeded to the point where the state department requested the appointment of Frederico Gamboe for the presidency as meaning the elimination of Huerta and where it was confidently hoped that a fair and free election would be held on Oct. 26. Now President Wilson has made it clear that the Washington government has seen the events of the last few days—the imprisonment of the deputies and the establishment of a dictatorship by Huerta—in the hope of scoring a constitutional election held by the Huerta regime.

The steps taken by the United States were formally communicated to all foreign governments. No diplomatic or consular officers are planned through diplomatic channels and it would not be surprising if John Lind, who has been waiting at Vera Cruz to observe the manner in which the election officials carried out their promises, should return to the United States at once.

Huerta's decree, proclaiming himself as in charge of the departments of interior, administration, finance and war, were received here yesterday and the text given out at the state department. The documents were issued after yesterday's meeting at home of the cabinet expressed themselves as satisfied at the audacity of General Huerta.

All Approve Representations.

The steps now taken by President Wilson of the nature of the two communications sent to General Huerta through Charge O'Shaughnessy, and all voiced approval of the vigorous representations. The cabinet meeting was about to adjourn when press dispatches announced that Senor Don Querido, Mexican minister of foreign affairs, had characterized the American communications as "impertinent."

Official Washington awaited the full reply being drafted by the Huerta administration. Charge O'Shaughnessy reported he had conversed both communications and had been assured with respect to the impertinent phrase, that no offense would be done to them, but they will be carried to Huerta.

It is the second note of the American government which is said to be only 106 words in length, practically breaking off negotiations with Huerta, which is believed to be the personal Foreign Minister Mehrno's description "impertinent."

Administration officials hold that with most of the members of the Mexican congress in jail, a majority member of congress who dared to speak against the Huerta administration, still mysteriously concealed, and the nearest approach to a full possible for the civilized world to believe that the Huerta group was certain of establishing a constitutional authority in the south-ern republic. They also feel that the Huerta officials are no longer deserving of such diplomatic relations as have hitherto existed.

As yet there is no concrete evidence that the Washington administration intends to use drastic measures.

Will Fight Hostile Legislation.

New Orleans, Oct. 14.—While under the head of "anti-futures," the grain dealers' national association, in convention, drawled a resolution in favor of the bill, which would prevent dealing in futures, the presidents of several state organizations gave assurance of support and made personal contributions.

Sylvia Pankhurst Arrested.

London, Oct. 18.—Sylvia Pankhurst, the central figure in a fierce struggle Monday night between the police and the militant suffragettes, was arrested when about to enter the Pankhurst town hall in suburban Bromley yesterday. The militants attempted to rescue her, but failed. Miss Sylvia was in large numbers, succeeding in placing her in a taxicab and driving to Holloway jail. The meeting was also broken in order to hold a protest demonstration outside the jail.

Mailen Accused of Manslaughter.

Bridgeport, Conn., Oct. 16.—State's Attorney Judson said that the trials of former President Mellen of the New York, New Haven & Hartford road, and former Vice President Sherry, in connection with the fatal Westport wreck, would begin at the February term of superior court, before Judge Tuttle. After the wreck more than a year ago, Mellen and Mellen Sherry were arrested, charged with manslaughter. Their cases were assigned to trial several times, but were postponed.

FIRE DRILL ON BOARD THE LOST VOLTURNO

Fire drill aboard the steamer Volturno of the Uranium line, plying between Rotterdam and Halifax and New York, which was destroyed by fire 300 miles southeast of Halifax. About 140 persons lost their lives. This picture, which was received over the Marconi wireless, shows, reading from left to right, Captain Inch of the Volturno, Captain Barr of the Carmania and Captain Lindsay, chief officer of the Volturno. Captain Barr is the central figure in the group. He is holding a megaphone. Captain Inch is standing at the left of the picture. Captain Lindsay is at the right. Captain Barr's ship, the Carmania, was the first to reach the Volturno after the fire broke out. Captain Barr's portrait is of Capt. Francis Inch of the 23,840-ton vessel, whose behavior is highly praised by the survivors.

FOUR HUNDRED MAY HAVE BEEN KILLED

921 MEN TRAPPED IN MINE EXPLOSION; BUT 500 ARE RESCUED BY WORKERS.

FIRE FOLLOWS GREAT BLAST.

No Hope Is Held Out for the Miners Still Imprisoned by Those in Charge of the Ruins.

Cerdiff, Wales, Oct. 15.—More than 400 Welsh coal miners perished, it is believed, from fire and afterdamp in the University colliery near here Tuesday. A terrific explosion shattered the works shortly after 931 men had descended into the pit.

It was at first stated that the day shift was composed of 740 men, but later the latter figure was given out by the officials. About 500 were brought to the surface alive or with slight injuries up to noon, and the managers of the mine then expressed the opinion that few, if any, further hope for those remaining below.

The rescued miners, the members of the lifesaving gangs and the officials of the mine debated this afternoon that they held out no hope for those of the miners still below.

The bodies brought to the surface were found on the east side of the mine where the ventilation remained fairly good. On the west side, where the explosion occurred fire started and the rescue parties were unable to make and progress. There are still the imprisoned.

Police Keep Back Relatives.

The officials of the mine found it necessary to call a detachment of police to keep back the women and children from the pits. They found the entrances in hope of obtaining some news of their dead.

Most of the rescued men were suffering from burns, shocks or the effects of poisonous gases.

Colonel Pearson, chief inspector of mines, said: "The fire is in the intake airway and everything is being done to cope with it. We are hoping for the best."

The day shift of 740 man descended the shafts in the cages at 2 a. m. An hour afterward a deafening report brought the inhabitants of the village of the mine running to the pit head. They were then hunting and laid a molding mechinery at the top of the shafts but there was no sign of an explosion of great violence. A man who had been working sixty feet away had been precipitated by the force of the blast.

The same pit was the scene of an explosion thirteen years ago, when 120 miners met their fate. Only one of those below at that time was rescued, alive.

Railroads Finish Their Case.

New York, Oct. 14.—The record for the eastern railroads concluded their case in rebuttal before the referee, Judge that is arbitrating the wage demands of 60,000 trainmen and conductors. The two sides will submit briefs and final arguments will be heard, if necessary.

Child Kills Child of Pal.

Ironwood, Mich., Oct. 15.—Harry Strike, chief of police at Jessieville, was shot and killed by a 6-year-old boy, upstairs over a saloon. Some men came in from hunting and had a shotgun on the table. The little boy, seeing the gun, took it up and walked into the next room where Chief Strike and some other men were sitting and, pointing the gun, pulled the trigger. The charge entered Strike's brain, death being instantaneous. An inquest returned a verdict of accidental shooting.

Child Welfare Congress Opens.

Washington, Oct. 15.—Dr. H. McKenney, for 35 years clerk of the supreme court of the United States, died at his Maryland home on the outskirts of Washington, from a complication of diseases, from which he had been long a sufferer. His death ended a service of 55 years in the supreme court, beginning as deputy marshal. He had administered the oath to all members of the court since 1880, and officiated at the inauguration of all the presidents except President Wilson.

MAY BAR MRS. PANKHURST

MUST WAIT FOR TEST OF DESIRABILITY.

British Suffragette to Be Detained at Ellis Island While the Authorities Ponder.

Washington, Oct. 15.—When Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst, the militant British suffragette, arrives on the liner La Provence this week, probably Friday, she will be detained at the Ellis Island immigrant station, according to present plans, until a special board of inquiry can determine whether she comes within the class of aliens excluded from the United States. While the immigration authorities have issued no orders for her detention, scores of protests against her admission, lodged with immigration headquarters here and with the local authorities at New York, leave no other course open to the authorities.

Officials say that no protest against Mrs. Pankhurst's admission have been received from the "Society opposed to woman suffrage," or from any of its members on behalf of the organization.

A record of Mrs. Pankhurst's activities, her arrests and imprisonments has been furnished to the authorities at New York. Upon that and upon a hearing, the immigration authorities will decide if any of the suffrage leaders' acts have been such as to debar her from the United States. A principal question is the statement that Querido, Mexican minister of foreign affairs, had characterized the American communications as "impertinent."

Official Washington awaited the full reply being drafted by the Huerta administration. Charge O'Shaughnessy reported he had conversed both communications and had been assured with respect to the impertinent phrase, that no offense would be done to them, but they will be carried to Huerta.

It is the second note of the American government which is said to be only 106 words in length, practically breaking off negotiations with Huerta, which is believed to be the personal Foreign Minister Mehrno's description "impertinent."

Administration officials hold that with most of the members of the Mexican congress in jail, a majority member of congress who dared to speak against the Huerta administration, still mysteriously concealed, and the nearest approach to a full possible for the civilized world to believe that the Huerta group was certain of establishing a constitutional authority in the southern republic. They also feel that the Huerta officials are no longer deserving of such diplomatic relations as have hitherto existed.

As yet there is no concrete evidence that the Washington administration intends to use drastic measures.

PHILADELPHIA TAKES SERIES

Win From New York Giants Saturday and Speedily Close World Contest.

New York, Oct. 12.—The New York Giants stood in their last line of entrenchments Saturday and with their backs to the wall, fought valiantly in one action, lost by a 3 to 1 score to the stunning attack of the Philadelphia Athletics, who needed but one more victorious charge to make them world's champions of 1913.

With all his pitching artillery shattered, the Athletics' leading pounding Manager McGraw was forced to send his lone pitching star, Mathewson, to the firing line with only two days' rest, on his return from the Cotton Mack.

Thirty-five thousand or more persons, undismayed by the herculean task of the Giants, were out to view the battle. The gloomy weather kept the Philadelphia crowd down to a small number, but those enthusiastic few sat behind the Athletics' bench and never missed an opportunity to cheer their team.

The baseball league supporters took but one game, the second one of the series.

George Oblinger and Frank Lenard managed to row the boat saved their lives by clinging to the overturned skiff. All the bodies were recovered shortly after the accident occurred.

Boston Mayor Asks Page's Recall.

Boston, Oct. 14—The recall from England of Ambassador Page was urged by Mayor Fitzgerald in a Fanueil hall address on the ground that the ambassador was imprudent and had "sacrificed truth in order to cater to English nobility." The mayor characterized as "arrant nonsense" a statement credited to Mr. Page at Southampton to the effect that United States is still English and English ruled "No particular blood can lay claim to leadership in this country," said Fitzgerald.

TESTIMONY FAVORS BEILISS

PROSECUTION IN KIEV MURDER TRIAL WEAKENS.

Unable to Produce Man Who Alleged That the Defendant Plotted the Poisoning.

Kiev, Oct. 14.—The trial of Mandel Beilis, charged with the murder of the 13-year-old boy, Andrew Yushinsky, has been continued. Beilis's counsel to be regaining confidence and several times during the course of the sitting, he smiled at his wife.

An interesting witness was a cobbler named Nekonetchny. It had been alleged that Beilies had made an attempt to have Nekonetchny and another men named Shakovsky poisoned. The prosecution, however, failed to produce Nekonetchny and the witness told the police that Beilies had bribed him to administer poison to these two men.

Nekonetchny withstood hesitation, gave testimony favorable to Beilies, whom, he said, he had known for ten years and had no reason to dislike. He declared that the children in the neighborhood of the boy believed when Beilies was employed installing electricity in Shakovsky and the Tchebrinkin children, who were playing in the brickyard after the autumn of 1910, owing to the building of a palisade around it.

Moreover, he asserted, the whole district would know if Beilies had been seen dragging Yushinsky toward the cave.

The second man, Shakhovsky, also was put on the stand. He admitted that when he was under the examining magistrate and had made statements against Beilies, he was under the influence of liquor. He affirmed that he had been intimidated by detectives to produce evidence against Beilies.

The Ohio senators assured him it was doubtful if he would be heard and he started back to Massillon, Ohio.

VOLTURNO CAPTAIN TELLS HIS STORY

NARRATIVE OF SEA DISASTER IS WIRED TO SHIP'S OWNERS AT NEW YORK.

IS A PLAIN SEAMAN'S TALE

Death List of 136 Is Confirmed by Man Who Quit Vessel Last—Doesn't Tell How Fire Started.

New York, Oct. 16.—Captain Francis Inch, whose steamer, the Volturno, was burned at sea with the loss of 136 lives, has just told his story of the disaster. It is a plain seaman's tale, but in it, line by line, the horrors of the disaster and the terrible ordeal through which passengers and crew gained are brought out all the more clearly, perhaps because of the purged directness and simplicity with which the story is told.

One Omission Apparent.

From its beginning, where the outbreak of the fire which spelled the doom of the Volturno is recorded, the narrative runs without apparent omission of any salient fact, but one, to the point where the blazing ship was abandoned, the last remaining passenger taken off, and the captain and what was left of the crew boarded the waiting liners.

Captain Inch, however, does not say what caused the fire, reporting simply that the chief officer advised him at 10 minutes before 7 o'clock on Oct. 8 of the startling news and that five minutes later the flames had burst through the forward hatches and were rapidly spreading.

Tells Tale When Reported.

Although all possible measures were taken to subdue the fire the captain's story shows that it was even then too late to save the watch below. The fire spread with such unforeseen and burned to death there their fellow sailors helpless to aid them.

Then came explosions which wrecked one of the middle section of the steamer. The situation was then absolutely desperate.

The call for help by wireless had gone out as soon as the flames shot through the forward hatches, and the crew was doing its fighting best to keep the progress of the blaze until assistance should come. It looked from all those who had no possible chance to save the ship, and although the winds were running high and the Volturno was rolling heavily the captain had boats provisioned and swung clear.

Captain Francis Inch of the Volturno sends the story of the disaster by wireless from the Kroonland, on which he is being brought to this port, to the officers of the Uranium line here.

Ships Grounded and One Life Lost in Wind Storm on New England Coast.

Boston, Oct. 16.—A northeast gale swooped down upon the coastwise shipping on the New England coast, beginning Tuesday and ran its course. Heroic rescues kept the known loss of life to one, that of Captain Sears Perry of Stockton, who perished in the wreck of his schoo boat on Rockaway beach.

The barge Sumner R. Mead, in tow of the tug Pauline from New York for Boston, piled up on the tip of the Cape Cod arm, and three men were taken off by the Paoli.

HEPBURN FLAYS MONEY BILL

SAYS MEASURE IS PURELY POLITICAL AFFAIR.

National Currency Reform Meeting in New York Hears Congressman.

New York, Oct. 16.—Declaring that the Owens-Glass currency bill now before congress was drawn in a vicious and crudled in politics since its inception," A. Burton Hepburn, chairman of the Chase National bank of New York, attacked the Wilson administration measure. Mr. Hepburn was one of the speakers at the national conference on currency reform. At the conference, leading figures in the administration "fight for the currency bill clashed with those opposed to the measure."

Senator Robert L. Owens, sponsor in the senate for the currency bill; Representative Carter Glass, who led the fight for the bill in the house, and Representative Robert J. Bulkley of Ohio, member of the house committee on banking and currency, defended the administration plan. Arthur Reynolds of Des Moines, president of the American Bankers' association, and Mr. Hepburn spoke for the bankers opposed to the bill. Representative Glass made an address but at first declined to attend and his speech was read.

"I am not especially fearful of political conflict," said Mr. Hepburn, turning aside from his personal speech to emphasize his point. "I am not more especially fearful of incompetent control. But inasmuch as this bill has been in a manner and credited in politics from its inception, business men, bankers and the public in general may be pardoned for having some misgivings, whether politics may not have a part in its management."

Senator Owen predicted its unqualified success and expressed the opinion that virtually every bank in the country would join it. Mr. Reynolds replied by saying that he had attended a recent conference of 600 country bankers in Boston and that they were united in their unwillingness to join the new association.—proposed.

In his home state, he said, he had talked with many bankers, and not one of them had expressed willingness to join the scheme.

If the canon is enacted as proposed, each group of dioceses and missions, will have its own provincial council.

COMMITTEE NAMED TO PLAN REFORMS

GOVERNOR EBERHART SELECTS THIRTY THROUGHOUT STATE FOR IMPORTANT TASK.

TO REPORT TO LEGISLATURE

Executive Asks Commission of Citizens to Devise Reorganization of State Departments and Make Recommendations.

St. Paul.—Governor A. O. Eberhart has just announced the appointment of a commission of thirty citizens on reorganization of the state departments and boards, for "greater economy and increased efficiency."

The announcement, according to George F. Authier, the governor's secretary, had been contemplated for some time, was prepared last week and has just been released by the governor for wire from Indianapolis.

Task of Commission.

The thirty commissioners named by Governor Eberhart face the following task:

1. To frame a plan for reorganizing state departments and boards, to secure greater economy and efficiency in administration.

2. To prepare a budget system for making appropriations.

3. To plan correlation of various boards and departments under a state department of agriculture.

4. To concentrate other branches under a department of public domain.

The commission named includes three senators, F. E. Putnam, John Noonan and J. D. Sullivan, the latter two being Democrats, and three house members, Thomas Kneeland, H. H. Dunn and L. C. Spooner. The membership is largely composed of business men, with several agricultural experts. It is a nonpartisan commission, and includes several Democrats; also several men who have been hostile to the governor politically.

To Report to Legislature.

The governor asks the commission named to frame a scheme for reorganization to be submitted to the next legislature. The proposed was before the last legislature and was the subject of much discussion. The lower house failed to agree on the method of appointing such a committee until late in the session, and the senate failed to act. The disagreement was whether the committee should be named by the legislature or by the governor. As no provision was made, the commission will have to serve without funds and depend on the next legislature for reimbursement.

In his statement, the governor urges creation of a state department of agriculture, the rearrangement of departments to avoid waste and duplication, and the adoption of a budget system for appropriation.

Personnel of Board Named.

Governor Eberhart's commission on reorganization of state departments is composed of:

C. P. Craig, chairman, Duluth; C. J. Congdon, Duluth; Theodore Wold, Minneapolis; W. W. Mayo, Albert Lea; F. H. CHILD KILLS 2; INJURES 1

Gun in Hands of 7-Year-Old Is Responsible for Death of Mother and Sister.

Cloquet.—County Coroner Dr. Franklin Salter received information from his deputy coroner at Cromwell of the death by accidental shooting of Mrs. Ivird Markkula and her 18 year-old daughter, Lempi. The family lives on a farm three miles from Cromwell.

The seven-year-old son got hold of a gun and took it to the porch, where he put into it a shell loaded with buckshot. The gun was discharged, the load going through the kitchen and striking the mother in the head. Another boy, 11 years old, standing beside his mother, was wounded in the thigh.

Many were met at Lakefield by automobiles and escorted across country to Sioux Valley, accompanied by the Lakefield brass band. National Grand President Clausen of St. Paul and National Grand Secretary Anker of Minneapolis were present. A banquet was served.

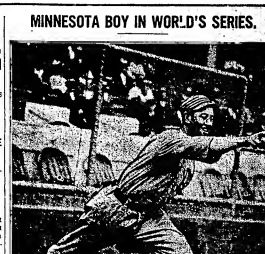
MINNESOTA BOY IN WORLD'S SERIES.



Bush, an inexperienced pitcher, so far as world-series games go, and only recently recruited from a Brainerd, Minn., "bush" league, did marvelous work in the world series of one great series between the Philadelphia Athletics and the New York Giants. Although the youngster had been pitching good ball for the Philadelphia aggregation all year, he had never been reckoned as a possibility on the pitching staff of the American league team during the world series. The one with which he won his game shows that foxy Connie Mack put one over on the fans by keeping his estimate of the rolling "phenom" a secret. When the news of Bush's remarkable work reached Brainerd thousands of fans turned out and celebrated the occasion by building a huge bonfire in the down-town business section.

EDWARDS CALLS STORY FALSE

ST. PAUL MILLIONAIRE SURRENDERS TO FEDERAL COURT.

Voluntarily Appears in Chicago, Is Released on Five Thousand Dollars Bail.

Chicago, Ill., Oct. 10.—William Rockefeller Edwards, millionaire St. Paul lumberman, who is under indictment for violations of the Mann act, appeared before Federal Judge Carpenter and gave a bond of $5,000.

Mr. Edwards was not formally arrested, but surrendered himself to the court. The office of the United States marshal, through an oversight, was not notified of Mr. Edwards' presence in Chicago and the bench warrant remained unserved on the marshal's desk. No date was set for further proceedings. Mr. Edwards merely stood himself up to the court and these being immediately released on a bond which was signed by the Illinois Surety company. The proceedings took a few moments.

Mr. Edwards appeared in court with his attorney, Hobart P. Young. The government was represented by Assistant District Attorney Harry A. Fergus, who will have charge of the prosecution of the case. It was at Mr. Fergus's suggestion that a bond of $5,000 was fixed. Mr. Young said that he had no objection to make to the amount and that the Illinois Surety company was offered and accepted.

Mr. Edwards was indicted on the strength of charges made by Miss Ada M. Cox, a stenographer formerly in the office of the Shelby County Coal company, at Shelbyville, Ill. Miss Cox declared her transports, to the number of 8,000, were used instead of lumber.

The millionaire was asked what he had to say relative to the charges which have been brought against him. He avoided them all.

"The story, as I understand, the girl told before the federal grand jury," said Mr. Edwards, "is false in every respect. It is a fabrication of fancy. The story she has told is the same as that on which she based her suit against me in St. Paul more than a year ago. There is absolutely no foundation for it. She has told it in an attempt to extort money from me. She did it in the form of promise suit which she brought against me and now she has gone before the federal grand jury and told the same set of lies. Her sod to view is the same as that where she brought her suit for money from me."

Accused of Bigamy.

Mrs. Edwards, Mrs. Young, his client had not registered at any hotel and would return to St. Paul in the evening.

Mrs. Edwards, who came here to obtain a divorce from her husband, was married to Mr. Edwards in St. Paul more than a year ago. She

The tariff bill is a law and still there is no indication of a business disturbance—and it costs just about as much to live.

Mrs. Pankhurst is about to do what many another bad eater has done—take certain women from her methods of warfare might be emulated. She simply craves the privilege of talking about her performances at home, which amounts to a frank statement that she is here "for the money."

The world series is a great event in athletics because it is real sport and base ball as near the sand lot variety as it is possible to make it. Instead of being part of the "organization" of base ball is is somewhat removed from the business of the game which has been quite appropriately described as "white slavery". The players get the lion's share of the gate receipts and consequently they are all after the "bacon" and "play for blood"— just like they used to back home—in the great delight of the enthusiastic fans.

It won't do any good for any political spellbinder to demand that Sam Iverson resign his present place to make the campaign for the republican nomination for governor. Sam saw the possibility of such a demand first and made a part of his declaration of principles the statement that he is going to stay right on the job.

While people were talking and thinking about little else than the world series, Minnesota went and handed the chances for the foot ball championship to a bunch of Nebraska cornhuskers.

It is probably well that the supreme court has decided that a man's wife is a human being, since there are so many beasts in human form who treat their wives as if they were anything but human.

The Wadena Pioneer Journal, always on excellent paper, has been improved by a column being added to each of its pages. The Pioneer Journal is now a seven-column eight-page paper—and "every inch a newspaper."

Julian Hawthorne, son of a famous father, who has just been released from prison, says, "jail is hell." It is not probable that the statement will make him famous, for no doubt very few people have considered that jail life is particularly enjoyable.

Mrs. Pankhurst is not here to own suggest that certain women had her methods of warfare might be emulated. She simply craves the privilege of talking about her performances at home, which amounts to a frank statement that she is here "for the money."

To have, or not to have, a public utilities commission is to be the paramount issue" in the next campaign, according to Governor Eberhart and the most pronounced opponents of his legislative program. On that point they are in full accord. Neither however, seems to realize the fact that the public generally doesn't care a pinayune whether we have a state public utilities commission or not. It remains to be seen whether or not they will be able to awaken any general interest in the question between now and the next election.—Warren Register.

Good Roads Prevent Disease.

Few persons, on first thought, would see any possible connection between good roads and good health. Yet the State Board of Health of Kansas says that good roads can and will prevent disease. How? By the removal of weeds and trash. Weeds and trash prevent the prompt evaporation of moisture, and promote the retention of ground water. This makes ideal breeding spots for mosquitoes, flies and other insects, where they leave a disease carrying insects, not to mention chinch bugs, hoppers and other insects which are crop dampers. Furthermore, an undergrowth of weeds invites the dumping of garbage and manure by offering concealment, of which fact careless and thoughtless people are prone to take advantage, thus increasing the facility of insect breeding and providing these insect carriers with proper material for disease transmission. Good roads also prevent disease by providing good drainage. Many farms have no means of drainage except by drainage along roadways. Open ditches, clear of brush and debris, with hardened surface and proper fall, afford these farms the opportunity of ridding themselves of many a stagnant pool. The removal of weeds, proper road grading, surface hardening and ditching insures prompt drainage of all pool, ditch and surface water, removing the possibility of insect breeders, for none can multiply without moisture. Besides this is to itself destructive of insect larvae, especially mosquitoes—a well known fact. Dry roads offer no protection, and notably child ren who are compelled to walk to and from schoolday shoes and feet. While colds are due to specific germs, yet it is a well known fact that cold, wet feet and clothed limbs lower the resistance of individuals which are then more favorable subjects for infections of the respiratory passages, including pneumonia and tuberculosis. Good roads prevent disease by setting an example to adjoining farm premises. Good roads promote travel and set an example to the farmer whose premises are bordered and by them. The comparison of a well graded, clean highway with an unkempt and grassy barnyard adjoining is sufficient to stimulate every landowner to a clean-up. Pride compels him to offers to passers-by a neat-appearing and attractive house and barnyard. Results are only too obvious. Good roads are native disease prevention agencies, aside from their financial and commercial value. —American Medical Journal.

The big interests are clamoring for penny postage. Those are gratis and grafts.—Warren Register.

The responsibility for the existence and success of mail order dealers in general merchandise in the United States rests largely on the retail merchants of the country. This is a unpleasant truth and many thousands of merchants rightly disclaim any share of the blame for those conditions that have brought about catalog merchandising, but the disreputable fact remains that the magnificent type of country stores is the root of the evil. The merchant is in the business to serve the consumer. If he serves the consumer well and gives ample progressive merchandising methods, if he has the right goods at the right prices, and satisfies, he will be successful. The mail order house does not offer the efficient merchant.—Exchange.

Show us a town where the home paper has little or no store news advertising the live wire business—and we'll show you a DEAD TOWN. Every dead town needs positively do buy advertised goods. There is no argument about that and if the home town does advertise their wares in an intelligent and earnest way as though they meant it the people will send away for many merchandise. Any store that does any business can do more business by right advertising. Don't take it from me but study the advertising in the city papers. That advertising has built cities. Do you get this?—Aitkin Republican.

HOPES TO SCARE THE OTHERS OUT

sary thousands of dollars. What Governor Eberhart refers to is only a fraction of the whole, but it was effective. The court is still in session and what those who seek his scalp can spend their time to only limited by "their pocketbooks. A million dollars and not a limit, but I am afraid that particular love is not second to that in the Bible in the observance.

Whether or not the last legislature increased the salary and emoluments of the state officers will not likely be aired in the courts. With Speaker Rines a prospective candidate for this office the question has been raised and the only way to settle it is to carry it to the courts. If an increase is shown Mr. Rines and other members of the legislature will be out in the cold. When the question of salaries was up for adjustment before the legislature that of state auditor was fixed at $4,000. He had been getting $4,200 a year as salary and $400 for acting as a clerk to one of the commissions. Some persons now hold that the combining of the two increased the salary of the auditor. The question is a technical one and from what I hear Mr. Rines is not worried about the outcome. Friends say he has had legal advice on the matter.

Though the governorship has first place in things political the ensuing title time is not going to be confined to the head of the state. Gov. Eberhart's present job is due to receive the attention of a great many men and, while in the case of the several congressional districts practically every incumbent has a rival in sight, Henry Rines of Mora will be the big end of the race for state auditor. His candidacy was launched fully a year ago. He is due to have company, though, and it will probably be found in the person of either Andrew Friis, the present state public examiner, or J. J. Manfield, late state immigration commissioner. The two latter, I am told, have the best wishes of the state administration. In the matter of congress Senator Lende of Canby is said to have designs on Congressman Volstead's job. Another talked of is Tom Davis of Marshall. That Register Johnson of Chisago will seek the official scalp of Congressman Hamilton is already announced, while as to Congressman Lindbergh of the sixth district more than one rival is being groomed. It is more than possible that Congressman Stevens of St. Paul will again have to fight to hold his job, and that Congressman Smith of Minneapolis may have a reckon with the usual opposition goes without saying. There is talk of opposition to Secretary of State Schmahl and State Treasurer Smith, but it will avail little. These two are fairly safe.

Senator Johnson's announced intention of trying swords with Congressman Frazahen is of more than ordinary interest, because the fight will be confined to a new district, the Tenth, and at the same time will lay the foundation for a political career, which, if properly handled, will insure the winner a job for some years to come. By all the rules of war Manahan should have the best of it, and he has on a way, because he is

The responsibility for the existence and success of mail order dealers in general merchandise in the United States rests largely on the retail merchants of the country. This is a unpleasant truth and many thousands of merchants rightly disclaim any share of the blame for those conditions that have brought about catalog merchandising, but the disreputable fact remains that the magnificent type of country stores is the root of the evil. The merchant is in the business to serve the consumer. If he serves the consumer well and gives ample progressive merchandising methods, if he has the right goods at the right prices, and satisfies, he will be successful. Good Roads Prevent Disease.

Few persons, on first thought, would see any possible connection between good roads and good health. Yet the State Board of Health of Kansas says that good roads can and will prevent disease. How? By the removal of weeds and trash. Weeds and trash prevent the prompt evaporation of moisture, and promote the retention of ground water. This makes ideal breeding spots for mosquitoes, flies and other insects, where they leave a disease carrying insects, not to mention chinch bugs, hoppers and other insects which are crop dampers. Furthermore, an undergrowth of weeds invites the dumping of garbage and manure by offering concealment, of which fact careless and thoughtless people are prone to take advantage, thus increasing the facility of insect breeding and providing these insect carriers with proper material for disease transmission. Good roads also prevent disease by providing good drainage. Many farms have no means of drainage except by drainage along roadways. Open ditches, clear of brush and debris, with hardened surface and proper fall, afford these farms the opportunity of ridding themselves of many a stagnant pool. The removal of weeds, proper road grading, surface hardening and ditching insures prompt drainage of all pool, ditch and surface water, removing the possibility of insect breeders, for none can multiply without moisture. Besides this is to itself destructive of insect larvae, especially mosquitos—a well known fact. Dry roads offer no protection, and notably child ren who are compelled to walk to and from schoolday shoes and feet. While colds are due to specific germs, yet it is a well known fact that cold, wet feet and clothed limbs lower the resistance of individuals which are then more favorable subjects for infections of the respiratory passages, including pneumonia and tuberculosis. Good roads prevent disease by setting an example to adjoining farm premises. Good roads promote travel and set an example to the farmer whose premises are bordered and by them. The comparison of a well graded, clean highway with an unkempt and grassy barnyard adjoining is sufficient to stimulate every landowner to a clean-up. Pride compels him to offers to passers-by a neat-appearing and attractive house and barnyard. Results are only too obvious. Good roads are native disease prevention agencies, aside from their financial and commercial value. —American Medical Journal.

sary thousands of dollars. What Governor Eberhart refers to is only a fraction of the whole, but it was effective. The court is still in session and what those who seek his scalp can spend their time to only limited by "their pocketbooks. A million dollars and not a limit, but I am afraid that particular love is not second to that in the Bible in the observance.

Whether or not the last legislature increased the salary and emoluments of the state officers will not likely be aired in the courts. With Speaker Rines a prospective candidate for this office the question has been raised and the only way to settle it is to carry it to the courts. If an increase is shown Mr. Rines and other members of the legislature will be out in the cold. When the question of salaries was up for adjustment before the legislature that of state auditor was fixed at $4,000. He had been getting $4,200 a year as salary and $400 for acting as a clerk to one of the commissions. Some persons now hold that the combining of the two increased the salary of the auditor. The question is a technical one and from what I hear Mr. Rines is not worried about the outcome. Friends say he has had legal advice on the matter.

Though the governorship has first place in things political the ensuing title time is not going to be confined to the head of the state. Gov. Eberhart's present job is due to receive the attention of a great many men and, while in the case of the several congressional districts practically every incumbent has a rival in sight, Henry Rines of Mora will be the big end of the race for state auditor. His candidacy was launched fully a year ago. He is due to have company, though, and it will probably be found in the person of either Andrew Friis, the present state public examiner, or J. J. Manfield, late state immigration commissioner. The two latter, I am told, have the best wishes of the state administration. In the matter of congress Senator Lende of Canby is said to have designs on Congressman Volstad's job. Another talked of is Tom Davis of Marshall. That Register Johnson of Chisago will seek the official scalp of Congressman Hamilton is already announced, while as to Congressman Lindbergh of the sixth district more than one rival is being groomed. It is more than possible that Congressman Stevens of St. Paul will again have to fight to hold his job, and that Congressman Smith of Minneapolis may have a reckon with the usual opposition goes without saying. There is talk of opposition to Secretary of State Schmahl and State Treasurer Smith, but it will avail little. These two are fairly safe.

Senator Johnson's announced intention of trying swords with Congressman Frazahen is of more than ordinary interest, because the fight will be confined to a new district, the Tenth, and at the same time will lay the foundation for a political career, which, if properly handled, will insure the winner a job for some years to come. By all the rules of war Manahan should have the best of it, and he has on a way, because he is in office, but there are rocks ahead and these rocks represent his vote on the present tariff bill. Jim probably forget that when he ran amiss the district he would want to represent would be a country one and that to this particular district the potato is king. Well, as the new tariff till reads, potatoes are free and Jim helped put them there. Then there are other things, too, on the free list, things and products peculiar to the North Dakota district, and Jim helped put them there, so you see it is not entirely clear sailing for Mr. Hanahan. Senator Johnson is aware of this and when the campaign opens he is not going to forget it. Even here Johnson looks a good bet to the kingmakers.

When the last legislature put across the intent in primary laws, known as the nonpartisan election act, it failed to take any notice of a change in dates for registration of the voters, but Attorney General Smith says there is no need for alarm. The new law picks June as the last date for holding primaries, while it was September under the old law. Registration of the voters, he says, will continue, only that instead of a later date it will be earlier.

Country banks throughout the state having quite money in their vaults are handling it up and forwarding the same to State Treasurer Smith. Mr. Smith needs it to pay the October distribution of state school money, which is to be paid out of it when all of the banks have had these state deposits less than two months and their withdrawal does not please them. When given the deposits, however, the banks were notified that the money would be needed at an early date.

How would you like to have $21,000,000 out at interest and enough in bank to keep you going so that as the interest fell rolled around you could reinvest the earnings? Minnesota has that amount at the present time and it is putting the interest back into loans as fast as it can be collected. At the close of business last week the state had loaned to municipalities alone nearly $17,000,000 and on this amount it was receiving 4 per cent interest. State Treasurer Smith expects to see the figure at the $20,000,000 mark within the next two weeks.

A ONE MAN CRUSADE

By M. QUAD

Copyright, 1913, by Associated Literary Press.

Just before graduating for the ministry Reuss Stevens spent four days in the town of Newbern as a part of his vacation.

Mr. Stevens found a political boss and a political ring in the town.

He found one-half too many saloons for a town of its population.

He found the sheriff of the county and his deputies and the constable in cahoots with the tough element.

The justice of the peace was the keeper of a saloon and passed drinks over the bar, and he protected his own sort when it came to legal troubles.

"Why don't you do something?" he asked of a merchant of the town who was a representative of the better element.

"And get boycotted and driven into bankruptcy?" was asked in return.

"Is it as bad as that?"

"The gang has us by the neck and ties us scared. We have no leader."

A few weeks later, when ready to take up his ministerial duties, Mr. Stevens asked to be sent to Newbern.

"But we have a minister there," was replied.

"But he has lost nearly all of his congregation."

"Yes, the reports from that parish are not at all cheering, and I believe Brother Baker would welcome a transfer. You know it's one of the hardest towns in the state."

"I have spent four days there."

"The cause of religion is reported as very lukewarm."

"I didn't know that there was any there at all," smiled the minister.

"Well, you'll be appointed to the place. I hope you may stir things up."

The Rev. Mr. Stevens arrived. He started out with a sermon that jolted and jarred. He spared neither Christian nor sinner. While he criticised the former for lack of backbone, he plainly told the latter that the crisis had come. The crisis meant decency and reform without any shams about it. After the sermon he inquired to talk with members of his congregation. He found them looking forward with great timidity. If he started a crusade he must not expect any active help from them. They were thoroughly cowed.

"This is to be a one man crusade," he summered them. "I did not expect your aid, and so I'm not disappointed."

Monday morning he began operations. Mr. Stevens visited the sheriff, and, without any beating around the bush, he said:

"Sheriff, I am the new minister."

"Yes?"

"I am going for your crowd teeth and toe nail."

"Why do you call it my crowd?" was asked.

"Because it is. There are violations of the law every hour of the day, and you stand by without interference. You drink in every saloon, and you comrade with every lawbreaker. It's the same with your deputies and the constables. It's got to stop. You have got to do your sworn duty."

"Another reformer struck the town, eh?" was the insulting reply.

The sheriff went from saloon to saloon and laughed at the reformer and said there should be no interference from him. Within two weeks he was removed and another man named by the minister was in his shoes. The citizens of Newbern were stunned. It seemed incredible.

The Rev. Mr. Stevens visited the justice in his saloon and said:

"It's for you to enforce the law, and here you are doing the lawbreaking. The others are depending upon you to dismiss any complaint made against them. What course are you going to take?"

"None of your business!"

The next day the minister complained of nine saloons which had violated the law. Each and every one was dismissed. Inside of twenty days the old justice was out and a new one in.

There were ordinances against Sunday sports. They had not been enforced in five years. They came to the front now. No more baseball or horse racing.

"Beat the meddler up!" was whispered, and a stake purse was made up to reward a scrapper for doing it.

He started out with great ardor to make a two minute job of it, but it lasted only half that time. The minister knocked him out with a jab on the jaw and then had him arrested and fined for disorderly conduct.

Then a public meeting was called at a hall, and the minister did some tall talking. He got heart into the decent citizens so strongly that they came out boldly to his support, and the opposition saw that their cause was lost.

One thing more. The Rev. Mr. Stevens let his pulpit rebuke the citizens of Newbern as they had never heard a minister rebuke before. They owed a duty to God and to man. They must show up on at church, whether they were Christians or not. The Sunday school must be resurrected. There must be church work. Religion and politics must mix until every office in the county was filled by a decent man. The devil had had possession of Newbern long enough. Now he must be knocked down and drenched out.

There was no devil there a year later. A crusader stepped at the head of a Sunday would have looked around him and mused:

"A clean town—a nice town—a respectable town. Everybody seems to be going to church, and I guess I'll go along too."

SPONTANEOUS COMBUSTION

One Explanation of Some of the Fires on the Farm.

Fires on farms are generally disastrous, resulting in the complete destruction of property, owing to inadequate fire protection.

The causes of fires are various, a smaller number than most people seem to think being due to Providence. In some cases where hay and grain stacks have been supposed to have been set on fire by lightning, careful examination would no doubt show the real cause to have been so called "spontaneous combustion."

When hay is stacked in hot weather, while still moist or some portion of it moist, we have all the conditions for rapid fermentation. Fermentation is accompanied by the evolution of heat in the stack which cannot readily escape. As the fermentation goes on the temperature rises, owing to the accumulation of heat, until the kindling temperature is reached, at which temperature the stack will burst into flames. This is more likely to occur in case of mammoth hay, clover and alfalfa, which pack somewhat closely in the stack.—G. W. Walker, Soil Chemist, University Farm, St. Paul.

CANNING GREEN TOMATOES.

Remove stems, wash, and drain the tomatoes. Pare them and remove all bruddish parts. Slice or chop them and put in an acid proof vessel, adding one level teaspoonful of salt for each pint of tomato.

Set the vessel on the back of the range or in a mild oven, where it will receive only a moderate amount of heat. Add no water, but allow the tomatoes to cook in their own juices, stirring occasionally to prevent sticking. They must cook until thoroughly done, not less than an hour.

Have the jars sterilized and the rubbers on. Keep them hot until the tomatoes are ready; then fill the hot jars with the hot fruit, seal tight, and when cold wipe and set away for future use.—Juniata L. Shepperd, Domestic Science, University Farm, St. Paul.

WHITEWASHING.

Old Fashioned New England Habit as Excellent Now.

The old fashioned New England habit of whitewashing everything, from the front yard fence to the stable, at least twice a year, was a most excellent one, and is one of the old time customs which the present generation might well adopt.

The following is the recipe for making whitewash published by the United States Department of Agriculture:

Slake half a bushel of unslaked lime with boiling water, keeping it covered during the process. Strain it and add a peck of salt, dissolved in warm water; three pounds of ground rice put in boiling water and boiled to a thin paste; half a pound of Spanish whiting, and a pound of clear glue, dissolved in warm water. Mix these well together, and let the mixture stand for several days. Keep the wash thus prepared in a bottle or portable furnace, and when used put it as hot as possible with painters' or whitewash brushes.

A Generous Spirit.

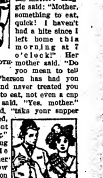
the door opened the girl fell into her mother's arms, fambling with hunger. When her mother said: "Maggie, dear-ons! What's the matter?" Maggie said: "Mother, something to eat, quick! I haven't had a bite since I left home this morning at 7 o'clock!" Then mother said, "Do you mean to tell me Sandy McPherson has let you away all day and never treated you with something to eat, not even a cup of tea?" She said, "Yes, mother." "Well," she said, "take your supper and off to bed, dear, and I'll see about it in the morning."



HANDED HIM THE MONEY.

In the morning when Maggie awoke her mother asked her how much McPherson had paid for her return fare, and Maggie said, "Two shillings, eightpence." Then handing her the money her mother said, "You go straight over to his lodgings and give him the money and tell him you are finished with him forever." When she went over and handed McPherson the money he said: "You needn't have been in such a big hurry. I could have waited a day or two!"—Detroit Free Press.

SYNOPSIS.

George Anderson and wife are a remarkable looking man come out of the wilderness with their daughter Dorothy. Conversation attracts them to the home of Mr. Challoner, and it is found that the beautiful Mrs. Challoner was fallen dead. Anderson declares that he can prove that Mrs. Challoner was murdered. The manager declares him to be Orlando Brotherson, a relative of the Challoners, who has been "dead and out west, Grace, an aged domestic, tells Dorothy that Mrs. Challoner was a "changeling" and that it is not her father found in his daughter's absence. Dr. Hill and Miss Hill arrive and show that the writer was slightly acquainted with Mrs. Challoner. Orlando Brotherson, Anderson and Dorothy go to Challoner's office. Anderson gets Orlando to identify Brotherson, and the latter is arrested on the charge of murder. Orlando is released on bail. Grace tells the coroner Mrs. Challoner received letters from a woman signing herself "Initials Only." Dorothy receives the mystery of the murder and the disappearance of her mother seems to suffer in the Challoner affair. Sometimes gets lodgings in the home of Mrs. Challoner's brother. Orlando is now in jail on suspicion of murder. He finds love and assists the inventor in his work. A girl sent to Brotherson's office by Initials Only's letters is ordered out by Orlando. Dorothy finds that Orlando has not written to her. Dorothy is summoned to Brotherson's office, who declares he cannot help her. Dorothy is surprised to find Orlando sitting on some desk. Orlando writes her an affectionate note and calls. Dorothy is not admitted. Mr. Brotherson appears to forget Orlando's letter

IN CAMP WITH MEXICAN REBELS

A REBEL OUTPOST.

THE Junta at El Paso agreed that a visit to the camp of Colonel Terrible Ortega and an interview with that Constitutionalist commander would be a very good thing for the cause. When it came to delivering a passport and let-er which would take the party past outposts, that was another matter. They were willing to do it, but always tomorrow.

"If we let them guys manana us we'll never get there," commented Scotty. "They know they're going to give us those papers, but they hate to get down to work. There is only one way to make them get busy and I'm going to use it."

The only way" meant cheerful, patient, persistent attendance on the Junta morning, noon and night until finally, late one evening, after the last promise to have it ready the following morning of "late o'clock" had been brushed aside, the passport was prepared with great mystery, duly sealed, elaborately addressed and correspondingly handed over. Before the following daybreak the automobile was streaking down some of the best country road in the United States bound for somewhere around Guadalupe, a little town something like forty miles distant on the Mexican side.

Locke, the owner of the car, and Jim, the chauffeur, were in front. Locke held the wheel on the country road, but later Jim would take the gasoline bridge. Jim would have been the working mate of Kit Carson, old man Bridger or some of the other giants of pioneer days if he had been a mno fifty years ago. Now he is a border chauffeur, able to drive a car any place a goat can climb and willing to go anywhere into the seething interior of Mexico for his price.

"I'm ought to be a clerk today," Jim said. "We'll get through a humming if we don't run into a bunch of Salazar's men from Juarez out scouting, and they're bad hombres, or some of Castillo's bandits. Split out your passes and don't shove the wrong coos; let me do the talking."

About twenty-five miles east of El Paso the Rio Grande swings into the side of the country road and at the first turn two khaki-clad young cavalrymen with six-shooters strapped to the right hip stopped forth with uplifted hands. Corin Sam is making an earnest effort to keep down the smuggling of contraband across the border and for that purpose has fifteen hundred soldiers along the lotcrestional boundary. Inasmuch as the soldiers not only have both factions of Mexicans against them, but the American business sentiment as well, the thing is somewhat in the nature of a farce.

Three young cavalrymen, however, were doing their duty as best they could and they wanted to know who what, when, etc. They were told, duly scrutinized at a distance from the military authorities and took a look through the automobile. Cartridges, like blessings, come and go unawares and they were not taking a chance. Just a little later at what was once an international bridge six more soldiers headed by a sergeant tumbled out of the underbrush and from under the abutments and cried "Halt!"

"Sorry, you know," said the sergeant crisply as he went through the car with the deftness of a customs inspector, "but we've got to do it. I see you an extra morning paper with you? Hey, Murphy, I win that bet! Wyoming 6 to Cole the Athletics."

The sergeant eased at this point to be the international line because whenever the irrigation will be her have a little water she gets even by finding a new channel, shifting her bits and slicing up territory to give a boundary commission a nice summer job. In this particular instance she had sliced into the United States a mile or more, leaving the line a mile or two on the south side of the river, in a low lying flat land, which occasional floods have filled with willows, cottonwoods and dense undergrowth. It is a great point for smugglers.

Just at the end of the mile the fairly good road ended abruptly. Shifting sand, overgrown trails and dreadlocks succeeded. It was as if the car had been dropped suddenly into a far distant country, unsettled and practically nonplored.

Just a mile to the north there has been a hard scientific road passing through farm land brought to the highest point of development. The fields were fragrant with growing, flowering alfalfa, kafr corn, milo maize, fruits and melons. The houses were pretty hoogalows or modern concrete dwellings. There were men at work in the fields and their miles and horses were sleek and well cared for. Windmills were drawing water from wells where the gasoline pump was not need. It was all happy, all land, all prosperous.

Over here the country was stricken. Land just as good as any in the world lay fallow, overgrown with brush.

"We ought to pick up an outpost about now," called back Jim finally. "Look out!"

As he spoke there came from the mesquite covered side of a mesa a single sharp, commanding report and something sang by in the air above like a large humming top.

"Sit still unless it's one of the Castillo bunch," came the command; if it is, jump for the mesquite."

Around the edge of the mesa came a horseman with his pony on a dead run. He was still swung in one hand. his Mexican sombrero fluttering.

"Rebel," was the decision. "It's all right; get out the juata letter."

The outpost had said that the way to Ortega was straight ahead and turn to the left at a big wasahout. He raced back to the position he had been in, and off to the right presently another men was seen signaling with a lariat. It was a friendly service, for thereafter there were no shots, although horsemen rode near to the automobile.

Guadalupe was once a town of about 1,200 inhabitants, a bustling, thriving little community with many characteristics borrowed from over the line. The principal street had several mdlitions stores. There was a bank and a telegraph office and the houses of the better class were commodious, of plastered adobe, with patios filled with flower beds. The rooms in some cases were decorated and the furniture imported.

Ortega, commander of the thousand or so men, occupied what was once the principal dwelling of the town, a pretentious Spanish home.

This happened to be the day before Ortega broke camp, hoping to join Pancho Villa in an attempt to capture federal trains carrying 3,000,000 pesos and 250,000 cartridges from Chihuahua. Therefore the camp presented a busy scene. The only person who did not seem to be concerned was Ortega himself, who was propped up on a cot reading a novel.

Ortega does not talk much. His answers that day were very brief. He was fighting for the constitution, which had been set aside by the Huerta government after the assassination of President Madero. He would fight until constitutional government was restored or he was killed. Intervention? He did not fear it because he believed in the good faith of the United States. Mediation or arbitration? He would never consent to either. Arbitration of what question, and dealings whatever with the administration of Huerta, meant consent to a recognition of its status. That would never be done.

Peace was not impossible in Mexico, but could come in only one way, and that was the with drawal of Huerta and his friends. A provisional president must be chosen according to the constitution, some man who had not connected himself with Huerta and had not connived at the assassination. Seek out the man who would have been president according to law if Madero and Suarez had died naturally and install him in office. If that were impossible, let Venustiano Carranza be president until an election could be held. Personally Ortega thought General Trevino or Dr. Gomez might do, but not Huerta or De la Barra or Diaz or any man of that kind.

He was well satisfied with the progress of the revolution. The Constitutionalists occupied and dominated the greater part of the country and if the embargo on munitions of war were repealed they would drive the federals out of the field in ninety days. He had about 1,400 men, well armed, plenty of ammunition and plenty of food. He was to march very soon to join Villa. What the plans were he could not tell, but a decisive blow, would be struck. He would say nothing further, and in the meantime dinner was ready.

Ortega's staff occupied the large house except himself. His real staff consisted of about six men, but as usual there were as many more honorary members. The honorary revolutionist is very prevalent in Mexico. He is always to be seen until just before a battle, when he finds a mission in another direction.

There was plenty to eat at the dinner, meat, rice, of course beans, tortillas, coffee with sugar and a particular kind of goat's milk cheese much loaded by the people. After it was over Ortega turned to an inspection of his arms and ammunition, of which he appeared to have a large supply, and after the interpreter had been instructed to forego another oration an idea was gained of the life of the rebel.

It seemed a fairly comfortable one. There was plenty of food in sight, comfortable quarters and little military work. When men were not taking siestas in their shade they were playing cards or gossiping in groups. They were all athletic-looking and fat.

On all sides saw bed suspended in the air was drying for jerking.

"We are going to move tomorrow,", said one youngster at Jim. "You will go straight to Juarez," and he spoke as if he had been promised a visit to a circus. Woman who heard him called out what they would do when they got into the little frontier town.

One rebel came along and Jim stopped him.

"Bay. what ere you fighting for?" he was asked.

"Two dollars a day," was the answer, and the soldier passed along.

"What are you fighting for?" the little mechanic capitaly was asked.

"There is a grievous wrong in my country and there will be no true progress until that wrong has been removed," was the answer. Is the land system."

"All the land in Mexico is owned by a few families and 95 per cent of it is uncultivated. All of it is unfarmed. Until it is possible for the working class to acquire land and until the land is made to bear its share of public expenditures there can be no relief.

"A Diaz, plight subjugate, but that time has passed. There will be another unless the conditions are improved. Perhaps Carranza, our chief, is a good man, will change it all when he gets in."

A messenger, hot and dusty, arrived from Villa, at Ascension, about 100 miles away, toward dusk and was received with embraces. He brought the final commands of that general, who had been a patriot since he had ceased being a bandit.

Three days later the thousand and more men seen that day were either fleeing over the desert sands of Sanchera, 70 miles away, or were dead, wounded or prisoners awaiting summary execution. The plan had been that Ortega should strike the railway at a point whence Juarez and cut the line, behind the treasure trains, while Villa, further north toward Chihuahua, should wreck his end.

Ortega and his men arrived on time, but Villa never moved. Hundreds of federal soldiers with artillery and cavalry, were expecting them and cut them to pieces with little food on the wing. The motions of these birds are exceedingly graceful as well as rapid. Their vision is both telescopic and microscopic.

The wireless piano aboard the yacht "Hohenzollern," belonging to Prince Albert of Monaco, on which Operator Robinville played the "Star Spangled Banner" as a farewell to America when the yacht passed out at Sandy Hook. A musical circuit is used in order to lower the frequency of the current so that bearable notes may be struck. This is the only wireless piano in existence.

BIRDS' KEEN SIGHT

Rapid Motion and Powerful Vision Go Together.

Eagle Has Telescopic Eyes—Even the Familiar Robin and Its Jay Have Been Singularly Endowed by Nature in This Respect.

Chicago.—The eye in the bird kingdom is a telescope, with the fish it is microscopic, with the mole rudimentary. The eagle and the vulture have the faculty of adjusting the eye to see their keen objects at a great distance. The eagle from the far off mountain sees the flock in the valley below and accurately surveys the situation for his descent. As he swoops down and from nearer to his victim the lens in his eye steadily readjusts itself to the decreasing distance and when he strikes the lamb already chosen for his dinner the long distance sight has naturally given down to the scope of a few yards.

The vulture is equal to the eagle in vision as he is in flight. Every farmer knows if he kills a blue racer and leaves it by the roadside a vulture soaring overhead comes down and appropriates it. In South America, where the condor lives, the hunter of wild animals dares not leave his game long exposed and unprotected. At first not a condor can be seen, but presently a dark speck appears far up in the air and it grows larger and is soon followed by another and another, until a score of condors have descended to the feast. These have the telescopic eye. From the height of a mile or two these birds survey the earth beneath and observe the slightest motion of any creature below. Mankind can equal such vision only by artificial aid, which is an amplification of the principle of nature. The eagle possesses a telescope before Galileo's invention.

Any farmer boy who has ever attempted to stalk within gunshot of a crow or a hawk perched on the dry limb of a tree can testify to the sharp vision of these birds at long distance. Cooper's eye is in the greatest demand in the poultry yard. Soaring high in the air, this bird of prey sees the tiny chicks, and in the course of time will seize the one he has chosen as a tidbit. The crow in the corn field and on the lawn—the robin and the jaybird—have this same cagelike power of vision and hearing and also a keen sense of smell. The seed eaters, meadow larks and sparrows, need no such vision as a long distance affords for a possession.

Still, one of the owl is especially designed for short distance vision. This bird of the night subsists on mice a few yards away. The eye of the owl is arranged to concentrate a great diversity of rays on each object to be seen. The bird can discern near objects in a light so dim that to the human eye all is dark. This arrangement, however, is exceedingly useful as well as rapid. The owl is exceedingly slow of wing. The motions of these birds are exceedingly graceful as well as rapid. Their vision is both telescopic and microscopic.

CURRENT WINDS UP A WATCH

Timepiece Lost in Stream Two Years Ago Was Still Running When Owner Found It.

Uniontown, Pa.—That a swift current in a mountain trout stream kept his gold watch wound up and running for two years is the assertion of Albert Miller of Chalk Hill, who lost his timekeeper in the stream two years ago. When the watch was picked out of the sand by Mrs. Miller, near the spot where her husband lost it, the dial showed nearly the correct time.

Mrs. Miller, while gathering wild flowers, noticed a glittering object in the clear water of the stream. She investigated and found it to be her husband's lost watch. She was greatly surprised to find the watch running and keeping good time.

Mrs. Miller said that the timepiece was lying in such a position that the fast running water had evidently acted as winder and kept the movements going.

NEW YORK'S DOMESTIC COURT

Was Recently Established—A Place Where Families May Air Their Troubles.

New York.—New York has a special court, known as the domestic relations court, presided over by Judge Cornell, for the settlement of matrimonial disputes. Most of the cases can be classed under three heads: 1. A woman who says her husband lost his job through drink and has not supported his family for months. In these cases the husband is usually to blame. 2. A woman who says her husband left home two years ago, and has not been heard of since. Here the wife is partly to blame, as a rule, for bad temper, or bad housekeeping. 3. A woman who complains because her husband refuses to work. Cases of parents neglected in old age and un-

REAL GROWTH IN GREENLAND

Last Census Shows Greatest Increase in Population Known in Country's History.

The last census of Greenland, dated Oct. 1, 1911, shows that that Danish colony has a total population of 12,458, as against 11,598 in 1901. The increase during the past ten years is the largest on record for a similar period. The native population, which numbered 10,076 constitutes almost the entire number of inhabitants, and immigration is practically of no consequence.

The largest settlement in Greenland is Godthaven, which has a population of 766, and the smallest is Skaarsen, in North Greenland, with 42 inhabitants.

Only twenty-six of the male population are over sixty years of age, while forty-four of the female population have passed their sixtieth year.

Out of every 1,000 of the male population there were found 650 unmarried, 311 married and 31 widowers. Among the women the ratio per thousand was discovered to be 597 unmarried, 283 married and 115 widows.

The number of natives has doubled during the last 100 years. Denmark is slowly but surely giving the people of Greenland civilization, Polygamy does not now exist. In 1901 there were only three men who had more than one wife.

Autists Using Gum Camphor.

Automobilists at home have been experimenting with gum camphor as a "dope" for their gasoline. Usually, about one ounce of camphor is placed in five gallons of gasoline and it is asserted by those who use the mixture that the operation of their motors is much superior with the camphor in the gasoline than without it. One motorist even goes so far as to claim that he has been able to increase his mileage per gallon as much as 20 per cent.

The idea is not new, for Dutch coast is a number of years ago in the habit of dropping a lump of camphor in the tanks of their locomotive tenders.

Contractors Brody and Johnson are pushing the work on the new public school building so that it may be as nearly enclosed as possible when the real Minnesota winter strikes. The work has progressed far enough now to indicate that the new school house is to be a large and imposing structure.

Quite a number of property holders here during the past few weeks connected their premises with the new city waterworks system. The water rental is a modest charge and when the convenience and advantages of the service are more generally appreciated, which will probably be in a comparatively short time, the city system will be serving hundreds of people.

Frank Heydel and family left Monday afternoon to go to their old home at Wascca, in southern Minnesota, where they will reside in the future. Though the state of Mr. Heydel's health necessitated his retirement from active farm management, his many friends will be glad to know that he is gradually gaining in strength and will hope that he may be permanently restored to health.

SHOOK UP THE BOSS.

Superintendent's Car went into the Ditch and Was Burned.

This morning Great Northern train No. 35 from Duluth struck a freight on rail at Bena derailing the rear sleeper and the special coach of General Supt. C. O. Jenks of the Lake Division. Supt. Jenks' car turned over in the ditch and fire broke out burning it completely.

Supt. Jenks was pretty badly shaken and scratched up, but no bones were broken and none of his injuries were serious. The chief was also pretty badly bruised. None of the passengers were injured and the train was only 60 minutes late at Cass Lake and pulled into Crookston nearly on time. — Crookston Times, Monday.

THIEF RIVER MAY GO DRY.

License Question is Issue in Approaching City Election.

Thief River Falls is among the cities in northwestern Minnesota that may be without saloons the coming year. The license question is to be an issue in the city election Nov. 4, and there is said to be considerable sentiment favorable to the proposition that the city be without saloons.

THIS IS A LITTLE MORE LIKE IT

SEVERAL ELEVENTH HOUR FILINGS OF CANDIDATES FOR CITY OFFICE.

CONTEST FOR ASSESSOR, ALDERMAN AT LARGE, SECOND AND THIRD WARD.

HANGE WITHDRAWS.

Will Not be Candidate for Alderman Third Ward.

James Hance has withdrawn as a candidate for alderman from the Third ward, so now there are only three little contests where once there were four.

Since the publication of the last issue of the Gazette there have been several filings of candidates for city office and it now looks as if the election next Tuesday would be more than a matter of form.

Until Friday, the day before the last day for filing, the filings indicated only one contest, that of Sam Hunt and Leo Steinert for alderman from the Second ward. Since then the petitions of Jos. Toupin and Vern Healy as candidates for assessor have been filed and this will probably be the most interesting "fight" of the election. It. H. Bourdon has become a candidate for alderman at large and James Hance is to oppose Noel Delorme for alderman from the Third ward.

Mayor I. Lemieux, E. G. Buse, city treasurer, and Geo. F. Hennings, alderman from the First ward, will be re-elected without opposition. T. A. Crompe, now alderman at large and president of the council, and Simon Paul, alderman from the Third ward will retire.

Following is the complete list of candidates:

Mayor—I. Lemieux.

Alderman First Ward—George F. Hennings.

Alderman Second Ward—Sam E. Hunt, Leo Steinert.

Alderman Third Ward—Nole Delorme, James Hance.

Alderman at Large,(two to be elected)—Rufus Poirier, Jos. J. Holm, H. H. Bourdon.

City Treasurer—E. G. Buse.

Assessor—Jos. Toupin, Vern Healy.

FRIDAY IS LAST DAY.

Pay Your Taxes and Avoid the Penalty.

The second half of the 1912 real estate tax must be paid before Saturday, Nov. 1, in order to save the 10 per cent penalty added that date.

O. O. KINDSETH,
County Treasurer.

CONDUCTOR LOST ARMS.

Slipped From Caboose and Fell Under the Wheels.

Conductor R. A. Brown, of the Northern Pacific Railway company, with headquarters in East Grand Forks, slipped from the steps of a caboose on an east bound freight at Melvin late Saturday afternoon and fell under the cars, the wheels passing over his arm and severing it above the elbow. The injury was given what attention the members of the crew could give, and he was taken to a Grand Forks hospital. He was resting easily today, though weak from the effects of the loss of blood and suffering much pain.

Mr. Brown has made his home in East Grand Forks for several months and is a single man, about 30 years of age.—Crookston Times, Monday.

MAYOR LEMIEUX IN THE LIMELIGHT

HIS PICTURE AND STORY OF PIONEER EXPERIENCES IN DAILY PAPER.

In last Friday's Minneapolis Journal, in which paper were pictures of Emeline Pankhurst, President Hunter, Governor Sulzer, the Miss Pressident of the Minnesota Educational association and other prominent educators, there appeared the likeness of Mayor I. Lemieux of Red Lake Falls, who was in attendance at the meeting of the educational association as a delegate from the local board of education. It can be said that the doctor's picture looked as "militant" as any of them. Accompanying the picture was an interesting story of Dr. Lemieux's pioneer experiences, reading as follows:

"One of the pioneer school builders of the state, who is in Minneapolis today in attendance at the Northwestern Educational association, is Dr. Israel Lemieux, mayor of Red Lake Falls and the builder of the first school house in Polk county.

"A French-Canadian by birth, Dr Lemieux came to Minnesota in the 70's traveling a good part of the way by ox-driven prairie schooners. Stopping first at Crookston, he drove to what is now Red Lake Falls and there in the virgin plain he found from the rough logs one of the first school houses in the northwestern section of the state.

"The school house has certainly changed in appearance and in teaching since then," said Dr. Lemieux today. "Then we taught just the three R's. Now its manual training, cooking, history, grammar and everything else. Most of our books and pictures came through by ox team from St. Paul or the town of St. Anthony in those picturesque days. Now we have trains and every other mode of travel keeping us in touch with the world."

"Dr. Lemieux has been connected with the board of education at Red Falls for more than twenty years and is now secretary of the board."

CROOKSTON TOO, MAY BE "DRY"

BOTH THIEF RIVER FALLS AND CROOKSTON VOTING ON LICENSE QUESTION.

As stated in the last issue of the Gazette, the Crookston option is one of the issues in the city election at Thief River Falls next Tuesday and there is much excitement favorable to the proposition that the city be without saloons. It is, in fact, an issue that has aroused much interest in the election and brought on a spirited contest.

Crookston also is among the large number of northern Minnesota cities that will vote on the license question.

While there does not seem to be so much "dry" sentiment at Crookston as at Thief River Falls, there is enough of it to cause the "wets" considerable anxiety and there are even predictions that the city will go "dry."

THREE QUARTERS OF A MILLION

MORE THAN $750,000.00 ON DEPOSIT IN THE BANKS OF THE CITY.

The quarterly reports of the three banks of the city, published in today's paper, show the affairs of these institutions to be in a very satisfactory condition.

The showing is otherwise gratifying for it indicates that the growth of the city and tributary country are enjoying a generous measure of prosperity.

SHORTER WINNIPEG RUN.

Report N. P. Will Build North From East Grand Forks.

According to the latest advices in the railroad world Marshall county is soon to see a new line of railroad, running across its western border. The Northern Pacific construction department has revised its schedule and will run a line from Grand Forks to Drayton and along the east side of the Red River. It is understood work will be commenced in early spring and completed to Winnipeg. This decision is said to have been hastened because of the fact that the Milwaukee contemplates a similar line from Fargo to Winnipeg. When the Northern Pacific does have finished this line the distance from Grand Forks to Winnipeg will have been shortened about twenty miles.

Some time ago the Northern Pacific ran a survey for the line but the work was abandoned, owing, it is said, to failure in depositing of a bond issue. Material for construction had been unloaded at Drayton and everything was in readiness for operations when orders came halting the work. The survey which was made at that time has now been changed and the road will take a more straight course from the Forks.

The territory to be tapped is one of the finest and most productive in the northwest. It was settled in the early days but owing to the distances to markets and the inconveniences of long drives, it is not now thickly settled.—Crookston Times.

PRIZES AWARDED FOR SCHOOL GARDENS

FEATURE OF AGRICULTURAL WORK IN THE PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

The fifteen dollars in cash prizes offered by the board of education for the best kept school gardens for the season just closed have been awarded as follows:

First, $5—Leslie Wilkinson.

Second, $4—George Tschirhart and Tony Tschirhart.

Third, $2.50—Willie Nimesgern.

Fourth, $2—Joseph Nimesgern.

Fifth, $1.50—Telles Keltenheim.

Sixth, $1—Henry Naus.

There were thirty school gardens this year, ten of which were at the homes of the pupils. With some or two exceptions all the gardens were kept in very good condition throughout the summer.

During the last two seasons the boys have proved to the satisfaction of themselves and others that weeds may be subdued, and that exceedingly weedy land may be cleaned up in two years by careful cultivation. It has been noticeable that the cleanest gardens have resulted not from the most hand work but from attention to weeds at the proper time, that is, when the weeds are just coming through the ground.

Another lesson that has been driven home to the boys by their own efforts is that the only way to get the soil from drying out, and thus producing little or no crop, is to keep the surface soil loose by cultivation at frequent intervals. Merely removing the weeds from the top will not do; the soil water must be saved by a number of shallow cultivations.

LOOKS LIKE FOSSTON.

Foot Ball Team Has Practically a Clear Title to Championship.

Most anybody will now concede that the Fosston high school football team is entitled to the championship honors for northwestern Minnesota for the 1913 season.

The Fosston boys held every high school team played, except Bemidji, scoreless. They defeated Bemidji 16 to 6, Red Lake Falls, 20 to 0, Thief River Falls twice, 39 to 0 and 12 to 6, and last Saturday they defeated East Grand Forks 54 to 0. They have not yet played Crookston, but a comparison of records indicates that Fosston has the stronger team.

HAUPT HAS A STORY.

On Way the Socialist Took The Hog.

I.H. Haupt of St. Hilaire, who was in town yesterday, is telling a story about a friend of his, a farmer living in southern Minnesota.

This farmer killed a hog, dressed it and hung it up to cool. While he wasn't looking somebody "appropriated" the hog. The farmer was not able at first to determine the identity of the guilty party, but by a process of deduction determined what his politics might be. He was sure the hog could not have been taken by a democrat, for under the Wilson administration the democrats have all they want (That's some joke, too.). It could not have been taken by a republican, because being a republican himself he felt sure a republican would not have taken more than half of the hog. Then in noting the fact that he still had in the pen one hog, just like the animal that had been killed, he arrived at a solution of the mystery. The hog was taken by a socialist who believes in the division of property.

He might have carried the deduction farther and determined that in the division of property the socialist chose the dead hog because it is easier to carry a dead hog than to lead a live one.

Climbing Out of a Hole.

Every one has heard authentic stories of the man who asked another, "Who is that old frump over yonder?" and got the reply, "She is my wife." But this story doesn't go far enough.

Jones observed an old lady sitting across the room.

"For heaven'sake!" he remarked to Robinson, "who is that extraordinarily ugly woman there?"

"That," answered Robinson, "is my wife."

Jones was taken aback, but moved up front again.

"Well," he said persuasively, "you just ought to see mine!"—New York Evening Post.

She was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Whitehouse of Plummer and sister of Mrs. J. H. Hanks of this city. Her husband, now assistant cashier of the bank of Plummer, formerly resided in Red Lake Falls. Mrs. Pahlen was a young woman of many fine qualities and had many friends in Red Lake Falls as well as in eastern Red Lake county who will be pained to learn of her death.

COURT ORDERS SURVEY MADE

JUDICIAL DITCH NUMBER FOUR WILL PROBABLY BE CONSTRUCTED.

WILL DRAIN LANDS IN RED LAKE PENNINGTON AND POLK COUNTIES.

Quite a large number of farmers interested in the construction of proposed judicial ditch number four were over Friday for the hearing, before Judge Wm. Watts, on the petition for the drainage proposition. Those who were heard were quite generally favorable to the proposition, though in this was a matter that only time can tell, as the case is proceedings of this kind.

The court ordered a survey of the proposed route of the ditch and appointed Engineer Geo. A. Ralph of St. Paul to make the survey. Four viewers engineer is to make his report Jan. 1, 1914.

The ditch, it seems probable the ditch will be established; there will be no actual work of construction in any event until next spring. R. G. Gigstad of Pennington county, Jos. Delsie of Red Lake county and Dennis Ryan of Polk county were appointed viewers and they are to make their report in the spring.

The ditch if constructed will drain lands in Polk Centre, Pennington county, Wylie and Louisville, Red Lake county and Belgium and Farrell in Polk county.

The old Moraau store building at Terrebonne, occupied by Mrs. Fallen for and Elvin Generaux and their families as a place of residence, was destroyed by fire early Monday morning.

Mr. Generaux had been living in the house for some time, but Mr. Poirier had just moved in. The fire was of unknown origin as to the origin of the fire.

COST OF OFFICE SEEKING HEAVY

MEN WHO KNOW DISCUSS METHODS PAST AND PRESENT.

St. Paul.—(Special)—They were discussing the cost of running for public office in the corridors of the Merchants hotel and the talk naturally centered on the big prize, the gubernatorial nominations. The booth was one prominently identified in a manufacturing way in days gone by. One of the number had figured in the contest of a year ago. "Under our present primary law," said one member of the group, "$17,000, I believe, is the limit of cost for a man seeking the governorship, of which $7,000 can be expended by himself. Now no one could carefully make the race for that amount of money and the men who drafted the law knew as much when they named that figure. Postage alone will consume the limit of expenditures permitted by law." And so the talk ran. The concensus of opinion was that $25,000 was little enough, but that $35,000 or $40,000 came nearer being the amount of money needed to take a proper stand at this highest office in the gift of the people. As to the minor offices, such as state auditor, secretary of state and the other executive positions, it was agreed that the expenditure of the first primary, $4,500, for campaign purposes would be necessary. The booth had that it could not properly be done for less. The amounts named, fixed, were held to have only to do with men trying to break into official life, as those in office had a kind of fatty 75 per cent and consequently could get by on much less. The organization men and those drawing a per diem from the state through the grace of those in office was a factor that only large expenditures on the part of those on the outside could overcome. Continuing his talk on expenditures that the outside world knows little of the one with the latest managerial experience declared that it was the so called progressives who represented the heaviest tax on a candidate's treasury. "Now," he said with some bitterness, "for it was these fellows who got the Bull Moose party and they gave nothing in return. It has made an organization men of me, for in the main men will find leaders of men willing to help, their only hope of reward being the success of the party or possible future recognition in some way. Your lotty progressive, the one who is always yelling 'Down with the gang,' has only one rule and that is the coin. He would be on the other side if he could, but the other side would not have him. That was our experience and it cost people $26,000 and little in the way of return to show for it." In telling of this experience I am necessarily speaking in the first person, but I am not relating some of the secrets that were passed around. These fellows did not tell all they knew, but it was enough, and I give it to you so that I may have the inch you can in a way figure out the cost.

Continuing the subject of the cost of running for office under the present primary law one gubernatorial candidate at hyanna days tells me that a proper poll list for mailing purposes would cost from 25 to 50 cent less than $5,000. Letters sent out in this direction encouraging to voters throughout, the state by one candidate who figured in the last gubernatorial campaign footed a bank roll to the extent of $25,000. Workers were scattered all over Polk C. Dunn, who figured in the campaign of 1912 tells of how one piece of direct mail sent to him for the purpose of befriending falsehoods which were being circulated in the county cost him $50 for postage alone. And so it goes on down the line, a touch at every turn of the roll. Printing, stationery and pens all the have you want to, office seeking is a messy spending game and every new law only adds to the cost. Only the wealthy or those backed by wealth can play it. The laws as they stand now are against the outsider. Progressive measures their framers called them, but I miss my guess if there will not be just as great a clamor in the near future for their repeal as there was for their passage.

Through several Minnesota suffrage leaders, equal rights for men, Mrs. Pankhurst, the English militant, and her methods, the rank and file of the women in Minnesota who are agitating the ballot for their sex do not take kindly to Mrs. Pankhurst's admission to the United States. They have written to the comm. Mrs. Eugenia B. Farmer, press chairman of the State's Women's Suffrage association, looks on the things with alarm. A. L. Ward of Fairmont, prominent politically in the Second district, and an ardent believer in women's suffrage, says Mrs. Pankhurst's admission to the country was a mistake. He advocates penal servitude for life for the militants. Mrs. Pankhurst is booked to speak in the Twin Cities, but she may never get this far West. Her lectures to date have been crowded fronts as far as attendance is concerned.

FRIDAY NIGHT'S A "BIG NIGHT"

WHEN MANY THINGS ARE DONE IN THE NAME OF THE "WITCHES."

It is probable that according to custom, All Hallowe'en will be observed in Red Lake Falls more or less appropriately on Friday night. This is the occasion when all of the mysterious beings of the universe do strange things. It is the proper until the job selected their assistant with the job elected their assistant.

That only comes about when "had luck" use their muscles instead of their brains. Boys if they will use their brains can plan and pull off a whole night full of startling stunts without destroying anyone's property.

"GOVERNOR" PAQUIN SELLS PART OF FARM

RECORD TRANSACTION REPRESENTS ONLY HALF OF HIS LARGE HOLDINGS.

Abraham Paquin, the wealthy Lambert farmer, familiarly known to thousands of people as the "governor", has decided to form on a somewhat smaller scale in the future. That is, he has disposed of a part of his large farm in Lambert township. Though the real estate transaction is probably the record one for Red Lake county, it represents only a part of his holdings. He has sold 400 acres of the 880 acre farm for $20000.00, $65.00 an acre. At the same time he disposed of about $4000 worth of personal property.

"Governor" Paquin has made a remarkable record considering the handicaps under which he labored. He came to Red Lake county a penniless young man without education. One of his more recent accomplishments has been to learn to sign his name to pay checks in spite of his lack of "book learning." He has been a persistent student and it but his success needs no doubt he attributed. He has been a student of men and conditions and that his success can be attributed to the value of scientific farming methods and brought them into practice. He always knew what he was doing and what was going on about him. So, after all, it can be said that the governor is an educated man. His mind did not have the training that it should have had in his younger years, but being professed of a natural intelligence he saw to it that he received the training and mental discipline that he must have for success in his later years.

The "governor's" farm has been one of the show places in Red Lake county. It is finely improved, among the buildings being a creamery. The product of his dairy has gone to the market finished and he has assisted his neighbors by offering them a market for their cream.

It is probable that the "governor" decision to sell half of his farm was induced by his good business judgment. It is possible that he has learned that by some changes in methods he will be able to make his 400 acres as profitable as the 800 acres have been, taking into consideration the added capital represented in the increased value of lands.

FOUND FUGITIVE IN WATER TANK AT STOCK YARDS

GORDON MCKENZIE WANTED AT CROOKSTON ARRESTED BY LOCAL POLICE.

ED. RIOPEL, ASSISTING HIM, TO GET OUT OF COUNTRY, ALSO TAKEN.

Gordon McKenzie, wanted at Crookston on an embezzlement charge, and Ed. Riopel, a Polk county farmer, who was assisting the alleged criminal to get out of the country, were arrested by Chief of Police Fred Cyr, and Sheriff Chas. Fellman Saturday afternoon. The local officials had been notified the day before that McKenzie was wanted for horse stealing and they were on the look out for the man. However, the horse stealing charge "stick" for McKenzie had hired the livery horse with which he drove out of Crookston and the horse had been returned later.

McKenzie had been employed as clerk at the Palmer hotel in Crookston and left Friday afternoon without notice and so mysteriously as to cause suspicion. When the money in the till was counted $83 was missing. It was determined on investigation that the man had hired a rig at the Collins livery for a "drive in the country" and then the authorities of the surrounding towns were notified.

After McKenzie's arrest it is learned how he planned to get out of the country. He drove to the Riopel farm, six miles northeast of Crookston, where he conferred with Ed. Riopel or Wm. Riopel, or both of them. Wm. Riopel took the horse back to Crookston and Ed. Riopel brought McKenzie to Red Lake Falls in an auto to town on the N. P. stock yards. He came to town in him a fresh team to get his man to Plummer. In the mean he had come from Crookston in two hours and the animal seriously-looked as if he had been hustled considerably when his customary pace. Riopel required some refreshments, became somewhat talkative and said enough to give away the game. He was placed under arrest and induced to give the authorities at once a signed statement as to where McKenzie might be found.

Sheriff Fellman, Chief Cyr and George Cyr, all carrying considerable shooting material went to the N. P. station and "surrounded" the stock yards. When McKenzie saw that he was trapped he came from his place of hiding in the water tank without making any fuss and expressing the opinion that he "wouldn't make a very good criminal."

When advised of the arrest,

SULZER ACCEPTS NEW NOMINATION

IMPEACHED GOVERNOR NAMED FOR STATE ASSEMBLY.

IS ON PROGRESSIVE TICKET

Sixth Assembly District of New York City to be Scene of Action—Opposed By State and County Leaders of Party.

New York, Oct. 22.—William Sulzer, impeached as governor of the state, has been nominated for the assembly of the sixth assembly district. Mr. Sulzer in 1893 began his public career as a member of this branch of the state legislature. The nomination was made unanimous.

Accepts the Nomination.

Mr. Sulzer accepted the nomination, it was announced, at the meeting where he was nominated as candidate. Max Steindler, Progressive leader of the Sixth Assembly district, who placed the former governor's name in nomination, said Mr. Sulzer reached him by telephone from Albany and said he would accept.

The nomination of the impeached executive was brought about against the desires of the state and county leaders of the Progressive party. The sentiment among the Progressives throughout the state and in other states was generally against the move, according to State Chairman Theodore Roosbelt, Robinson and County Chairman Francis W. Bird.

Cautioned Against It.

Mr. Bird, in a letter to Mr. Steindler before the meeting began, cautioned him regarding the "unwisdom of nominating Mr. Sulzer."

Mr. Bird pointed out that although 2,500 voters in all parties, as he was informed, out of a total of 6,000 voters had signed the petition favoring Mr. Sulzer's nomination, such a nomination, "if brought about in this way would be more of a neighborhood than a party nomination. It would not be a strictly Progressive designation, but a nomination by the voters of all the parties in the district, using the vacancy that happens to be on the Progressive ticket for their purpose."

Returns to Albany.

Albany, N. Y.—A few minutes after the Progressive convention met in New York and nominated him for assemblyman, William Sulzer issued a statement, telling why he had "consented to come back to Albany."

Throughout the evening he was in communication by telephone with Progressive leaders in New York.

There never was any doubt but that he could have the nomination if he wanted it, he declared. Nor does he doubt that the first of January will see him back where he began his political career 20 years ago. He and his friends also are convinced that he will go from there to the speaker's stop and thence back to the governor's chair.

Trip to New York.

Sulzer has returned to New York to begin a campaign. He plans to speak day and night up to election time. After that he will accept some lecture engagements up to the first of January. His promise is to make the "fur fly" if he is made an assemblyman.

"And not only will I make it warm for my enemies in the assembly," he said, "if I make them take notice in other places, too."

His statement follows, in part:

"I shall be a non-partisan candidate, having no ax to grind and no motive or purpose, other than to do what I can for the cause of good government — the struggle in which my impeachment brought about my removal from the governorship by an arrogant boss whose distates to do wrong I decline."

Sulzer agreed to run after consulting with a score of political advisers.

TO VOTE ON MARINE SAFETY

Measure Aims at Prevention of Steamship Disasters—Taft Wouldn't Sign Bill.

Washington, Oct. 21.—Absent senators were notified to return at once for the debate on the "Seaman's Bill of Intitude Bill," which is to be voted on Thursday.

Senator La Follette insisted that absent senators should be recalled so that the seaman's bill might be acted upon. Its provisions increasing the safety of the passengers and crew at sea ought to be put into operation, he said, to prevent further inconvenience to others, such as have recently cost many lives.

The senator declared the measure which President Taft refused to sign has the indorsement of the present administration.

The phase of mining is shown in this exposition.

SEVENTEEN DEAD; NINTY HURT

ACTUAL FATALITIES IN WRECKED TROOP TRAIN DETERMINED.

Believed Wreck Was Caused by Engine Tender's Wheels Leaving Track.

Mobile, Ala., Oct. 22.—Unless others of the 90 soldiers in local hospitals die of injuries suffered in the wreck of the Mobile and Ohio troop train near State Line, Miss., Sunday afternoon, the list of dead will stand at 17, according to an official report.

Officials of the railroad company say that there are no more bodies in the wreckage. Physicians do not believe there will be more than one death among the injured. The most seriously hurt is Private Ostrander of the 170th company.

President Finley of the Mobile and Ohio believes the front wheels of the engine tender left the track before reaching where the wreck occurred.

His statement, just issued, says:

"These wheels broke practically every tie in the center of the tender. When the cars went out the track spread, resulting in the train toppling over and carrying the trestle with it. Careful examination does not indicate that the track was in any way defective prior to the accident."

The revised list of dead follows: Corporal J. Bruce Hamilton, company; Corporal Joe Johnson, Eighth band; Corporal Frank Chetwski, 170th; Corporal Pete Kohler, 170th; Private Leonard Pegards, 170th; Private Joe Lehee, 170th; Private W. H. Wren, 170th; Private C. C. Grunks, 170th; Private W. Frank, 170th; Private Virgil Remsen, 35th; Private Tom Evans, 170th; Private H. Bindon, 170th; Private O. C. Burleson, 170th; Private Gordon Yost, 170th; Private V. Van Stebbens, 170th; Private Geo. G. Gordes, 170th; Private M. Mix, 170th.

NO INTEREST IN ELECTIONS

Mexican Voters Apparently Giving But Little Thought to the Outcome.

Mexico City, Oct. 21.—With the election a week off and the assurance of three candidates in the field for the presidency, there appears to be no appreciable interest on the part of the general public as to who triumphs. Voting will be by districts, and the assembly so far as can be outwardly seen, there is no speechmaking, no parades on banners; only a few posters announcing several candidates.

Paredes was placed under the ban at the beginning of the campaign by common consent of the candidates, who feared disastrous consequences might follow.

The newspapers have paid little attention to the approaching elections, printing only occasional laudatory articles directed chiefly against the success of the candidacy of Federico Gamboa, nominated by the Catholic party.

DEADLY GERMS IN LETTER

Police Are Investigating Case Where $1,500 Is Demanded for Cure.

Chicago, Oct. 22.—A letter, the contents of which may reveal a new and deadly method of blackmail or may prove only a hoax, was investigated by postal inspectors and police. The epistle was received at the home of Frederick M. Steele, a millionaire resident of Highland Park. In the letter the sender wrote that he had a deadly germ from which the victim could not avoid contracting a deadly disease for which only the sender knew the cure.

He is already too late for you to escape inevitable death," the letter continued.

Mr. Steele said the writer demanded that $1,500 be placed at the foot of the Lincoln monument in Grant park and that the cure would be mailed. The police will make daily examination of Mr. Steele's mail, it was said.

Son of Tobacco King Held.

Seattle, Oct. 20.—A verdict that Henry N. Farr and Thomas O. Simmons came to their death through being struck by an automobile driven by Laurence Duke, is a "grossly negligent manner," and that Duke "had been drinking," was returned by the coroner's jury which investigated the accident on the county highway south of Seattle on Wednesday night when Duke's car crashed into another occupied at the side of the road. Duke is a son of Brodie Duke, the tobacco manufacturer.

HOUSE ABANDONS 30-DAY RECESS IDEA

REPUBLICAN LEADER MANN REFUSES TO AGREE TO VACATION PLAN.

MONEY MEASURE CHANGES

Many Important Modifications Expected to Be Carried Out With Wilson's Approval—Some of the Suggestions.

Washington, Oct. 22.—Plans of administration leaders in the house for a thirty-day recess were abandoned because republican Leader Mann refused to yield in his determination to keep the house in session as long as the senate awaits action on the currency bill in committee.

While the hearings on the currency bill before the senate banking committee may not end before Saturday, amendments have the attention of the members.

William Will Yield Point.

President Wilson's intimation that he will not object to changes in the personnel of the federal reserve board and a reduction in the number or federal reserve banks has made it practically certain that the desire of many senators to make these changes will be carried out with prospect of administration approval.

Many other important modifications will be taken up when committee work begins on the measure next week. Among the proposed changes is one that will go to the very basis of the bill, the provision authorizing the incorporation of commercial paper and the issue of currency by the federal reserve banks.

Would Extend Length of Maturity.

Senator Bristow, Hitchcock, Reed and Nelson have shown an inclination to discuss the length of the maturity of certain percentage of the paper the reserve banks might rediscount, to enable country banks holding six and nine months paper to enjoy the advantages of a new system. Another amendment along this line, coupled with a more definite designation of "commercial paper," probably will be written into the bill.

Another Change Possible.

The compulsory feature of the bill under which all national banks would be required to join the system and subscribe 20 per cent of their capital in stock of the federal reserve bank of their district and turn over 5 per cent of their deposits to the reserve bank also may be changed.

The provision limiting the dividends to be paid by reserve banks to 5 per cent may be increased to 6 and the provision that after the accumulation of a 20 per cent surplus, all profits of the reserve banks, except the dividends, shall be distributed—40 per cent to the government and 40 per cent to the stockholding banks—may be changed to give all the net profits to the government.

Democrats that senators either "rejoin or go to work," that absent members be brought back to Washington by the "any force that may be necessary," and that the "minorities be damned" of trying to do business without a quorum be ended, marked the opening of yesterday's session of the senate.

BURBANK OUT FOR EUGENICS

PLANT WIZARD SAYS PEOPLE MAY BE SCIENTIFICALLY BRED

10 Generations Sufficient, He Thinks, to Attain Any Desired Results.

San Francisco, Oct. 21.—Luther Burbank, the plant conjurer of Santa Rosa, has joined the ranks of the Eugenics. He has become an honorable final conviction that the laws of artificial selection which he has found applicable to plant life are also operative in human relations.

He affirmed his belief that acquired characteristics positively are transmissible and that such transmissible genic consecration would implant in the new and better traits with the ratio to tendency to reversion.

"The reservations should be sufficient to fix in humanity any desired attribute of an ideal and survival value," said Burbank. "In plant cultivation, about six to 10 generations are required to establish the desired structural and functional changes in the descendants.

It would be interesting to observe what might be done if it were possible to select a dozen normal healthful infant them live and mate under ideal environmental conditions. There is perhaps no doubt but that 10 generations would be sufficient to breed into the better qualities and to weed out the inferior ones.

"In our modern complex society through philanthropic, sanitary methods of living, charities and efficient means of combating pestilence and plague, we are counteracting the fault to survive and propagate as a result of this, subnormality and degeneracy is increasing at an alarming rate.

"Eugenics is the scientific answer to the pressing problem of keeping the race from deteriorating and injecting new strains of energy, stability, and aspiration into human kind.

"Mending men toward a better species; that is the greatest problem ever confronting the world."

NO CROWD TO HEAR MRS. PANKHURST

"FROST" FOR ENGLISH MILITANT FIRST NIGHT IN NEW YORK CITY.

HALL ABOUT A FOURTH FULL

Few "Hunger Strikers" Sit With Militant Speaker on Platform—Socialist Candidate Introduces the Speaker of the Evening.

New York, Oct. 23.—Preparations had been made for an overflow meeting for Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst to be held in Madison Square garden, but the hall, seating 12,000 people, was scarcely one-quarter filled. The "frost," as it was termed by some, was said by Mrs. Pankhurst's friends, to be due to the fact that it was thought while she was detained at Ellis Island that she would not be allowed to land in the United States.

Explains Militant Method.

In her address Mrs. Pankhurst explained why militant methods for the enfranchisement of women were being employed in England, but not in America, and defended the employment of such methods. She criticised the British government as the most conservative on earth and held it responsible through failure to enact legislation for the militant advocates of suffrage resorting to violence to obtain the ballot.

Only during dynamic means, she declared, could English women hope to secure liberty dealing with white slavery, industrial evils and other conditions of modern life.

"Hunger Strikers" There.

Some leading suffragists of this country and a few "hunger strikers" sat with Mrs. Pankhurst on a stage draped with a tri-colored flag, bearing the inscription, "Resistance to Tyranny Is Obedience to God." Bearing banners with the same message, and declaring that their militancy had resulted in legislation, were Mrs. Harriet Laidlaw and Miss Mary Keegan, English girls, who came here to accept bond from sympathizers. Miss Inez Burns and Miss Elizabeth Freeman, American girls, who went to England to fight for "the cause." Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont, Mrs. Lavinia Beck, Miss Sybil Wilbur, Miss Alberta de Hill, Miss Pola La Pollette, Miss Ida Grant and other American suffragist leaders sat with them.

Socialist Candidate is Spokesman.

Mrs. Pankhurst was finally introduced by Charina Edward Russell, Socialist candidate for mayor. The audience, the majority of them women, made a demonstration lasting two minutes. Mrs. Pankhurst spoke at length, declaring the work of militant suffragettes done and the immigrants cared for there far better than are the poor, alien and native, in Great Britain.

"I have been accustomed to pleading my own cause in England," she said. "I wanted to go to Washington and plead the cause there. I went to thank those who pleaded for me while I was in prison. I am glad that I do not thank the Washington authorities and do not think President Wilson has any hand in it. I do not would say: 'I did my duty.' I consider that I have been allowed to have offensive in high places who permit the placed of English suffragettes there."

Calls White Slavery Awful.

Mrs. Pankhurst discussed equal suffrage and white slavery. White slavery she characterized as "more awful even than organized slavery in the worst form ever was in the United States. In white slavery are slaves of every color and they are all of one sex."

CONCERNED OVER BRITAIN'S POLICY

ENGLAND'S ATTITUDE TOWARD MEXICO AROUSES UNITED STATES.

SYMPATHIZE WITH HUERTA

Sir Lionel Carden Does Not Like American Policy Regarding Provisional President—London Papers Discuss Situation.

Washington, Oct. 22.—Diplomatic exchanges between Ambassador Page and the British foreign office, with regard to Great Britain's attitude in Mexico, are likely to continue. Indications that Sir Lionel Carden, British minister to Mexico, does not hold views in sympathy with the American policy toward the Huerta government, caused concern in the Washington government, and while some official denies that they are not seeking European support at this time, it was made plain that they did not desire that any factor should be injected into the situation at present from Europe that would, in any way, impede the efforts of the United States to deal with the Mexican problem.

U-S. Wants Free Hand.

The administration takes the view that as the "nearest neighbor" to Mexico the United States should have a free hand in trying to bring about a pacification.

It is not unlikely, therefore, that the reported statement of the British minister that the United States did not understand conditions in Mexico will be the subject for further inquiry, with the possibility that the episode may bring out important developments. Official denials to Chancellor Ambassador Page's cablegram, but their dissatisfaction with the attitude of Great Britain is apparent.

Diplomatic circles took increased interest in the situation and many diplomats predicted that the outcome International fleet through the Panama canal when the waterway is opened in 1915.

Reason For English Attitude.

That Sir Lionel Carden is accurately representing the views of his government is the belief obtaining in diplomatic circles here. Underlying this apparent antagonism to American domination in the settlement of the Mexican problem, according to the interpretation here, there is not only a fear by British interests of an obstinate control of Mexico's oil fields, but a desire of the British government that this control be obtained in order to insure a steady supply of oil fuel for the British navy.

If Great Britain desires to have in Mexico a man who will oppose American interests Sir Lionel Carden is the choice. He has distinguished himself in his career as a Latin-American diplomat in the past by his intimate and consistent record for anti-Americanism.

Brothers of Madero Arrested.

Mexico City, Oct. 22.—Gustavo and Evaristo Madero, brothers of the late president, have been arrested and Monterey charged with complicity in a plot to turn over that city to revolutionists, according to dispatches printed in the newspaper here. The two brothers will be tried before cases pending by documents taken from federal rebels after a fight near Monterey.

STATE NEWS IN BRIEF

EACH SCHOOL CHILD COSTS $7 A YEAR

STATE AID FOR PUBLIC SCHOOLS MORE THAN $1,000,000— FUNDS INCREASING.

LEGISLATURE RAISED FUND

Manner of Distribution Explained and Sources of This Vast Revenue Is Shown in the Ensuing Article of Interest to Taxpayers.

St. Paul.—It costs the State of Minnesota approximately $7 annually for each child attending the public schools of the state.

Recently the October distribution of the current school fund amounting to $1,456,230 was made by Charles G. Schulz, superintendent of education. This is payable October 27.

Additional Appropriation.

In addition, the last Legislature appropriated $763,972.66 as state aid for high schools, graded and industrial schools. Soon there will be another distribution of something more than $500,000 to rural and consolidated schools. When this is completed the total will exceed the $2,000,000 mark sufficiently to make approximately $7 paid out for each of the 432,000 school children in the state.

The current school fund is derived from the permanent school fund interest-bearing securities and is distributed on a per capita basis, $2.50 for each pupil. Last year it amounted to $1,213,500.30 and next year it is expected that $1,500,000 will be available. Because of the rapid growth of the permanent school fund, derived from iron ore royalties and the sale of state land, the interest will reach the $8,000,000 mark by 1950.

Special Aids Voted.

Legislature also each year makes appropriations for special state aid derived from direct taxation. The sum of $763,972.66 available this year is apportioned as follows:

For departments in agriculture, economics and manual training $2,500

For departments in agriculture and either home economics or manual training 1,200

For training department for rural teachers, applicable only to high schools 1,000

The last Legislature also increased the annual aid to high schools from $1,750 to $2,200 and for graded schools from $500 to $750. This increase, however, does not apply to the present school year, but will be included in the distribution for aid in 1914. Graded schools maintaining two years' high school work receive $1,000; consolidated schools $1,500 for a four-department school, $1,000 for a three-department school, $750 for a school of two departments. A consolidated school also receives aid towards a new building and equipment of $1,500. Semi-graded schools receive $750 annual aid, rural schools, Class A $150, Class B $100, and Class C $75.

How It Is Apportioned.

Of the special aid to high, industrial and graded schools, St. Louis and Wright counties receive the most, $24,600 each. Despite the fact that 25 per cent of the taxes for this aid are raised in Ramsey and Hennepin counties the former gets but $12,200 and the latter $13,350. This is because these counties have but few of the type of schools entitled to the aid. Little Itasca county gets as much as Ramsey.

Loses Control; Car in River.

Brainerd.—Frank Andrews, while driving his father's automobile and carrying as passengers George W. Silvernail and two St. Paul tourists, lost control of his car and it dashed on the northeast Brainerd river bridge. The machine struck the railing and demolished a section of it. With the foot wheels over the brink, the car hung there and gave the men a chance to escape.

Kills Wolf That Attacked Him.

Bemidji.—The hide of a gray wolf that attacked August Becker, a farmer living near Lake Julia in Liberty township, netted him $7.50 at the county auditor's office. Four shots from a rifle and a double were necessary before the wolf was killed. Wolves are more numerous this year than they have been for several seasons.

Saved by Boy's Confession.

Bemidji.—Edmund P. Gould, former clerk in the Bemidji postoffice, who was arrested last July on a charge of stiling registered letters, and with strong circumstantial evidence against him probably would have gone to a federal prison but for the confession of Clayton Collard, a 16-year-old boy who carried the mail. He has just received an order from Washington attesting him and formally exonerating him from the charges which were preferred against him.

Albert Lea Manufacturing Company.

Albert Lea.—A company to be known as the Kiel Manufacturing company has completed its organization with a capital of $50,000. They will make washing machines and other household articles.

Janks Loses Private Car.

Crookston.—The private car of General Superintendent G. G. Janks of the lake division of the Great Northern was derailed and burned at Bena. Mr. Janks was on his way to Sherlin to hunt.

DOG IMITATES SUFFRAGETTES

Goes on Hunger Strike Like British Militants When Man He Adopts Is Locked Up.

Minneapolis.—This is a story of a dog that went on a hunger strike. It is also a story of a man the dog adopted showing his faithfulness and setting the whole police department on the hunt of the dog.

Hector is the dog and Frank Tretwick of St. Cloud, Minn., is the man. The man took a drop too much and was snagged into the East Side police station. The dog accompanied him and when his friend disappeared officward, Hector set up a howl that kept the policemen awake. Frank was fed in his cell and food was offered Hector in Lieutenant J. Quealey's office, but Hector would not eat. He would only howl.

When Frank was fined and it looked as if he would have to spend a few days in the workhouse, arrangements were made to have Hector cared for at the pound, but Frank paid his fine and asked for Hector.

The dog's howling had ceased, but the policemen were surprised when they discovered that Hector was not in the room where he had been locked. His had wriggled between the barrow bars and had gone to look for Frank.

Now the police have been instructed to find Hector and restore Frank to him.

WONDERFUL GROWTH SHOWN

Albert Lea Boasts Population of 11,437 from 6,192 in 1910.

Albert Lea.—The manager of the new directory for Albert Lea announces that the population at the present time is 11,437. This is the actual count by trained canvassers and not as an estimate based upon the usual manipulation of figures found by taking a multiple of 5. The canvass says such a house to house canvass would end the mania of over estimate. This gave Albert Lea proper, 10,918; North Albert Lea, 519, total 11,437.

The federal census in 1910 gave the poulation as 6,192.

The growth of Albert Lea the past three years has been nothing short of phenomenal. Scores upon scores of modern dwelling houses have been built until they extend past the city limits into the suburbs.

This year's building operations have broken all former records for rapid growth, and the indications are for a still better year in 1914.

Had not the scarcity of houses kept many families from moving to Albert Lea, the population would have reached the 15,000 mark.

NEIGHBORHOODS LIKE PLAN

School Rallies a Success at Bemidji and Saltrami County Will Follow Suit.

Bemidji.—So successful have been the neighborhood gatherings among farmers when assisted by faculty members of the Bemidji high school, that W. P. Dyer, superintendent of the city schools, has received fifteen requests from various communities in the southern half of Beltrami county for similar meetings.

Ten of these have been granted dedate dates. Tonight has been engaged by the Bascro school and Saturday the Rass Lake school will be the scene of entertainment.

Buena Vista, Wilton, the Hettle P. Smith school and the Grant Valley school are scheduled for Oct. 21, 22, 23, and 24, respectively. Helga township, the Liberty, Lone Pine and Hennepin counties the former gets but $12,200 and the latter $13,350. This is because these counties have but few of the type of schools entitled to the aid. Little Itasca county gets as much as Ramsey.

CROOKSTON GETS NEW PARK

Capt. M. R. Brown Gives Forty-Acre Tract Which May Be Added to City's System.

Crookston.—Crookston will soon have a substantial addition to its park system, according to a donation of a 40-acre tract in Jerome's addition, lying along the river bank. The new addition will come through the initiative of Captain M. R. Brown of Minneapolis, who was a pioneer resident of the city and expects to return here shortly.

The tract has been used for pasturage. Captain Brown in his new owner of an undivided one-half interest, and J. B. streeter a one-fourth interest, while Mrs. Mary Lake is the owner of the lots each an undivided one-eighth interest, acquired through tax title.

Captain Brown made his tender sully to the effect that the others would like also donate their shares, or that the city would acquire it, and that the entire tract would be used for park purposes.

IMPORTANT BEMIDJI MEETING

Development Association Will Hold Session There Dec. 4 and 5.

Crookston.—W. R. Meckenzie, secretary of the Northern Minnesota Development association, and a member of the state reclemation board, was in Warroad last week to inspect the twenty-acre tract which has been cleared there under the direction of the state. The work cost in the neighborhood of $25 an acre, and the tract is the seventh of twenty to be cleared upon which the work was done, and it will be ready to be seeded next spring.

Mr. Meckenzie is also advertising a meeting of the development association at Bemidji Dec. 4 and 5, when cooperation will be discussed in every form, in clearing lands, buying cattle and in road building. There will also be a concerted effort to secure a modification of the present homestead law in connection with the ceded Chippewa lands, so that, by paying $1.25 an acre, the equity of the Indians in the land, patent can be secured without residence.

Efforts will also be made to have the state improve the 500,000 acres said to be received from the federal government, build roads and ditches and add 640 acres to the area at which the land will be sold to settlers.

OLMSTEAD REASSESSMENTS

Moneys and Credits of County to Be Gone Over as Result of Order.

Rochester.—A reassessment of the moneys and credits in the city of Rochester, Stewartville and High Forest village, and several townships in Olmsted county has been ordered by the state tax commission, after a canvass of the returns of the assessment of the county.

According to the state board the communities in which the reassessment is ordered fell to show a sufficient sum in money and credits that would naturally be expected from these sections, and that there has been a scoring up of values to the dollar.

The state board has named A. W. Clason of this city to make the reassessment of Rochester, and Frank Dunnett of Kalmar and Daniel Drake of Dover for the country districts. The work will be started at once.

3 DIE IN MINE EXPLOSION

Two Others May Not Live as Result of Injuries Received in the Crosby at Nashwauk.

Nashwauk.—When three men were killed and two others probably fatally injured here at the Crosby mine on Wednesday the nature of the accident was kept secret. Today it was learned that the men were loading cars underground and that after placing a charge of dynamite remained their work. They were caught in the explosion which resulted and were buried by 200 tons of earth.

The injured who were removed to a Hibbing hospital were Andrew Jones and Nick Vervelich.

Superintendent J. A. Berber and Coroner A. Wrnch worked with a crew for hours before the men were reached.

Brainerd Phone War Hot.

Brainerd.—Officials of the Brainerd, from mayor to city clerk and all the aldermen, have been served with notice to appear in the district court on Nov. 4 and answer to the attempted ouster of mandamus sued out by the Minnesota Telephone company. Such order having been granted by Judge W. R. McClenahan. This adds another phase to the telephone war being waged by the Northwestern Telephone Exchange company and the Minnesota Telephone company, the latter having the backing of the City. State. The Minnesota company desires the city to approve its plans for the construction of its telephone exchange or to show cause why this hoe not been done.

Arrested at Jail Door.

Winona.—Otto von Schmidt was released from jail after having served thirty days for obtaining money under false pretenses by passing a bad check on a local saloonkeeper. Immediately upon being given his freedom he was rearrested on the charge of being a deserter from the United States army. It seems he deserted from the army in Colorado when he failed to return on App. 1 from a furlough which had been granted to him. Sheriff Parr will take him to the nearest army headquarters at Fort Snelling.

Pastor's Position at Stake.

Austin.—About 150 members of Lutheran congregations from Hartland and Manchester, Freeborn county, came here to appear in district court in the case involving the validity of the removal of Rev. Mr. Strande as pastor. A demurrer to the complaint of members of the congregation who oppose Strand was sustained by Judge Kingsley and they were allowed thirty days to amend their complaint so as to make the church corporation party to suit.

Winona.—Winonas poultrymen have incorporated as the Winona Poultry association. There are over 75 members. The officers are: President, P. C. Shute; vice president, H. W. Buswell; secretary-treasurer, A. G. Skinner.

Detroit.—The Merchants National bank will ship in two carloads of Holstein cattle to be sold to the farmers of Becker county at cost. Ground has been broken for a garage for Evans Brothers on Washington ave nue.

Most Graceful Mounting of Plumes

GOD ostrich feathers require the investment of more money than almost any other millinery trimming, but they last much longer. They are always in fashion and they stand cleaning and dying so that the life of a good feather extends over several years. A handsome pair of plumes is shown here. They are the only trimming required on a sharp, and it is a mistake to use any other with them. Notice how the ends of the plumes are turned in Rochester, and Frank Dunnett of Kalmar and Daniel Drake of Dover for the country districts. The work will be started at once.

SWEET POTATOES ARE QUITE PROFITABLE

Sweet Potato Farm in Delaware That Nets About $200 Per Acre.

(By C. S. SELLEN.)

Time was when it was generally believed that good sweet potatoes could only be grown in a certain section of New Jersey, and owing to this belief people are yet buying "Jersey Sweets," most of which are grown in Delaware, Virginia and other southern states.

The Jersey potatoes are of very fine quality, but those of Delaware, Maryland, Georgia, and some parts of Texas are almost if not quite, as good.

Climatic conditions do not appreciably influence the quality of sweet potatoes, that is, one very largely to soil and methods of culture. That potato requires a sandy soil, with very little clay in the first six inches. The soil should be rather compact, high, dry, and well-drained. It can be used for sweet potatoes for from six to ten years without any rotation, but where one has a chance to treat the second years the crop improves on the same land.

Climatic conditions do not appreciably influence the quality of sweet potatoes, that is due, very largely to soil and methods of culture. That potato requires a sandy soil, with very little clay in the first six inches. The soil should be rather compact, high, dry, and well-drained. It can be used for sweet potatoes for from six to ten years without any rotation, but where one has a chance to treat the second years the crop improves on the same land.

If the plot is clean we do not plow the land, but cut it up with the harrow three or four inches deep, thoroughly pulverizing and leveling it. In order to have the proper size, shallow preparation and culture must be observed.

We use slip-seed for bedding potatoes from which to grow plants, which is the first step in the culture. We select the best of the growing plants and set out about the latter part of July. Our potatoes grow from three to four inches long, and about one and a half inches in diameter.

To insure success in bedding they must be kept perfectly, and there must be no rotten ends or black spots. Care should be taken to cut the hotbed either with manure or fire heat, so as to raise the temperature of the soil to good summer heat. About three inches of good loam is placed in the bottom, the potatoes laid carefully on this and covered with three inches more of clean sand. When the plants are from four to six inches long above the sand they are ready to set out.

We plant in ridges three feet apart, four inches above the level of the land. To insure a full crop we plant between May 20 and June 10th. The plants are set 16 inches apart in the row. It is rather slow work planting by hand, but with a machine, a steady team of horses, a man to drive and two boys to place the plants, we can plant about 50,000 or five acres a day.

While the plants are young cultivation and hoeing should be very shallow, and just often enough to keep the soil clean and loose. If cultivated deeply the potatoes will be stringy, long and of poor quality. Then again, shallow cultivation permits the soil to dry out more quickly after a hard rain, and drouges is a very essential to quality that every effort should be made to insure it.

The only manure we use is a mineral fertilizer, applied in the row at the rate of 1,000 pounds per acre. This contains 3 per cent. nitrogen, 7 per cent. phosphoric acid, and 10 per cent. potash. We use find ground fish or fish scrap, nitrate of soda, acid phosphate, and sulphate of potash. We mix our own fertilizer.

The trace of soda is applied when the vines are from 6 to 20 inches long, at the rate of 200 pounds to the acre, and it is placed on the row near the plants. This gives the plants a quick start, causing the crop to set at once, and makes the roots of uniform size, with few cracked ones.

This, in connection with the mineral fertilizer and the high dry state of organic matter, we prevent the tendency sweet potatoes have of cutting all through, which is very detrimental to successful crop growing.

Proper handling is just as important as cultivation. We dig three acres in August we do not take the potatoes out of the ground any faster than we can sell them. When ready to sack and barns the exposure to the light and changes in temperature quickly ruin the product.

Proper grading is also important. We have three grades. The first are smaller the seconds are good, but of inferior shape, and the third are unfit for food, and used for stock feed.

PRODUCTIVITY OF SOIL MAINTAINED

Most Important Object of Green Manuring Is the Addition of Needed Humus.

(By R. G. WEATHERSTONE.)

Green manuring, or the plowing under of green crops, is one of the oldest methods employed to build up or increase the productivity of the soil. The effect of green manuring arises according to the original character of the soil, in general, sandy or gravelly soils are improved by it, and tend to become more retentive of moisture. Clayey soils are made more open and friable, so that they are less likely to puddle or bake, and are less subject to drouth. Peaty soils are also noticeably affected than others.

The most important object of green manuring is the addition of humus to the soil. Other things being equal, the best green manure is that which furnishes the largest amount of material which, when plowed in the soil, will decay and thus form humus. There are, however, additional ways in which such a crop may be beneficial.

Deep-rooted plants are decidedly preferable to shallow-rooted, because they penetrate into the subsoil. In this way not only is the soil mechanically, especially after the roots decay. Thus a crop of deep-rooted plants is a subsoiler. It is also supposed that such plants, especially when plowed under and decaying, will become filled with potash and phosphorus from the subsoil, the former being absorbed from within the reach of shallow rooted plants.

Leguminous plants are more valuable for green manuring than others, because they not only provide humus, but also have the ability to use the nitrogen of the air, which upon decaying they add to the soil. For this reason green manure crops should always be legumes if such are adapted to the particular locality where needed and can be sown at the time desired.

Cause of Dry Rot.

The dry rot of potatoes in storage is caused by a fungus. It may be controlled by dipping the tubers in a solution of one pint formalin in a barrel of water and leaving them immersed for two hours. They must be dried before being put away.

Bleaching the Early Celery.

Early celery may be bleached by wrapping paper about each plant or by placing boards along the plants. Dirt is apt to cause decay on early celery, although it is desirable to use it for the late crops.

Keeping Grain Land Busy.

The wasted land lying idle after the wheat, rye, oats, potatoes and corn are harvested is craving for something to produce. A good seeding of winter vetch, crimson or rape will improve the soil and have many pasturing.

EXCELLENT METHOD OF FILLING A SILO

There Is Greater Danger of Putting Up Silage Too Dry Rather Than Too Moist.

(By WALTER B. LEITZ.)

Corn is ready to put in the silage when the grain is in the dent and the husks and blades are broken with the thumb nail. At this stage, under normal conditions, the two or three bottom leaves will be dead and brown and the shuck will be turning yellow at the ends. The greatest danger of putting up silage too dry rather than too moist. With a silo of the staves should be tightened up to exclude the air and generally loosened a little each year as the silage settles. The inside wall of a concrete silo should be washed with a thin mixture of cement and water every two or three years. This fills the pores and keeps the air from entering.

It will take at least six teams to fill the average silo in a day's time. Corn should not be cut down too far or too low, as the stalks contain much of the sugar. Plenish filling is also apt to cause the growth of molds or weeds. This will rot and seal the top and prevent having to throw out the entire surface of the silage.

The silage should feel wet after it is put in the silo. If the corn is too mature when cut, and is therefore too dry, a stream of water from the hose may be run into the blower from the silo or in the mouth of the cutter. It is especially important that the silage be well tramped. The blower should be run a few minutes every morning in order to clear the atmosphere before any one enters the silo.

Barley for Hogs.

Barley makes a good feed for the hogs. The cheapest lot of pigs the writer has ever fattened on 100 pounds had barley as their main ration.

Guarding Against Plywood.

Prevent plowing deep to seed and avoid sowing the seed in grain and grass seeds. Frequent and thorough cultivation of the seed bed before sowing the seed will check growth in grain fields. Good plowing, thorough cultivation, with some hand-hoeing and pulling, will keep down weeds from cultivated crops. It does not give serious trouble in fields where crops are grown in a good rotation. It is most troublesome in gardens, but shallow cultivation and hoeing or pulling by hand will eradicate it.

BASKETS FOR THE HOME-MADE CANDIES EASY TO FASHION

NOW that it has become difficult to buy really good candy for Christmas paying an extravagant price, those who have how to make the delicious home-made candies will be busy indeed making the most palatable of gifts for friends who haven't time or ability to make them. It is too early to make up candies for the holidays, but one may prepare in advance pretty boxes or baskets in which to place them when they are done.

Secure at the tan coat store or wherever you can find them the bright little splint baskets, such as are pictured here. Cut and full out the strand of colored shavings that have been placed in them for ornament. Line, instead of the shavings a ribbon of the same width. A thin, inexpensive satin ribbon is just the right kind for this purpose. Tie the ribbon in a small bow at the front of the basket. Light green and light blue, or colors corresponding with those in the basket, are prettiest. Red and green are also. If the basket is of the natural wood or bamboo color.

Three little baskets may be filled with gold paint and made very attractive. After the candy has been eaten the basket will remain a pleasant reminder to the recipient of the donor's delicious Christmas gift.

Paraffine or tissue paper should be placed in them to protect them from the candy.

They will serve so many purposes later—these baskets.—Independent.

The provisional president of Mexico doesn't seem to be providing anything except a generous amount of trouble.

Since Mrs. Pankhurst is to refrain from "acting up" in this country the moving picture privileges won't be worth so much.

It is possible that after next Tuesday's election Red Lake Falls will be the only oasis in an arid region of considerable extent.

If the gasoline expense and the up-keep may be deducted from the amount of the income to be taxed it won't be so bad.

North America is now an island, but of such a size that Hobson may not express the fear that the Japanese navy is about to surround us.

If the immigration authorities will keep Jack Johnson out they may be forgiven for allowing Mrs. Pankhurst the freedom of the country temporarily.

It may be wrong to charge the woman's contest of the Minnesota Educational association with the presence of Mrs. Pankhurst in this country.

Tammany Murphy says he returned a $25000 campaign contribution. Perhaps it was accompanied by a demand for a contribution of a size to be acceptable.

Every little while there is launched what is called "the last word in battle skips." The ship builders like the dictionary makers seem to be very proficient in the coinage of new words.

Iverson's platform is said to have the right ring to it and Eberhart's platform is said to ring true. That's right, of course. All of them are going so ring the changes on "economy and efficiency" this time.

To accommodate the wearers of bobble skirts it has been necessary to make car steps lower, and if the threatened return of hoop-skirts should come it will be necessary to make them wider—the steps and the cars. Thus woman continues to exercise a great influence on commerce.

It has been clearly demonstrated that Sulzer is unfit to hold any public office, and the "governor" by his own statements confesses to other added evidence of that fact. But that is not saying that the Tammany "bounceur" whose "poaching" brought about his impeachment are more desirable citizens.

It cost Wahpeton $311 last month to pump water to its citizens. Breckenridge paid only $46 for similar service.—Breckenridge Telegram.

Which may be accounted for by the fact, "theoretically speaking," that Breckenridge people have the privilege of discriminating as to what they shall drink, while Wahpeton people may drink nothing but water.

Whether Honorable W. R. Lee again becomes a candidate for governor or not, it must be conceded that he is a man of principle and that he made a remarkable run in the last campaign against great odds.—Hazen Enterprise.

Right you are, Lee isn't afraid of the cars or of the prospect of standing up to take a licking.

Sulzer is being hauled and snubbed sadistically supported by many people who assume to stand for reform, for which attention there can be only one excuse with any logic, that he is less guilty than the master, Tammany Murphy, whose authority he formerly recognized. It is strange to what extent the boss wields the business will influence the judgment of otherwise sane people. Sulzer is probably no better than Murphy, only less capable and crafty.

Go to it, old chap, and don't confine your operations to New York. In the first place, it is a soul-damning sin to wear bird plumage, because it encourages the destruction of beautiful bird life; and in the second place, some of the cigrettes that fashion compels look just simply awful—like a cross between a country automobile off the bridges (Also they put a end crimp in the pay check.)

Doubled Order.

A salesman had taken a large order in the north of Scotland for a consignment of hair-mattresses and ordered to press upon the canny Scotch manager who has given him the order the purchase of woolen cigars.

"Now," he replied, "I must try to bribe a man. I couldna talk' thenselves if I am a member of the Kirk."

"But will you take them as a present?"

"I wouldna," said the Scot, "but—"

"Well, then," said the traveler, "suppose I sell you the cigars for a nominal sum—say sixpence?"

"Weel, in that case," replied the Scot, "since you press me, and no likin' to refuse an offer wad mean that I think I'll tak' two boxes."—New York Mail.

A New York lawyer tells of an Englishman who, by reason of certain legal complications, found it necessary to retain a distinguished attorney to represent her in the adjustment of her late husband's estate.

"You will," said the attorney, during the course of their consultation, "you will get your third out of the estate."

"Oh!" exclaimed the widow, aghast, "how can you say such a thing, with the fresh mound still fresh in his grave!"—Green Bag.

BOAT SERVICE FIGHT

To Secure Lower Rate on Shipments of Fayer Produce to the East.

An action of much importance to the dairy interests of the whole northwest is now pending before the Interstate Commerce Commission at Washington, to the result is hoped, of a saving in transportation costs of over three quarters of a million per year to the producers of butter and eggs and poultry.

The action, if successful, would require the boat lines operating on the Great Lakes to install refrigerator facilities for the transportation of butter, eggs, poultry and other perishable products from Duluth to Buffalo and other lake ports.

At present the boat lines refuse to furnish such facilities. The result is that all of the traffic moves all-rail at a rate of $1.05 per 100 lbs. from Duluth or the Twin Cities to New York city, whereas the rate on the boat lines for the same class of traffic is 25 cents from Duluth, a difference of 40 cents.

The case was brought by a Duluth company, but every owner of dairy herds or flocks of chickens, every co-operative creamery and private creamery will be interested in the outcome.

Seeing the prospects of Duluth becoming a great assembling center for butter and egg shipments by water and the possibility of great development in the northwest if the case is successful, the Traffic Commission of the Duluth Commercial club has joined the company in the prosecution of the case. The Commission recently won a signal victory in obtaining a reduction in the rail rates from the east to Duluth with consequent benefit to the Twin Cities.

On behalf of the producers of butter, eggs and poultry in Minnesota, the state warehouse commission and commissioner has intervened in the case, and undoubtedly many other interested parties will join in support of the action.

The territory which would be served by adequate cheap and refrigerated transportation on the Great Lakes includes Minnesota, North Dakota and sometimes even parts of northern Wisconsin. The territory does not consume its entire production of butter, eggs and poultry products, and fall 20 per cent of it is now shipped out of the territory. Of the shipments 75 per cent go to the big markets of the East, Buffalo, Philadelphia, New York, Pittsburg and other cities.

The return of boat lines to provide facilities for refrigerated transportation to-day may be traced to the fact that the package freight boats, which are the only ones which could be so equipped, are owned and controlled by the rail lines east of Chicago, which obtain the traffic at a higher rate in consequence of the water highway being closed to it.

A MOTHER'S RUSE

By HELOISE BRAYTON

"Amy," said Mrs. Stringfellow to her daughter, "Walter Barnard has been paying attention to you now for six months. If you were engaged I presume that you would tell me. But I wish to know surely whether you are or are not."

"I am not," replied Amy dolefully. "That evidently means that Walter hasn't spoken."

"I think he will, mamma."

"Not without the right to the point."

"Mamma, you wouldn't web me to tell him that? am expecting him to propose to me, would you?"

"Certainly not. That would not be the part of a girl. But a girl has her privileges, and one of them is to indicate to a young man paying her attention that she wishes him to discontinue doing so."

"But I don't."

Mrs. Stringfellow was naturally impatient and determined that she would pursue a little game of her own which might mean a great deal or might mean nothing.

Not long after this little dialogue Mrs. Stringfellow grasped that Amy should go away on a visit. Amy objected, not being willing to leave Walter even for a day, though she did not see him oftener than once a week. But the mother's prevailed, and Amy departed with fear and trembling that the man she wanted would during her absence fall into the toils of some other girl.

One day during Amy's absence Walter Barnard called upon her mother to say his respects and ask how her daughter was enjoying herself. He was ushered into the library, where he usually visited with Amy. On the table lay a till from a prominent dry goods store. It was so plainly exposed that the caller could not help seeing it. But he did not make himself acquainted with its contents till an unrolled package on a chair attracted his attention. It was white and of a delicate fabric. Near it was a box, in which some white gauzy substance so loosely rested that a part hung over the side. There was still another box with the cover on.

Barnard while waiting for Mrs. Stringfellow had nothing to occupy him, so his mind became fixed on these articles. He examined the fabric, and it seemed to him that there was about enough of it to make a dress. Then it occurred to him that the gauzy stuff might be intended for a bride's veil. Having gone thus far in his surmises, he was naturally curious to know what was in the covered box. He lifted the cover and saw that it was filled with orange blossoms.

Evidently some one was about to be married.

But who? There was only one single woman in the house, and that was Amy.

A terrible thought entered the young man's brain. Could it be possible that while he had been putting off his proposal some other man had come in and forestalled him? It meant place ahead of him! His heart seemed to stop beating. Perspiration stood out on his forehead.

He paced the floor till Mrs. Stringfellow came down. When she saw the dry goods she looked displeased, called a maid and directed her to a sharp boss to take them upstairs. Then she turned her attention to her visitor.

Barnard was too disconcerted to talk connectedly. He jumped from the subject of the weather to the crops abroad and from the news from abroad to the last fire and then quickly. Then he asked if Miss Stringfellow was enjoying her visit and was informed that she was having a delightful time. He asked when the young lady would return and his hostess informed him that certain events that had happened since her departure would necessarily set the time of her homecoming and did not say whether it would be headed. Once he got his question partly out, but Mrs. Stringfellow looked at him so coldly that he turned the question into something else. Finally he arose to go, stumbled against a chair's edge, sprained an open door, dropped his hat and stepped on it, finally getting out in great confusion.

That night he slept only a few hours and in the morning took an early train for the place where Amy Stringfellow was visiting. She was much surprised at seeing him and waited for him to declare the object of his coming.

"Are you going to be married?" he asked in a tone to warrant that if she were he was ready to kill the groom.

"No. Why do you ask?"

There was an embarrassed silence for a few moments, when he spoke again.

"Well, then, I wish to put in my claim for you.

"I don't want any more claims like this."

When Amy returned to her home her mother confessed her ruse. Had it failed she could not have been convicted of it.

A Poetic Match.

S. H. Hiser, the Chicago poet, wrote a poem, and Mendelssohn tuned it to music, and between them they won the thousand dollar prize offered by West Virginia for a state ode.

Wilbur D. Nesbit, another Chicago poet, was sitting out toward Evanston one night with Hiser and joshing Hiser about writing half a thousand dollars with a set of rimes like those, and Hiser proclaimed himself a natural born winner.

"You can't beat me," said Hiser.

"Any thing you write I can beat," replied Nesbit.

"That's a natural born one; but just to show you I'm not unduly puffed up, I'll match you to see who pays the car fare for everybody who gets on this car between this spot and your home street."

They matched, and Nesbit lost. It was late. Few people were aboard. The car proceeded for blocks, and nobody got aboard.

"Now I'm acquainted with any of the litchen?" asked Lytton.

"Oh, yes!" replied Lord Lytton. "I know several of them most intimately while at Eton—indeed, some intimately than I cared to."

"My lord," replied the lady, "you forget the Birches are relatives of mine."

And they cut me," said the viceroy, "but" and he smiled his wonted smile, "I have never been so humiliated to kiss the rod than I do now."

But to say, as Lytton did not see the point and told her husband his ex-colleagy had insulted her.

A Rude Awakening.

Somewhere in Connecticut there lives a man named J. Coolidge Hills. Many years ago he was disporting himself with a party of friends in a lively surf down at the Long Island shore. A young woman of the party was overwhelmed by an unexpected breaker and before she could be rescued suffered a fatal drowning.

"It wasn't so bad after the first fright," she said, "I seemed to lose consciousness entirely, and when I came to the bishop had seemed to give an address to a meeting of working-men, and a special feature of the meeting was that the men were asked to stand up at the words, in their working clothes. Most of them came straight from work, and they were highly indignant when the bishop announced as his text, 'Wash and be clean!'"

"Why do you ask?"

There was an embarrassed silence for a few moments, when he spoke again.

"Well, then, I wish to put in my claim for you.

"I don't want any more claims like this."

When Amy returned to her home her mother confessed her ruse. Had it failed she could not have been convicted of it.

Mendelssohn's Selection.

It is related of Mendelssohn at a public dinner at which ladies were present and where he was surrounded by a chorus, of aggressive women clamoring for his autograph, that he allowed himself to be victimized with good nature until finally a fleshy matron of mature years handed him her card. Whether with malice prepense or not it is not stated, but the composer wrote on the card the music and words from Haydn's "Creation:" "And God created great whales." This brought the autograph hunting to an end, and Mendelssohn was allowed to go on with his dinner.

A Misunderstood Jest.

Lord Lytton when viceroy of India was seated one day at dinner next to a lady whose name was Birch and who, though very good looking, was not overintelligent. Said she to his excellency:

SYNOPSIS.

George Anderson and wife are a remarkable couple living in the village of Clermont on the Hudson. Their home, which was handsome in the days when the Clermont aristocracy lived in it, is now a boarding house. Here the beautiful Helen Chatfield lives with her father, who has shortly before had the last case with the banks in the town. The hotel manager is Sweetwater. Mrs. Anderson is somewhat remarkable for the fact that, being childless, she is excited and not shocked. Clayton, an aged detective, and Sweetwater, his assistant, take up the case. Mr. Challoner tells of a letter he found in his mail containing a threat that Miss Chatfield would be murdered at exactly 12 o'clock that night. Mr. Challoner, who has signed his name Initials Only, is an inventor. Sweetwater tells the detectives that the letter was passed him with scorn when he offered her a drink. Sweetwater also tells of the arrival of the murderer at the boardinghouse in which some details were similar to Challoner's case. Mrs. Anderson tells of the arrival of some bachelor guests, one of whom was a hale fellow, well met, named Orlando Brotherson. He invites him and assists the inventor in his work. A girl sent by Sweetwater with a message to Miss Chatfield is murdered by Brotherson. He declares the detectives are not waiting for him. Sweetwater is unmasked by Brotherson, and declares he is a consummate actor. The discovery is made that Brotherson is the murderer. Sweetwater is found in search of the second "O," the name Forrester is found in the letters of the Initials Only, mentioned in the letters found in the room of the murdered girl. Brotherson, who is fabricating a new case, is the cause of Edith in his delirium. Sweetwater tells Challoner that Brotherson is the man he is looking for. Brotherson married Mrs. Anderson's sister Emma, who committed suicide with his brother. It develops that Forrester is Brotherson's real name. Sweetwater is sent out of Edith's room. Brotherson says: "The brother of his remains by Miss Forrester." Sweetwater tells Challoner that it was Brotherson in the car, as he can't put on another's clothes. Brotherson tells Mrs. Anderson that Sweetwater is a detective.

"Who's there?" he asked, imperiously and with more show of anger.

No answer, but another quiet knock.

"Speak! or go away from my door. No one has the right to intrude here. What is your name and business?"

With an outburst of wrath, which made the hanger ring, Orlando lifted his hand to take advantage of this appeal to his own fierce fashion from his own side of the door; but the impulse passed of fulfillment, and he let his arm fall again in a rush of self-control which it would have pained his worst enemy, even little Doris, to witness. As it reached his side, the knock sounded again.

If Wix too much. With so oath, Orlando reached for his key. But before fitting it into the lock, he cast a look behind him. The door was in plain sight, filling the central space from floor to roof. A single glance from a stranger's eye, and its principal secret would be known no longer. He must not run such a risk. Before he answered this call, he must drop the curtain he had rigged up against such emergencies as these. He had but to pull a cord and a wall full before his treasure, concealing it as effectually as no Eastern bride ever concealed behind her yashmak.

Stepping to the wall, he drew that cord, then with no impatient sigh, turned to the door.

Another quiet but insistent knock greeted him.

In no fury now, but with a vague sense of portent which gave an aspect of farewell to the one quiet glance he cast about the well-ordered room, he fitted the key in the lock, and slowly let it turn it.

"I ask you again your name and business," he shouted out in his most command. "Tell them or—" He meant to say "or I do not turn this key." But something withheld the words. He knew that it would perish in the utterance; that he could not carry it out. He would have to open the door now, response or no response. "Speak!" was the word with which he finished his dreamed.

A final knock.

Pulling a pistol from his pocket, with his left hand he turned the key with his right.

The door remained unopposed.

Stepping slowly back, he stared at the unpainted boards for a moment, then he spoke up quietly, almost contemptuously.

"Enter."

But the command passed unheeded; the latch was not raised, and only the slightest tap was heard.

With a bound he reached forward and pulled the door open. Then a great silence fell upon him and a rig. light ray of the grays and dusky purples faced his powerful frame.

The man confronting him from the darkness was Sweetwater.

CHAPTER XXXVI.

The Man Within and the Man Without.

An instant of silence, during which the two men eyed each other, then Sweetwater, with an ironical smile, directed towards the pistol, lightly remarked:

"Mr. Challoner and other men at the hotel are acquainted with your habits and await my return. I have come—here he cast a glowing look at the huge curtain cutting off the greater portion of the illicit interior—"by order for you my services, Mr. Brotherson. I have no other motive for this intrusion than to be of use. If you are interested in your invention, to the development of which I have already lent some aid, and can bring to the test you purpose a sympathetic help which you could hardly find in any other person living."

The silence which settled down at the completion of these words had a weight which made that of the present moment seem light and all athrob with sound. The man within had not yet caught his breath; the man without had his. In an instant which had its little to do with the direction of the weapon, into which he had thrust it. Then an owl hooted far away in the forest. And Orlando, slowly lowering his arm, asked in an oddly constrained tone:

"How long have you been in town?"

The answer cut clean through any further hoping he may have had.

"Ever since the day your brother was told the story of his grist mill-stone."

"Ah! still at your old tricks! I thought you had quit that business as unprofitable."

"I don't know. I never suspect quiet returns. Still, there was no fee in this one sometimes reaps unlooked-for profits."

The sneering gist fled of Orlando. Brotherson ached to hurl this fellow back into the heart of the midnight woods.

But they remained quiet—and he spoke instead:

"I have started the business. You will never resuscitate it through me."

Sweetwater smiled. There was no mirth in his smile though there was lightness in his tone as he said:

"I have let us go back to the matter in hand. You need a helper; where are you going to find one if you don't take me?"

He went from Brotherson's set lips. Never had he looked more desperate than in the one burning instant following the startling repetition of the detective's outrageous request. But as he noted that and saw the signs of composing him from the other side of the boardinghouse, he was swayed by his natural admiration of daring and his recent only week, and lost his threatening attitude. By the steamer one which Sweetwater secretly found it even harder to meet.

"You are a fool," was the sibilant remark he heard flung at him. "Do you want to play the part of murderer here and arrest me to mid air?"

"Mr. Brotherson, you understand me as little as I am supposed to understand you. Humble as my place is in society and I may add, in the department whose tolerants I serve, there are in me two men. One you know possibly well—the detective whose methods, only indifferently clever, show that he has very much to learn. Of the other—the workman acquainted with hammer and saw, but with some knowledge too of higher mechanics and the principles upon which great mechanical inventions depend, you know little, and must imagine much. I was playing the gawky when I helped you in the old house in Brooklyn. I was interested in your airship—Oh I recognized it for what it was, notwithstanding its oddity and lack of ostensible means for flying—but I was not caught in the whirl of his ideas; the idea by which you flouted his respect, and with very good reason too, to revolutionize the science of aviation. But since then I've been thinking it over, and am filled with your own hopes that either I must be put to the fielding and sailing of the one you have yourself constructed, or you to some share in the limits you have unconsciously given me, and make a car of my own."

Audacity often succeeds where subtler means fail. Orlando, with a sudden twist of his under lip, took hold of the detective's arm and drew him, silently and looking the door carefully behind him.

"Now," said he, "you tell me with your own lips what discovery, or make my ideas of your own available, or the production of a superior and propelling airship."

Sweetwater, who had been as violently wheeled about in entering the door as he stood with his back to the curtain concealing, sat and answered without hesitation:

"You have a device, entirely new as far as I can judge, by which this car can leap at once into space, hold its own to any direction, and alight again on its hunt till they turned white in the misty twilight.

"You see," came in easy tones from the stooping draughtsman, "I have an imagination which only needs a slight fillip from a mind like yours to send it in the desired direction. I shall not draw an exact reproduction of your idea, but I think you will see that I understand it very well. How's that to start?"

Brotherson looked and beetly drew back. He did not want the other to note his surprise.

"But that is a portion you never saw," he loudly declared.

"No, but I saw this," returned Sweetwater, working hastily on some curves, "and these gave me the fillip I mentioned. The rest came easily."

Brotherson, in dread of what he can get, threw his pistol to the other end of the shed.

"You know! You thief!" he furiously cried.

"How so?" asked Sweetwater smilingly, rising and looking him calmly in the face. "A thief is one who appropriates another's property, and, let us say, another man's ideas. I am a unprejudiced examining—yes, I've only shown you how easily I could do that. Mr. Brotherson, take me in as your assistant. I will be faithful to you, I swear it. I want to see that machine go up."

"For how many people have you drawn those lines?" thundered the in exorable voice.
